Metropolis and its Vicinity.

Arrival of Garibaldi.—The mail steamship Ripon, with Garibaldi and suite on board, arrived at Southampton on Sunday afternoon. About 4 o'clock Garibaldi landed, and, in spite of the cold rain which fell throughout the day, was received with immense enthusiasm by great crowds of spectators. Among them were the Duke of Sutherland, Mr. Seely, M.P., deputations from Bristol, London, Newcastle-on-Tyne, Worcester, and other parts of England, with gentlemen accredited to represent the Poles, Hungarians, and Italians on the occasion. The General was dressed in the plain uniform of the Italian Legion, and after a long discussion as to the persons to whom his first visit should be paid, he finally decided, at the urgent request of Mr. Seely, on accepting the invitation of the Mayor. Mr. Brinton, the Mayor, then went on board, and, addressing the General, said he was proud to welcome him to Southampton, and to feel sure that the welcome which he gave him officially was one which would be heartily repeated by not only his fellow-townsmen, but by all the people of England. Garibaldi replied by shaking the mayor warmly by the hand, and saying, "I am grateful to you for your kind reception, and thankfully accept your hospitality." The General then left the Ripon, and proceeded in an open carriage through the town to the Mayor's residence at East Park. Everywhere he was received in the streets with the most hearty enthusiasm, and, notwithstanding that it was Sunday, flags were hoisted in all directions. Before leaving the Ripon, Garibaldi gave to Mr. Negretti, a countryman of his, and an old friend, a small scrap of paper, on which he wrote in Italian, to the following effect:—

"Dear Friends,—I do not desire any political demonstration; above all, not to excite any agitation." "G. Garibaldi."

On the evening before arriving at Southampton the General was entertained by all the passengers on board the steamer at a banquet, and in replying to the toast of his health said that he owed his life to England, the country he regarded as the home of freedom and the hope of the slave in every part of the world. On Monday the people and corporation of Southampton presented him with an address of congratulation on his arrival in this country. At 11 o'clock Garibaldi left the Mayor's house in an open carriage and four, accompanied by the Mayor, and his son, Ricciotto. The other members of the corporation followed in their carriages, the whole cortége being preceded by the band of the 1st Hants Engineers playing the Garibaldi Hymn. The windows and even the housetops all along the route to the old Bar Gate Town Hall were thronged; the footways were densely crowded, and from all alike came one continuous cheer, which quite drowned the music of the band; while all the house fronts seemed rippled over with the flutter of waving handkerchiefs. Garibaldi, who wore the uniform of the Italian Legion, which he raised and commanded in Montevideo, seemed quite moved at the warmth of his welcome, and must have been thoroughly tired by the courteous efforts which he made to acknowledge the salutations he received on all sides. The old Town Hall was, of course, thronged in every part, and was made to hold on this occasion about double the number it was built to accommodate. Garibaldi's reception on entering it was almost overwhelming, as, leaning on his stick, he limped slowly along the narrow way kept clear for him to his seat on the right of the Mayor. When the enthusiasm had in some degree subsided, after repeated outbreaks, Mr. Brinton, the Mayor, addressed him in an appropriate speech, in which he assured him that the town of Southampton considered itself highly honoured in having been the first to welcome the noblest and most disinterested patriot of our age, whose name was a household word throughout all England; in the cottage, as in the mansion and the palace, the record of his noble deed was preserved, and his gallant conduct and heroic self-sacrifice was the theme of universal admiration. He concluded by saying amidst great applause, "I look upon you as a King among men—a King uncrowned; and when the day comes—and may it be long distant!—when your great mission on this earth is fulfilled, we trust and believe that hereafter you will wear a crown that is imperishable and one that will never fade." When quiet was restored, Garibaldi rose, and Mr. Deacon, the town clerk, read to him an address expressing the warmest admiration for his public and private character, and the earnest hope that his health would speedily be restored, and that, under the protection of that Divine Power who had preserved him through so many dangers and vicissitudes, his valuable life might long be spared to aid in the promotion of the great end to which it had hitherto been devoted. General Garibaldi then bent forward, and remained for some minutes bowing, in answer to the tumultuous applause with which he was greeted. He at last spoke a few words with evident deep feeling, but with so strong a foreign accent and symptoms of effort to overcome the difficulties of pronunciation that his delivery was remarkably slow, though at all times clear and distinct. He said:—

"It is not the first time that I have received proof of the sympathy of the English nation, and I have received those proofs not only in words, but deeds. I have seen that sympathy shown to me in many circonstances of my life, and very particularly in '60, when without the help of the English nation it would have been impossible to complete the deeds we did in Southern Italy. The English people provided for us in men and in arms and in money—they help all the needs and wants of the human family in their work for freedom. What they did and what they talked of us is worthy the eternal gratitude of the Italian people. To answer some of the words, noble and generous, of the Mayor, I will say to you that I did not sacrifice any part of my life; but I think I did something, and a very few part it was of my duty, and (placing his hand on his heart) of the duty of every man. I finish by giving my thanks to you for your generous sympathy and for your very kind and good welcome to me here to-day."

It is almost impossible to describe the enthusiasm with which these few remarks were greeted, though, unfortunately, the shouts of applause led so many to attempt to force their way into the hall that considerable confusion ensued, and it was some time before the business of the day could be continued. The thanks of the meeting were then given to the Mayor, and the proceedings terminated with cheers for Garibaldi's son, cheers for united Italy, for the late Mayor and the present, for Mr. Seely, and, in short, for all in any way connected with the reception or entertainment of the General. As Garibaldi left the hall there was a rush made to shake hands with him on the part of the visitors, which he at once good-humouredly responded to by stretching out his hand, and then at once there were so many claimants for this honour that his further progress was completely barred. It was some time before this rather tumultuous ceremony was over, and then the whole party re-entered their carriages and proceeded to the pier, where the Sapphire was waiting to convey the General to Cowes. Immense crowds thronged all parts of the pier and its approaches, and Garibaldi went on board the vessel with Mr. Seely amid such demonstrations of affection and respect as are seldom seen even in England. A salute of 15 guns was fired from the platform battery as the Sapphire moved down the Solent, but even this noise was almost drowned by the deafening cheers, which continued as long as Garibaldi could be distinguished standing at the stern of the vessel and waving his cap in reply. In the evening Mr. Grant Duff, M.P., joined the dinner party at Mr. Seely's. On Tuesday the Poet Laureate and Mrs. Tennyson arrived at Brooke House from Farringford. On Thursday Signor Mazzini, at the General's own request, arrived at Brooke House and had a long interview with Garibaldi. Guezzoni and Basso accompanied M. Mazzini. In the afternoon Garibaldi was entertained at a déjeûner by the Mayor and Corporation of Newport, who also presented him with an address. Garibaldi has declined the honour of a public banquet in Southampton, and will remain the guest of Mr. Seely till Monday morning, when he will start for London, reaching the metropolis at 2 in the afternoon. He will leave the train at the goods station at Nine Elms, and proceed thence by the Kennington and Westminster roads over Westminster Bridge to Stafford House, where he will remain for a week at least the guest of the Duke of Sutherland. At Nine Elms station a temporary platform will be erected, on which Garibaldi will receive the addresses of the working men of London, and arrangements have been made by which a large number of operatives selected from the various trades' unions will keep the line of route for the procession which will escort him to Stafford House. Among the organised bodies who will take part in the procession are most of the metropolitan trade societies, the Foresters, Odd Fellows, Old Friends, the temperance societies, Band of Hope Union, Sons of the Phœnix, the Working Men's Clubs, &c., in full regalia, accompanied by their bands and flags. The Freemasons have also expressed their intention to send a strong deputation. The bands of the Foresters, the 48th Middlesex Rifles (Havelocks), &c., will attend gratuitously. At a meeting of the Common Council on Thursday, it was resolved by an all but unanimous vote to present Garibaldi with the honorary freedom of the city in a casket of the value of 100 guineas. Some opposition had been announced on the ground that the General's visit to this country was for a political object, and that a subscription had been proposed to provide him with a million of muskets. On its being explained, however, that Garibaldi had no such object, and that the suggestion about the muskets was wholly repudiated by him, the opposition was withdrawn; and the only discussion that remained was as to the form in which the Corporation should do him honour. The presentation of the freedom will take place on as early a day as possible. The members of the Reform Club have resolved to invite General Garibaldi to a banquet at their club-house in Pall Mall during his stay in London. Upwards of 40 members of Parliament and other members of the Club, have already subscribed their names. The precise day is left for the General to appoint, in order that it may not interfere with any other arrangement.

Return of the Anglo-Chinese Squadron.—The Pekin gun boat, one of Captain Sherard Osborn's Chinese Squadron, arrived at Falmouth on Friday, in 54 days from the Cape. The Scout, China, and Tientsin, had left previously.

Experiments at Shoeburyness.—The long expected contest between the Whitworth and Armstrong systems of artillery commenced on Monday afternoon at Shoeburyness, in the presence of a special committee of military and scientific men, and a large number of noblemen and gentlemen interested in the subject. Sir William Armstrong is represented by three 12-pounder breech-loaders and three muzzle-loading shunt guns of the same calibre, and Mr. Whitworth by three muzzle-loaders of the same size. These nine guns are already on the ground, and three 70 pounder Armstrong breech-loaders, three 70-pounder Armstrong muzzle-loaders, and three 70-pounder Whitworth muzzle-loaders are on their way from Woolwich to Shoebury. The details of the trial are kept secret at present; but it is pretty well known that a minimum of 3000 rounds will be fired from each gun. The contest will be necessarily very tedious, and will extend over a period of two or three months, if not more. At first sight this seems to be an unnecessary expenditure of time and money, but the committee are desirous of testing these arms to their very utmost capacity, at every range, with every variety of projectile and against every kind of defence. They will also be tested with reference to the quickness with which they can be charged and fired. After the 3000 rounds have been fired, it is believed that the guns will be subjected to a series of proofs with gradually increasing charges of powder. The trial commenced on Monday with one each of the three descriptions of 12-pounders. Seven rounds of solid shot, three of dead segmental shells, and five of dead common shells were fired point blank, to test the exact range of each gun. Six rounds of solid shell were then fired at 1 degree of elevation, and the contest was prematurely stopped by a violent storm of rain and wind, which swept across the marshes from the south-west. On Tuesday the guns were tried at ranges successively of 200, 300, and 400 yards. In the nearer ranges the Whitworth gun appeared to the by-standers to have an advantage, which was recovered by the Armstrong muzzle-loading gun in the more distant firing. On Wednesday and Thursday the results obtained did not greatly differ from those of the day before. The practice of yesterday was expected to be attended by the Commander-in-Chief and the First Lord of the Admiralty.

Railways in the City.—A meeting of some of the leading bankers, merchants, and other principal citizens, was held on Monday at the house of Messrs. Rothschild, in New Court, St. Swithin's Lane, to confer as to the best mode of giving effect in the House of Commons to the objections entertained by the great mass of the citizens to the railway projects in contemplation, which are calculated seriously to affect their interests. Baron Rothschild was called to the chair, and Mr. Samuel Morley, Mr. Crawford, M.P., Mr. Tite, M.P., Sir M. Peto, M.P., Mr. John Abel Smith, M.P., Alderman Salomons, M.P., Mr. Gassiott and Major Snell, were present, with others. After some discussion it was resolved to support the petition adopted at the public meeting held at the London Tavern on the 4th ult., praying that legislation with respect to all railway schemes which propose entering the City of London shall be postponed until some of the large public works already sanctioned shall be further advanced, and time thus obtained for more mature consideration. It was also resolved to take advantage of the forms of the House in such a way as was likely to give the most practical effect to the views of the petitioners, and to obtain an interview with Lord Palmerston and interest him in their case previously to the petition being presented.

The Government Annuities Bill.—It is stated that Mr. Tidd Pratt, the Registrar-General of Friendly

Societies, will be appointed general manager of the insurance department of the office about to be created by Mr. Gladstone's Bill, and that the salary will be 5000*l.*, with the option of retaining his present appointment of registrar. Dr. Farr will be the actuary, at a salary of 2500*l.*, with power to retain his present office in the Registrar-General's department.

SIR MOSES MONTEFIORE'S MISSION.—At the Court of Common Council on Thursday, on the motion of Alderman Phillips, the thanks of the Court were tendered to Sir Moses Montefiore for the signal services rendered by him to the cause of humanity by the missions he had undertaken to various countries for the relief of persons oppressed for their religious convictions, and more especially by his journey to Morocco to solicit the Emperor to relieve his Jewish and Christian subjects from all civil and religious disabilities.

THE COLENSO FUND.—The fund for the defence of the Bishop of Natal now amounts to 2000*l.* The time has nearly elapsed at which the Bishop of Cape Town will formally declare the see vacant and apply to the colonial authorities at home to appoint Dr. Colenso's successor. Meanwhile measures are taking by the Bishop of Natal, acting under legal advice, to bring the proceedings of the Bishop of Cape Town before an English tribunal with as little delay as possible.

LOSS OF A CONFEDERATE STEAMER IN THE BRISTOL CHANNEL. — On Monday night the new steamer Matilda was totally wrecked on Lundy Island. She had left Cardiff in the afternoon with a cargo of steel, iron, and coal, which was currently reported to be intended for the Confederates, and is said to have been reported by the American Consul to his Government. About 11 o'clock the same night she struck upon Lundy Island, a thick fog being prevalent at the time, and the ship's compass 8° out. The crew only escaped with a few things, and the vessel now lies many feet under water. Among the persons who were on board, and have since arrived at Cardiff, is Major Pearson, who states that he belongs to the Confederate Artillery. The Matilda was built at Glasgow, at a cost of nearly 60,000*l.*, and her trial trip had been made from that port to Cardiff.

THE WRECK OF THE CITY OF NEW YORK.—For some days past nearly 300 men have been engaged on this vessel, but up to Thursday evening all attempts to raise her proved ineffective. They were to be renewed yesterday at high water.

THE GREAT EASTERN.—Messrs. Glass, Elliot, & Co., the contractors for the Atlantic cable, have engaged the great ship for the purpose of laying the cable between England and America. The ship will be handed over to the contractors on the 1st of May, and from that date they will pay all her expenses, including wages, victualling, insurance, &c.; and when the cable is laid, her proprietors are to receive 50,000*l.* in paid-up shares of the Atlantic Telegraph Company. Although Messrs. Glass, Elliot, & Co. take possession of the steamer on the 1st of May, it is not their intention to lay the cable across the Atlantic till next spring.

THE MERSEY RAMS.—It is understood that Mr. Hamel, of the Common Law Bar, has proceeded to Egypt to examine the Pasha on behalf of the Crown, and that Mr. John Fletcher, late of the firm of Messrs. Fletcher and Hull, accompanies him to act on behalf of the owners of the rams.

LODGING-HOUSES FOR THE LABOURING CLASSES.—The Court of Common Council, on the recommendation of their Committee for Improvements, have just authorised the expenditure of nearly 30,000*l.* in the erection of a number of improved dwellings for the labouring poor in Clerkenwell on the plan already successfully carried out by Mr. Alderman Waterlow in Finsbury. Acting under a power conferred upon them by the Clerkenwell Improvement Act, they contemplate the erection on a plot of vacant ground on the west side of Farringdon Road of three separate blocks of buildings, fronting Farringdon Road and Ray Street, at an estimated cost of 28,600*l.* Accommodation will thus be provided for 160 families, 80 of them having three rooms, and 80 having two rooms each, with all suitable conveniences. In the general arrangements every care will be taken to insure the domestic and family comfort of the occupants, and by having a direct access from the street to each set of rooms the privacy of distinct dwellings will be secured. The basements of the various blocks will be used for warehousing purposes, and the ground floors as shops. They are of opinion, however, that dwellings of this class should under no circumstances bear an appearance of exclusiveness, but should harmonise to some extent with the general character of the surrounding property. A design for the buildings has been approved by the Common Council, and the erection of them will be commenced forthwith.

BALLOON ASCENT FROM THE ROYAL ARSENAL.—Mr. Coxwell's large balloon having been fully inflated at the Royal Arsenal Gasworks, made another ascent from the establishment on Wednesday afternoon for scientific purposes. Mr. Glaisher, F.R.S., and Mr. Norris, who has accompanied him in some of his recent ascents with Mr. Coxwell, and a little goat, for experimental tests, were the only occupants of the car. It was intended to take a couple of pigeons to have been set loose on attaining the higher atmosphere, but they were not procured until after the departure of the balloon. The height ascended did not much exceed two miles. The balloon passed through a cloud a mile in thickness into brilliant sunshine, the atmosphere below being somewhat foggy. The aëronauts did not go beyond the reach of sounds from the ground. The goat did not manifest any symptoms of alarm, but remained quiet as if under a sense of perfect security. The balloon descended safely a little before dusk in the grounds of the Marquis of Camden, near Sevenoaks.

THE PUBLIC HEALTH. — The Registrar-General's Weekly Return states that the number of deaths registered in the week that ended Saturday, April 2, was 1679. The average number for the corresponding week of the ten years 1854-63, corrected for increase of population, was 1547. The present return is therefore 132 above the average. During the week the births of 1072 boys and 1081 girls, in all 2153 children, were registered in London. In the ten corresponding weeks of the years 1854-63 the average number was 2161.

BANBURY.—Mr. Henley, M.P., in reply to the request of the Banbury Association to support the movement for the Repeal of the Malt Tax, has written as follows:—"Six millions is a difficulty not easily surmounted, and I much doubt whether in the present state of foreign affairs there will be any chance of reducing our expenses; and, if not, I also much doubt, however the reduction of the malt tax duty may and would benefit us all as consumers, it it would be a gain to the landed interest to have a direct tax, which would mainly fall on them, substituted for so large an indirect tax. But whether I am right or wrong in this, the time is not, in my judgment, favourable for making a move at so large a branch of revenue."

CAMBRIDGE.—Mrs. Hunt, one of the old ladies who were so brutally attacked on the 28th February by a man, masked and armed with a formidable carving knife and a bludgeon, died on the 18th ult. A young man named George Morley Wallis, a distant connection of one of the ladies, was previously apprehended on suspicion, the evidence against him being of a strong circumstantial character. Eventually he was committed for trial on the charge of assault with intent to murder. In consequence of Mrs. Hunt's death, the magistrates on Monday re-opened the case, and, after sifting a voluminous mass of evidence, committed the prisoner on the capital charge of "Wilful Murder." The life of the second lady, Mrs. Walker, is still in danger.

DEWSBURY.—On Saturday night Joseph Broadhead, of Barnsley, a youth 17 years of age, under sentence of detention at the Calder Vale Reformatory, at Mirfield, made an attempt to murder Mrs. Johnson, the schoolmaster's wife, and her sister-in-law. It appears that he obtained access to the room where they were sitting, and having fastened the door, attacked them with a knife he held in his hand. Mrs. Johnson escaped by running upstairs, but Miss Johnson was severely stabbed in the side and shoulder before assistance could arrive. The lad is in custody, but there seems to be some doubt of his sanity.

DRIFFIELD.—A county meeting was held in this town on the 31st ult. to consider what steps should be taken to secure a lasting memorial to the late Sir Tatton Sykes, of Sledmere Castle. Lord Hotham, M.P., presided, and the meeting was addressed by Lord Middleton, Lord Londesborough, Lord Muncaster, the Hon. Admiral Duncombe and other gentlemen. Resolutions were unanimously adopted in favour of the proposed memorial, and a committee was appointed to collect the necessary subscriptions. The general feeling of the meeting was that either an obelisk or an hospital should be erected as the most suitable memorial.—The last of the men suspected of being the cause of the destructive Yorkshire fires during last winter, who is known as Lurcher Slenderman, has just been set at liberty by the magistrates, after various remands, for want of sufficient corroborative evidence of the implications made against him by John Sherwood, who is now under sentence of 15 years penal servitude. Another of the incendiaries is sentenced to 10 years penal servitude. Slenderman was bound over in his own recognisances of 50*l.* to appear when called on. In his address to the grand jury on Tuesday, the chairman of the East Riding Sessions congratulated them that the crime of incendiarism had been effectually suppressed, and the whole expense of detectives and prosecution had not cost the Riding more than 170*l.*

HEREFORD.—The execution of Thomas Watkins, who was found guilty at the recent assizes, of the murder of his wife at Hennor, near Leominster, took place on Tuesday in front of the county gaol. The prisoner made a full confession of his guilt, and expressed great contrition. The morning was very wet, and there was by no means a large number of spectators, all of whom behaved in a very orderly manner.

HULL.—Mr. Roebuck delivered a lecture in this town last week on the science of politics. He said he had been all his life in favour of an extension of the suffrage, but he owned that things had lately happened in America that frightened him. He was convinced, however, that the extension of the suffrage was only a question of time; and therefore he wanted to know how that extension was to be made safe and beneficial. The answer was, educate the people in the science of politics—teach them what government can and what it cannot do.

KILLINGWORTH.—A destructive accident occurred at Killingworth Colliery last week, while 100 men and boys were in the pit, and others were about to descend. The connecting rod between the engine and the fly-wheel employed in hauling the coals and men out of the pit broke, causing the fly-wheel to spin round with fearful velocity, and ultimately to break into ponderous fragments. The engine ran amain, and the cage, which was near the surface at the time, rushed down the shaft at a terrific rate, and, coming in contact with the other tub near the bottom of the pit, was smashed to atoms, the wire rope attached to them snapping like thread. In consequence of the accident in the engine-house the balance chain was drawn up over the sheaves, and fell crashing through the roof of the engine-house, causing a serious amount of damage. Considerable alarm was created with regard to the safety of the men and lads below, but they escaped without injury, and, as the pit is double-shafted, there was little difficulty in getting them out, and in six hours they were all at bank. If the pit had been, like that at Hartley, with but one exit, it might have been different. It will be some time before the pit is got to work again.

LIVERPOOL.—On Saturday night a murderous attack was made upon Mr. Rowe, a young surgeon residing in Pembroke Place, by Mr. Brice, a wine merchant, and an Irish farmer named Scott. It appears that Mr. Rowe and Mr. Brice had been paying their addresses to the same lady, a Miss Beatty of Bootle, who was engaged to marry Mr. Rowe, but in November last eloped with Mr. Brice, to whom she was married on the same day. On Saturday night Mr. Brice, as the lady's husband, proceeded with the Irishman to Mr. Rowe's house, and demanded back her letters. Mr. Rowe refused to give them up, on which Mr. Brice and the Irishman fastened the door and attacked him in his own parlour with such violence that the other inmates, hearing the cries for help, got a policeman to break open the door, when Mr. Rowe was found nearly strangled, and with one of his legs broken. The two men were taken into custody, but in the course of the night obtained bail upon application to the stipendiary magistrate. It was however, subsequently ascertained that the life of Mr. Rowe was in such imminent danger that it was necessary to take his depositions, upon which another magisterial order was issued authorising the apprehension of his assailants, which was effected a short time afterwards. Mr. Rowe is still in a precarious state, and it is said that if he survives his injuries he will remain an invalid for life.

MAIDSTONE.—An attempt is making to enclose Barming Heath, in the immediate neighbourhood of this town. As the heath has long been a favourite place for the recreation of the inhabitants, they are naturally unwilling to be shut out from what they have been accustomed to consider their own property, and a memorial is being extensively signed in the town to have the enclosure prevented.

SHIELDS.—Considerable excitement was caused in this port on Saturday by the receipt of a letter from the master of the brig Mountaineer, stating that his ship had been fired into by the Spaniards, and that one of his crew was killed. The brig, it appears, was passing down the Straits of Gibraltar, laden with Spanish grass from Malaga, and when opposite the Fort of Tarifla the Spaniards fired into her. The shot passed through her shrouds, knocked off both pump-heads, and, going through the port covering board, killed a seaman, who was painting on the port side. It is the custom of vessels passing down the Straits to salute this port by dropping their flags, and it has been no unusual thing where this has been neglected for vessels to be fired into by the fort, but this is the first instance of loss of life.

ORDER OF ST. PATRICK.—Lord Dufferin and Lord Lurgan were last week invested by the Lord-Lieutenant, in the Throne Room of Dublin Castle, with the insignia of the Order of St. Patrick, in the room of Lord Massareene and the Earl of Charlemont. The Dean of St. Patrick's was at the same time invested with the insignia of Registrar of the Order.

COUNTY CHAIRMANSHIPS.—The Earl of Carlisle has conferred the county chairmanships of Limerick and Kerry, the former vacant by the retirement of Mr. Tighe, Q.C., and the latter by the death of Mr. Crosbie, upon Mr. Charles Hare Hemphill, Q.C., and Mr. John O'Hagan, the first a Protestant and the second a Roman Catholic. Both appointments have given great satisfaction to the country.

THE PRINCE CONSORT MEMORIAL.—At the meeting of the Town Council on Monday a memorial was read from the stormy meeting lately held in the Rotunda, requesting the Council to reconsider its decision respecting the erection of the statue of the Prince Consort in College Green. The memorial was referred to a committee by a majority of 19 to 14.

EXECUTION AT CAVAN.—Bernard Caughey, a young man aged 27 was executed at Cavan on Monday, for the murder of his old master Peter Reilly. Only about 200 or 300 people, mostly young persons, witnessed the execution.

A GUNBOAT ASHORE.—On Sunday morning her Majesty's gunboat Magpie went ashore on Crab Island during a fog. She was immediately stripped of every thing moveable to lighten her, and was expected to got afloat with slight damage; but a heavy sea arising just as the preparations were completed, she was lifted further upon the rock, and at the latest dates was in great danger of breaking up.

Settlement of the Pampero Case.—It is understood that the case of the Pampero will not now go to jury trial, an arrangement having been made for its settlement. By this arrangement the owners have consented to a verdict being entered for the Crown, forfeiting the vessel on some one count of the information, to be selected by the owners; they making such explanatory statement on the subject as they may think desirable. It is provided, on the other hand, that the owners are to retain and trade with the vessel, but are not to sell it for two years except with the consent of the Crown; and that alterations are to be made in her structure. It is stated that the builders are no parties to the compromise, which provides for settling their claim and having it withdrawn from the proceedings.

The Church of St. Mary the Virgin, at Aberdeen.—The "solemn blessing and opening" of this church took place last week. The church was well filled during the services, in which a great number of clergymen from various places (many of them from England) took part. It was at first announced that St. Mary's would be opened by the Bishop of the diocese; but a few days previously Bishop Suther intimated that unless the crucifix and other things that had been put up in the church were taken down, and the use of strange vestments dispensed with, he would not officiate at the opening. This request not being complied with, the Bishop did not officiate at the ceremony. The Rev. Mr. Lee, through whose exertions mainly the church has been built, intended to join the Episcopal Church of Scotland; but from the refusal of the Bishop to sanction what he has done, this junction cannot take place, and the matter will again be taken into the Church Courts.

House of Lords Appeals.—The Alexandra Case.—On Wednesday the House gave judgment in the case of the Alexandra. The judgment turned not on the great international questions involved in the appeal, but upon the simple technical point as to the proper meaning of the word "practice" as used in certain sections of the Queen's Remembrancer's Act, in other words on the preliminary question as to the power of the Court of Exchequer to make the rules under which the case was taken before the Exchequer Chamber and then to the House of Lords. There were six lords present, four of whom, the Lord Chancellor, Lords St. Leonards, Chelmsford and Kingsdown, upheld the judgment of the Exchequer Chamber, which dismissed the appeal from the Court below, and two, Lords Cranworth and Wensleydale, were for reversing that judgment. The result is that the decision of the Court of Exchequer stands. The appeal was therefore dismissed with costs, and the owners of the Alexandra are now at liberty to proceed with the construction of the vessel, or to dispose of her in her present state.

The Yelverton Case.—The appeal in this case was brought before the House of Lords on Thursday in the form of a petition by Mrs. Yelverton praying for an order on Major Yelverton to pay her 500*l.* to enable her to defend her interests in the appeal. The Lord Chancellor was of opinion that for the present Mrs. Yelverton was entitled to the status and rights of Major Yelverton's wife. The report of the committee would therefore be that Major Yelverton should pay her 150*l.*, and that her case should be lodged in three weeks, which would insure the cause being disposed of this session.

Obituary.

Admiral Clowes died on the 31st ult., at Upton, near Slough. He was born at Wingham, Kent, in 1787, and entered the navy in 1801. After serving in several actions with the Boulogne flotilla, he was present at the capture of the Cape and Monte Video in 1806, and the operations against Copenhagen. He commended a gunboat in the Walcheren expedition in 1809, and after becoming a lieutenant he served on the North American and Irish stations. He next served as a commander in the Mediterranean, and after attaining post rank in 1823, he served in the Levant during the hostilities between the Turks and the Greeks. He became a retired rear admiral in 1853; vice admiral in 1858; and admiral in 1863.

Alderman Neild, of Manchester, died suddenly on Monday in one of the committee-rooms of the corporation, at the Town Hall of that city, in his 74th year. He had attended to take part in a meeting of the Watch Committee, of which he was the chairman, and was standing before the fire, about 12 o'clock, waiting for business to commence, when he suddenly dropped upon the floor, and died almost immediately. An inquest was held in the afternoon, when it was stated that the cause of death was the rupture of a blood-vessel either of the heart or brain. Mr. Neild had been connected with the corporation from its origin, and was associated with Mr. Cobden, about 26 years ago, in the movement which led to the granting of a charter to Manchester, the first charter of incorporation granted under the Municipal Corporations Act.

Colonel Charles Bingham, Deputy Adjutant-General, died on Wednesday evening at Brighton, after a short illness. He had particularly applied himself to Staff duties, and his industry and knowledge of the details of his arm of the service rendered him so valuable a public servant, that his premature death is considered to be a great loss at headquarters. For six years he held the post of Brigade-Major at Woolwich, and was afterwards appointed Assistant Adjutant-General of the Royal Artillery. He was appointed Deputy Adjutant-General in 1858.

Mr. T. P. Cooke, the well-known actor, died on the 4th inst. at the house of his son-in-law, Mr. Hugh Cumming, in Thurloe Square, in his 78th year. He was one of the last representatives of the old school of British actors, and was born in Marylebone in 1786. Entering the navy he served under Nelson at the bombardment of Copenhagen, for which he received a medal. His first appearance on the stage took place at the Royalty Theatre, in January, 1804, and for many years he was recognised as the best theatrical type of a British seaman.

Mr. Joseph Kirke, late of Brompton Park Lane, Old Brompton, Middlesex, died on the 26th ult, in the 96th year of his age. He was much respected, and well known years and years ago as a nurseryman who possessed excellent collections of the best kinds of fruit trees. We remember him in Norfolk in 1817, with his new fruits, seeking for orders. He kept the different sorts as dwarfs, in a bearing state, in order that persons might see the fruit on the trees; and he was a frequent exhibitor of specimens of Apples and Pears at the Meetings held at the Rooms of the Horticultural Society, from the year 1816 till he gave up his nursery some 20 years ago. He had then arrived at a great age; and having been little heard of since, most people who knew him did not suppose till very recently that he was still alive. Loudon noted his nursery for its antiquity, the ground being in part surrounded by the walls of Cromwell's garden; but of this, as of all the other nurseries once so extensive in that neighbourhood, scarcely a trace remains.

METROPOLITAN CATTLE MARKET.

Monday, April 4.

We have a larger number of Beasts than on Monday last, but it is not excessive for the season, the falling off last week being on account of the holidays. Trade is dull, but prices are about the same as of late. The supply of Sheep is good, we have also a fair demand, but cannot quote higher. Good Lambs and Calves are still selling dear. From Germany and Holland there are 725 Beasts, 1340 Sheep, and 124 Calves; from Scotland, 230 Beasts; from Ireland, 90; and 2970 from Norfolk and Suffolk.

MARK LANE.—Monday, April 4.

The supply of Wheat from Essex and Kent to this morning's market was very small, and disposed of at the terms of this day se'nnight; excepting a small retail demand for Russian, foreign Wheat was neglected, and very unsaleable even at some reduction in price. For Barley of all descriptions and Beans there was more inquiry at last week's rates. Peas were unaltered in value. The Oat trade was firm at an advance of 6d., and in some instances 1s. per qr. upon the finest qualities. For Flour there was but little inquiry.

Friday, April 8

The weather since Monday has been unsettled and rough, and on the 5th rain and sleet fell during the day. The great dulness of the Wheat trade remains undisturbed, and prices continue to tend downwards. Barley and Oats have been in better request, and the latter have somewhat recovered the late decline. No noticeable difference has occurred in the value of Beans and Peas. Flour continues to be neglected, and in some markets is again quoted lower. Since Friday last 14 vessels have been reported off the coast. Only a limited number of floating cargoes have changed hands, there is very little demand for any description of grain, and no change in prices has to be quoted. Linseed and Cottonseed, however, continue in request and advancing. Paris, April 7.—Flour: Prices have remained unaltered; there is very little inquiry for Flour on the spot, but a little better demand for future delivery. The six marks for delivery this month are quoted equal to 33s. per 280 lbs. The present stock of Flour is estimated at 15,400 cwt. Holders of Wheat, after asking higher rates gave way at the end of yesterday's market, and prices close about the same as last week; the transactions have not been extensive. The arrivals of foreign Oats and Barley this week are good, of all other grain and Flour small. The attendance was very limited, and Wheat of all kinds a restricted retail sale at Monday's prices. Barley, Beans, and Peas are steady in value. The Oat trade is heavy, and prices rather lower.

LIVERPOOL, April 5.—We have had a fair attendance of both millers and dealers at this morning's Corn Exchange, and Wheat attracting rather a better inquiry than of late, sellers were enabled to support the quotations of last market day; fine ambers at from 8s. 2d. to 8s. 3d. are the qualities most saleable. Flour neglected and rather lower to sell. A fair amount of business resulted in Indian Corn at a shade under previous rates. Oats and Oatmeal are again the turn cheaper. Beans fully as dear. Peas and Barley nominally as last quoted. The market closes with a tendency to firmness.

FRIDAY, April 8.—There was a fair attendance at market. The Wheat trade was quiet, and prices rather easier. Flour unchanged. Indian Corn dull. Beans, Oats and Oatmeal unchanged.

GRAY'S OVAL TUBULAR BOILER.

INTERNATIONAL EXHIBITION, Class IX., No. 2119.

Mr. GRAY begs to call the attention of the Nobility, Gentry, Nurserymen, Gardeners, &c., to his acknowledged by practical judges to be a great improvement on every form of Tubular Boiler yet introduced. It has proved itself superior to all other Boilers for quickness of action and economy of Fuel, doing its work with one-third less the amount required by any other.

Extract from Report in Gardeners' Chronicle of International Exhibition, May 24, page 476.

"The upright form of Boiler is usually made on a circular plan, but the oval form given to Mr. GRAY'S variety of it is said to be preferable in consequence of its bringing the tubes in closer contact with the fire. The usual form of a furnace being a parallelogram rather than a square, it seems feasible that the Boilers on the oval plan should bring the tubes more completely within range of the burning fuel; and this being so, the change, though a slight one, is no doubt an improvement."

They are made of all sizes, which, with prices, may be had on application.

The Furnishing of Bed Rooms.

HEAL AND SON have observed for some time that it would be advantageous to their Customers to see a much larger selection of BED-ROOM FURNITURE than is usually displayed, and that to judge properly of the style and effect of the different descriptions of Furniture, it is necessary that each description should be placed in separate rooms. They have therefore erected large and additional Show Rooms, by which they are enabled not only to extend their show of Iron, Brass and Wood Bedsteads, and Bed Room Furniture, beyond what they believe has ever been attempted, but also to provide several small rooms for the purpose of keeping complete suites of Bed Room Furniture in the different styles.

Japanned Deal Goods may be seen in complete suites of five or six different colours, some of them light and ornamental, and others of a plainer description. Suites of Stained Deal Gothic Furniture, Polished Deal, Oak, and Walnut, are also set apart in separate rooms, so that customers are able to see the effect as it would appear in their own rooms. A Suite of very superior Gothic Oak Furniture will generally be kept in stock, and from time to time new and select Furniture in various woods will be added.

Bed Furnitures are fitted to the Bedsteads in large numbers, so that a complete assortment may be seen, and the effect of any particular pattern ascertained as it would appear on the Bedstead.

A very large stock of Bedding (HEAL & SON'S original trade) is placed on the Bedsteads.

The stock of Mahogany Goods for the better Bed Rooms, and Japanned Goods for plain and Servants' use, is very greatly increased. The entire Stock is arranged in eight rooms, six galleries (each 120 feet long), and two large ground floors, the whole forming as complete an assortment of Bed Room Furniture as they think can possibly be desired.

Every attention is paid to the manufacture of the Cabinet work, and they have just erected large Workshops on the premises for this purpose, that the manufacture may be under their own immediate care.

Their Bedding trade receives their constant and personal attention, every article being made on the premises.

They particularly call attention to their Patent Spring Mattress, the Sommier Elastique Portatif. It is portable, durable, and elastic, and lower in price than the old Spring Mattress.

News of the Week.

In the House of Lords on Monday Lord Stratheden moved resolutions to the effect that if Denmark had been more decidedly supported by her Majesty's Government, the bloodshed and other evils occasioned by the war in Denmark might have been prevented; and that a Conference, in order to lead to a practical result, ought to be accompanied by such steps as might convince the Powers of Europe that her Majesty's Government adhered to the Treaties in which the Duchy of Schleswig had been guaranteed to Denmark by Great Britain. After a long discussion, in which the Duke of Argyll, Earl Grey, Earl Russell, the Earl of Derby, Lord Wodehouse, and Earl Granville took part, the motion was withdrawn. On Tuesday the Punishment of Rape Bill was read a second time, and the Charitable Assurance Bill passed through Committee. The Earl of Carnarvon called attention to the capricious administration of the Home Office in matters connected with the punishment of death, and moved for papers on the subject. The Lord Chancellor said it was impossible to administer the laws relating to capital punishments in a manner differently from that which had been adopted, and if their lordships wanted a change they should direct their attention to the condition of the law upon the subject, with a view of applying a remedy. After a short discussion the motion was withdrawn. On Thursday the Punishment of Rape Bill passed through committee, with an amendment moved by Lord Wensleydale, rendering the measure compulsory instead of optional. Earl Granville, in reply to Lord Redesdale, said that the Government did not intend to propose any amendment to the Highway Act during the present session.

In the Commons on Friday, Mr. Newdegate moved for a Select Committee to inquire into the allegations contained in the petition of Mr. Alfred Smee relative to the Burial Ground of the Oratorians at Sydenham, and into the existence, increase, and nature of the conventual and monastic institutions in England, Wales, and Scotland. Sir G. Grey opposed the motion, which was negatived on a division by 113 to 80. Mr. Moffatt obtained a Select Committee to inquire into the working of the new Bankruptcy Act. Mr. DILLWYN asked if the Government had received any authentic information respecting the bombardment of Sonderborg, and suggested that the Channel fleet should be sent to the Baltic in aid of Denmark if the bombardment of that town without notice should be confirmed. Mr. OSBORNE asked for information respecting the Conference, and expressed his opinion that it would be as futile as the attempt of the Government to preserve the peace of Northern Europe. Lord PALMERSTON in reply said that the object of the Conference, the meeting of which had been postponed to the 20th inst., was to restore peace and uphold the integrity of Denmark. With regard to the bombardment of Sonderborg, the Government had not yet received an answer from Berlin, but he feared that the facts were as stated in the telegram. The Warehousing of British Spirits Bill passed through committee. The Life Annuities and Life Assurances Bill was read a second time. On Monday on the order for resuming the adjourned debate on the Government Annuities Bill, it was agreed after some discussion to send the Bill to a Select Committee, on the understanding that its form, and not its principle, should be inquired into. The House then went into Committee of Supply on the Army Estimates, and agreed to several of the votes. On Tuesday Captain JERVIS moved that the House, having, by Acts of Parliament, guaranteed to the officers of the late East India Company's Service that their pay, pensions, allowances, promotions, &c., should be secured to them, had learnt with regret, from the report of the Royal Commission, that in certain cases this guarantee had been departed from, and was of opinion that full and speedy reparation should be made. Sir C. WOOD said that the Government were considering a scheme, founded upon the report of the commission, the recommendations of which would be carried out in their integrity. Captain JERVIS expressed himself satisfied with this assurance, and withdrew the motion. Lord R. CECIL moved, that the mutilation of the reports of the Inspectors of Schools, and the exclusion from them of statements and opinions adverse to the educational views entertained by the Committee of Council, while matter favourable to them was admitted, were violations of the understanding under which the appointment of the inspectors was originally sanctioned by Parliament, and tended to destroy the value of their reports. Mr. LOWE defended the course which had been pursued by the Department of Education, and said that the facts relied upon for the motion were untrue, and the opinion pronounced upon them absurd. After a short debate the House divided, when the motion was carried against the Government by a majority of eight, the numbers being 101 to 93. Mr. D. GRIFFITH obtained leave to bring in a Bill to afford shareholders in Joint-Stock Companies facilities for voting by means of voting papers. Mr. DILLWYN called attention to the insufficiency and inconvenience of the temporary Museum for Inventions at South Kensington, when the House was counted out. On Wednesday Mr. LOCKE KING moved the second reading of the County Franchise Bill, the object of which was to extend the right of voting in counties to 10*l*. occupiers. Mr. A. SMITH moved as an amendment the previous question. On a division there were for the second reading, 227; for the previous question, 254. The Bill was therefore lost by a majority of 27. On the order for going into committee on the Trespass (Ireland) Bill, Mr. BAGWELL moved as an amendment that the Bill be committed that day six months. On a division the amendment was negatived by 158 to 45. The House then went into committee pro formâ, and immediately resumed. The Registration of County Voters (Ireland) Bill passed through committee. On Thursday, on the order for going into Committee of Ways and Means, Colonel BARTTELOT moved that the consideration of the duties on sugar be postponed until the House had the opportunity of considering the expediency of the reduction of the duty on malt. After a long discussion the motion was negatived by a majority of 248, the numbers being 347 to 99. The House then went into Committee of Ways and Means, and agreed to all the resolutions of the CHANCELLOR of the EXCHEQUER founded upon the Budget, except that relating to the Fire Insurance Duty.

From the seat of war in the North we learn that the bombardment of Düppel and Sönderborg by the Prussians is still continued with great energy, and that a general assault is expected to be made in a few days. The Danish position however at present remains intact, and it is announced that it will be defended to the last extremity.

On Thursday, at the sitting of the Federal Diet, the report of the Committee recommending that the Diet should send a representative to the London Conference, was agreed to by a large majority, and Baron VON BEUST was almost unanimously elected Plenipotentiary to the Conference.

The Mexican question is at length settled. The Archduke MAXIMILIAN has formally accepted the crown of Mexico, and left Miramar for his new Empire on Thursday. A telegram from Vienna states that the renunciation by the Emperor MAXIMILIAN of the right of the succession to the Austrian Throne is unconditional, and does not depend upon the stability of the Government in Mexico.

Accounts from the United States inform us that the Confederate cavalry, under General FORREST, estimated at 5000 strong, has captured, burned, and sacked Paducah and Union City, in Kentucky, but was subsequently repulsed at Fort Blow, and compelled to retreat towards Columbus. Admiral PORTER's Federal expedition from Vicksburg has captured Fort de Russy, on the Red River, and has since occupied Alexandria without opposition. It is reported that General MEADE will be removed from the command of the Army of the Potomac, and that General GRANT will appoint Generals M'CLELLAN and FREMONT to active service.

Home News.

On Friday morning the Queen, accompanied by Princess Helena, walked and drove in the grounds. On Saturday morning the Queen, accompanied by Princess Helena and Princess Louisa, came to London, and in the afternoon her Majesty held a Court at Buckingham Palace for the reception of the Corps Diplomatique and the wives of the Ambassadors and Ministers and Ministers who had been invited. Her Majesty was accompanied by the King of the Belgians and by the Princess Helena, Princess Louisa, and Prince Arthur, and was attended by the Earl and Countess Russell, and the principal members of her Majesty's Household. The Queen wore a black silk dress, covered with deep black crape, and edged with jet gimp; a cap of white crape lisse in the style of the cap of Mary Queen of Scots, with diamonds, and a long white crape lisse veil attached to it. Her Majesty also wore the Riband, Star, and Badge of the Garter, a diamond necklace and large cross, containing the Prince Consort's miniature, and an opal brooch set in diamonds. The Court being in mourning, the ladies who attended the Reception were attired in full-dress mourning costume without trains. The gentlemen were in full dress, with crape on the left arm. The Queen, accompanied by the King of the Belgians and Princess Helena, left Buckingham Palace soon after 5 o'clock and returned to Windsor. Princess Louisa remained in town, and attended the performance at the Adelphi Theatre, returning to the Castle at night. Prince Alfred arrived at the Castle at night from Holyrood Palace. On Thursday, being the seventh birthday of the Princess Beatrice, the youngest member of her Majesty's family, the event was celebrated in Windsor with the usual honours. In the morning the Queen, accompanied by Princess Helena, walked and drove in the grounds. In the evening Prince Alfred, Princess Helena, and Princess Louisa came to town and attended the performance at Drury Lane Theatre.

THE QUEEN'S NEXT COURT.—The Court announced to take place at Buckingham Palace on Wednesday last, at 3 o'clock, was postponed on Monday to this day (Saturday) at the same hour.

THE PRINCE AND PRINCESS OF WALES continue at Sandringham. On Wednesday the 6th inst., their Royal Highnesses rode on horseback. Mr. Wood and Dr. Sieveking, physician to her Royal Highness, arrived on a visit. On Thursday the Prince rode out on horseback, and the Princess took a carriage drive to West Newton. On Friday their Royal Highnesses went out with Mr. Bircham's hariers. The meet was at Flitcham Abbey. The Prince and Princess rode well after the hounds, and the Princess especially excited the admiration of the field by the daring way in which she took the line. On Saturday their Royal Highnesses walked in the grounds, and afterwards rode out. On Sunday morning the Prince and Princess attended Divine service at Sandringham Church. The Rev. G. B. Moxon officiated. On Monday the Prince and Princess again joined Mr. Bircham's hariers, the meet being at Ashiorcken. It is believed that their Royal Highnesses will return to town during the last week in April. The Vice-Chancellor of Cambridge has received an official intimation that the Prince and Princess will visit the University of Cambridge in the week ending the 18th of June.

PRINCE ALFRED.—On Thursday the 7th the Prince paid a visit to Mr. Fletcher of Saltoun, and dined with the Solicitor General in the evening. On Friday his Royal Highness attended the performance of the "Messiah" in the Music Hall, and on Saturday morning left Edinburgh for Windsor, where he arrived on the same night.

THE DUKE AUGUST OF SAXE-COBURG GOTHA arrived at Dover on Sunday morning from Calais, and left by the afternoon mail train for London and Esher.

THE CABINET.—A Cabinet Council was held on Saturday at the official residence of the First Lord of the Treasury in Downing Street.

MINISTERIAL MOVEMENTS.—Mr. Lowe, the Vice-President of the Committee of Council on Education, is reported to have tendered his resignation in consequence of the vote of Tuesday night.

THE ADMIRALTY.—The Lordship of the Admiralty vacant by the resignation of Mr. Stansfeld, has been offered to Mr. Baxter, M.P. for Montrose, but declined on account of his business engagements not enabling him to undertake the duties. The office has now been offered to Mr. Childers, M.P. for Pontefract, and accepted.

DIPLOMATIC MISSION.—The Earl of Clarendon has left London this week for Paris on a private mission to the Imperial Court.

ORDER OF THE GARTER.—The vacant Garter will, it is believed, be bestowed upon the Duke of Sutherland.

PARLIAMENTARY MOVEMENTS.—Mr. Cardwell was re-elected for Oxford on Saturday without opposition. The Lancaster election terminated on Wednesday in the return of Mr. Fenwick, the Liberal candidate, by a majority of 157 over Mr. Saunders, the numbers being 682 to 525. At a meeting of the electors of Dunfermline on Wednesday, Captain Thomson, the Conservative candidate, announced his retirement from the contest. Mr. Osman Ricardo has announced his intention to retire from Worcester at the end of the present Parliament, and Mr. Sherriff, mayor of the city, and late manager of the West Midland Railway, has accepted an invitation to become a candidate. The Barnstaple election committee met on Thursday. After the case had been opened, Mr. Coleridge, Q.C., stated that Mr. Lloyd, the sitting member, had only lately become acquainted with the fact that bribery by his agents, or those for whom he was responsible, had taken place. Mr. Lloyd felt he could not justify what had been done, and tendered himself for examination. The committee after hearing Mr. Lloyd's evidence, declared that he was not duly elected, and the Committee then proceeded with the scrutiny, which occupied the remainder of the day. At their meeting yesterday the committee resumed the scrutiny, and struck off a sufficient number of votes to place Mr. Bremridge, the petitioner, in a majority. Mr. Motteram and Mr. Huddleston, Q.C., both of the Oxford Circuit, intend offering themselves in the Conservative interest for Stafford. General Buckley has announced his intention to retire from Salisbury at the next general election. There are two candidates in the field, Mr. Edward Hamilton, brother of the Bishop, and Mr. John Chapman, chairman of the Salisbury and Yeovil Railway Company, the former in the Liberal, the latter in the Conservative interest.

The Army.—Major-General Sir William Brereton, K.C.B, has been appointed colonel-commandant of the Royal Artillery by augmentation.

The Ecclesiastical Commission.—The sixteenth report from the Ecclesiastical Commissioners was issued on the 7th inst. It details the amount of work already accomplished in the augmentation of benefices, and includes a statement addressed to the Home Secretary in answer to the report of the select committee. The appendix, besides an abstract of the accounts for the year, contains a minute of the estates committee in reference to the alleged ill-management of the estates of the commission; a report by a committee of the Treasury, made in 1859, explaining the duties and establishment of the office of the commissioners; and a report of a select committee of the commissioners themselves, appointed to examine into the accounts. The commissioners begin with a short account of what they have done, and what they have a prospect of doing. The existence of a common fund for the augmentation and endowment of benefices having cure of souls dates from 1840, and during the first 16 years from that date—that is, down to 1856—the commissioners appropriated for its purposes a capital value of more than three millions. During the subsequent seven years they have appropriated from their own resources about a million and a half, and the public have met them with benefactions to the amount of another million. So that on the whole five millions and a half of money have been applied for the augmentation of benefices, four millions and a half of which have been derived from "the redistribution and improvement of ecclesiastical property previously enjoyed by the holders of cathedral dignities and sinecure preferments." The commissioners then calculate, as a sort of estimate of the work that remains to be done, that in order to raise to 300*l.* a year all benefices in public patronage with a population of about 500 persons, and to provide half the amount necessary to raise to a like amount benefices in private patronage with a like population, they would require 330,000*l.* a year in perpetuity, or a capital sum of 10,000,000*l.*—an amount of which they only say that "the funds at present at their disposal would be insufficient to provide it," but they think that the continuous increase of the permanent income of the common fund will enable them to provide a considerable portion of it by a system of appropriating such income instead of capital. By this means, within the next five years, they expect to raise to 300*l.* a year the income of every benefice now existing with a population of 4000 persons, and also to appropriate to the endowment of new churches 15,000*l.* a year in perpetuity; every such church to be endowed by the commissioners alone, or by them and private persons, with 200*l.* a year. Accordingly, within the next year they are prepared to raise to 300*l.* the income of all benefices with a population over 8000 persons; to appropriate 3000*l.* a year in perpetuity to the endowment with 200*l.* a year of new churches with a population of 8000 persons: to make further appropriations in capital sums to the extent of 100,000*l.*, and, in short, on the whole, to make grants of the capital value of 700,000*l.*

Illness of the Bishop of Peterborough.—The daily papers announce the sudden and serious illness of the Bishop of Peterborough. His lordship was out of doors on Tuesday, but on the following day he was prostrated by a severe attack of bronchitis. The physicians in attendance scarcely expected that the Bishop would last through the night, and the absent members of his family were at once sent for. On Thursday the report was a little more favourable, the Bishop having passed a good night and slightly rallied. His Lordship's condition, however, still causes grave uneasiness to his friends. He is in his 84th year, and was advanced to the see in 1839.

Foreign.

France.—The Prince de la Tour d'Auvergne, the French Ambassador in London, will be the only plenipotentiary of France at the Conference. The Emperor received Lord Clarendon in a private audience on Thursday. His Lordship subsequently had an interview with M. Drouyn de Lhuys. The Pays asserts that the object of Lord Clarendon's journey is to endeavour to establish a perfect understanding between the English and French Governments on the Dano-German question. The report of the Committee on the Budget in the Corps Législatif has been distributed among the members. It states that the Budget, after the different modifications which it has undergone, shows an increase in the revenue of 1,500,000 f. The committee express their confidence that the Budget will be balanced without increasing the existing amount of deficit. They then proceed to say:—

"But our hopes would be fatally deceived if rash impatience or the event which now occupies the political world should lead to an European conflict. France, who earnestly desires the maintenance of peace, assuredly does not fear war. If to uphold her honour or her interests, threatened in any quarter, the Government should ask fresh sacrifices from France, her patriotism would accept them without a murmur; but, happily, the views of the Government in the present state of affairs do not point to any necessity of this kind. Confiding both in its strength and in the high wisdom of the Sovereign to whom it has intrusted its destinies, the country may therefore regard the future without uneasiness."

The Budget stipulates that the stamp duty levied in accordance with the law of the 13th May, 1863, on Rentes, loans, and public securities of foreign Governments, shall be raised from 50c. to 1f. This measure is to take effect from the 1st July, 1864. La France of Tuesday says that great excitement has been caused in Lyons by the introduction of the Roman Liturgy, and that the Government has decided upon applying to the Papal brief addressed to Cardinal Bonald the article of the organic law prohibiting the reception, publication, printing, and putting into execution of any bull, brief, rescript, decree, or other missive of the Court of Rome. In another article it says that it has reason to believe that the French army of occupation will be gradually withdrawn from Mexico. The Paris evening papers announce that the subscription to the Mexican Loan will be opened in France on the 18th inst., at the offices of the Crédit Mobilier and its provincial agencies. The private mission of Lord Clarendon to the Tuileries is regarded in Paris as an event of peculiar significance from the fact of its coinciding with the publication of a pamphlet, attributed to the pen of Count Walewski, in which the Anglo-French alliance is put forward as a means of rescuing oppressed nationalities. This pamphlet, which is entitled L'Alliance Anglaise, le Danemark, et la Pologne, advocates the alliance of France with England, and suggests the advisability of a joint crusade of both countries to protect Denmark, to enfranchise Poland, and to emancipate Venetia. It concludes as follows:—

"England was the first to point out the dangers of a renewal of a Holy Alliance negative as regards Poland, and active as regards Denmark, until it showed itself strong enough to take revenge against Italy as well as England and France. But newspaper articles and speeches in Parliament are not sufficient—it is requisite to do something. Is England willing? Let this be borne in mind—progress must be accomplished, whether in a storm or with fair weather. Would it not be wise to come to an understanding to dissect events and to keep passions down!"

The triumphant reception of Garibaldi in England is causing great excitement in Paris, and it is gravely asserted that "Lord Palmerston received Garibaldi on his arrival," and that all this popular enthusiasm conceals a deep political meaning.

Spain.—Messrs. Chanviteau and Salaverria, supported by the principal bankers, have agreed to offer 140 millions to negotiate the bonds given by the purchasers of national property. The ministry have stated, in reply to a question in the Cortes, that they will energetically carry on the war until the submission of San Domingo be obtained.

Belgium.—It is stated that Garibaldi has been invited to visit Brussels.

Sweden.—Count Wachtmeister, the Swedish Ambassador in London, will represent Sweden at the Conference. His Excellency has received instructions from his Government.

The Danish Duchies.—On Thursday, the 7th, the bombardment of Düppel was kept up vigorously, but the fire on the town of Sönderborg was weaker. The conflagration of the town was subdued during the day. On Friday the Prussians recommenced the bombardment of Sönderborg and of the Danish intrenchments with extraordinary violence. The batteries at Broager, having received fresh guns, fired 1150 shots, principally from the centre batteries. On Saturday the bombardment of the Düppel works and Sönderborg was feeble. Bombs from the Prussian mortars fell on the ground beyond the Danish position. On Sunday morning the bombardment began at 10 o'clock all along the line, with mortars from the second parallel and numerous rifled and siege guns, consisting altogether of nearly 100 pieces. The Danish fire was slack, and there were no sorties. The Prussians, under cover of a fog, extended their trenches in front of the Düppel position, and approached within 500 paces of the Danish left wing. Notwithstanding the Danish cannonade, the new works were occupied by a force 1000 strong. A violent fire was uninterruptedly kept up until 7 P.M., and the windmill on Düppel Hill, which served the Danes as a powder magazine and an observatory, was burnt down. During the night another parallel was traced, and a Danish sortie was repulsed, in which the Prussians lost one man killed and two wounded. The 4th Regiment of the Grenadiers of the Guard reconnoitered in front of the trenches and captured nine prisoners. They had four men wounded. The outposts of the Gröben Brigade were advanced. Three prisoners were taken, without any loss on their side. On Monday the bombardment of Düppel was continued and was quite as violent as on the previous day. At an early hour the Prussians attempted an assault upon both wings of the Danish position without success, and being met by a cannonade from the Danish batteries and approaches, they retreated. On Tuesday the Prussian fire was as vigorous during the night as it was on the previous day, and their batteries discharged at the rate of 500 shots per hour. Sönderborg was again in flames. The parallel on the left wing of the Düppel position was advanced nearer to the works. On Wednesday firing began from the batteries in the third parallel. During the night a battalion of the Prussians attacked the Danish outposts in the trenches. They took 100 men prisoners, and intrenched themselves in the works. The attempt on the part of the Danes to dislodge them was unsuccessful. Brisk musketry firing, supported by a discharge of grenades and shells, took place on this occasion. Major Jena of the Prussian army was wounded in the shoulder, and Lieutenant Seydlitz killed. The Prussian loss was about 2 men. The Düppel position holds out bravely, and the Danes are determined to resist to the last extremity. Fresh bodies of troops are continually being despatched to the seat of war. The German newspapers assert that an intimation was given by the Prussians before the bombardment of Sönderborg. The Berlingske Tidende however publishes a semi-official article, confirming the statement of the telegram that the bombardment took place without warning and without a simultaneous assault upon the Düppel position. The arsenal and depôt of arms had been removed from Sönderborg long before the bombardment took place. A small body of Danish troops has landed between Hadersleben and Apenrade. A sharp cannonade took place before Fredericia on the 8th. The Danes made a sortie and attacked the allied troops, whose reserves were brought forward in their support. The Prussians in Jutland have since advanced northwards. They drove the Danes out of Horsens after a short engagement, and subsequently advanced by way of Hansted. An official notification announces that the Prussian ports of Dantsic and Pillau will be blockaded from the 19th inst. On Wednesday the Danes captured off Heligoland a brig and schooner, the nationality of which is unknown. All homeward and outward bound ships are brought to by the Danish cruisers. Several Danish war vessels are cruising at the mouth of the Elbe. It is said that two frigates and two corvettes have captured three vessels and some small craft. A rescript of the Civil Commissioners prohibits all public officers in Schleswig, under penalty of immediate dismissal, from affixing their signatures to any resolutions or addresses having reference to the London Conference. An assembly of Holstein Notables which was to have taken place on Friday has been prohibited by order of the Austro-Prussian Civil Commissioners.

The Hanse Towns.—The Government of Bremen has requested the Swiss Federal Council to allow ships belonging to that port to sail under Swiss colours during the Dano-German war. This request has been refused by the Federal Council.

Frankfort.—At an extraordinary sitting of the Federal Diet held on Monday, the united committees brought in their report upon England's invitation to the Conference. The committee proposed that the Diet should send a representative. The vote on this proposition was taken on Thursday, when the propositions of the Committees were agreed to by a large majority. Baron von Beust was almost unanimously elected Plenipotentiary of the Diet to the Conference.

Prussia.—It is announced that Prussia will be represented at the Conference by Count Bernstorff, Ambassador in London, and Herr von Balan, formerly Minister Plenipotentiary at Copenhagen. The official journal of Friday publishes an article on what it terms the "insinuations" of the English press that Sönderborg, being an open town, had been bombarded by the Prussians. The article draws attention to the fact that Sönderborg has been employed by the Danes themselves as a fortified place, and has been treated accordingly.

Austria.—Count Apponyi, the Austrian Ambassador in London, has been appointed first, and Baron Biegleben second, Plenipotentiary of Austria at the Conference. The negotiations between the Emperor of Austria and the Archduke Maximilian have at length been brought to a satisfactory conclusion. The Emperor of the French is said to have hastened the decision by addressing two letters to the Emperor of Austria, pointing out the serious consequences of the delay. As everything has now been arranged, the Emperor of Austria left Vienna for Miramar on Friday evening, accompanied by Count Rechberg, Herr von Schmerling, and the representatives of the Hungarian, Transylvanian, and Croatian Aulic Chancellery. The agreement entered into between the Emperor of Austria and the Archduke Maximilian will be communicated to both Houses of the Reichsrath. The Archduke's renunciation for himself and his heirs of the right of succession to the Austrian Throne does not depend upon the stability of the Government in Mexico, but is unconditional. The Archduke Maximilian received the Mexican deputation on Sunday and formally accepted the Imperial Crown. The Archduke, in reply to the deputation, spoke as follows:—

"After a mature examination of the act of acceptance of the Mexican Crown, which you have submitted to me, I have come to the conviction that the resolution of the Mexican notables has been confirmed by an over-ruling majority of the inhabitants of that country. Such being the case, the first of the conditions for which I stipulated on the 3d of October has been fulfilled. The second condition, that a guarantee of the independence and welfare of the country should be placed on a firm basis, has been secured by the Emperor Napoleon, who throughout has been animated by a spirit of sincerity and kindness which I shall never forget. The illustrious head of my family has also given his consent. I now solemnly declare my acceptance of the Crown you have offered to me. Mexico is entitled to select a Government corresponding to her wishes and her requirements. This confidence shall not be misplaced. I assume the constitutional power intrusted to me by the nation. I will retain it so long as it may be necessary to establish a state of legal order, and completely to organise liberal institutions. I shall hasten to place the Monarchy under the authority of constitutional laws so soon as the pacification of the country shall be accomplished. Executive power strictly defined is better secured than when a matter of uncertainty; and I will define it in such a manner as shall be a guarantee of the stability of the Government. I hope to be enabled to prove that well-regulated liberty is compatible with order. I will also uphold with equal energy the flag of independence. I desire the assistance of every Mexican to support me in accomplishing my splendid task. Union will make us strong. My Government, I repeat it, will not forget the gratitude due to the illustrious Prince by whom alone the regeneration of Mexico has been rendered possible. On my journey to Mexico I shall visit Rome to receive the blessing of the Holy Father, which to me is doubly important."

The speech was replied to by the president of the Mexican deputation. The Emperor Maximilian was to have taken his departure for Mexico on Monday afternoon, visiting Rome on his way, but he was unable to carry out his intention until Thursday, being confined to his bed by a slight attack of fever. On Thursday the Emperor and Empress of Mexico left Miramar, at 2 o'clock, amid enthusiastic cheers. A salute was fired by all the batteries on their departure. Ambassadors, have been sent to Vienna, Rome, and Paris, and the new Emperor has made the following appointments:—M. Velasquez, Minister of the Household; Count Woll, Adjutant-General and Private Secretary; M. Schergenbechner, Councillor of State; Marquis Corio, Master of the Ceremonies; M. Aranjuez, Ambassador at Brussels; M. Aguilar, Ambassador at Rome; Count Bombelles, Captain of the Body Guard; Naval Captain Radonetz, Captain of the Palace; Naval Captain Herzfeld, Consul-General in Vienna. A Volunteer Corps for service in Mexico is being organised in Trieste.

DALMATIA.—The Dalmatian Diet was dissolved on Friday by an Imperial resolution, on account of party intrigues and attacks on the Government which have occurred.

POLAND.—The official seal was on Wednesday fixed to the offices of the Credit Institution of the landed proprietors. Three of the higher officials were arrested. A special commission, under the presidency of General Getzewitsch, has been appointed to examine the assets, accounts, and management of the institution, as well as the payments due from the landed proprietors.

ITALY.—The Perseveranza of Friday denies the rumour that the Italian Minister for Foreign Affairs has resigned. On Tuesday the Pope paid a visit to the extramural Church of St. Agnese fuori le Mure. His Holiness was much cheered by the people. Rome was illuminated in the evening. The Opinione of Monday says:—

"The Pontifical Government is about to contract a loan for 40 millions. We will not discuss the amount of confidence to be reposed in the Pontifical credit. That is for capitalists to decide. But it is our duty to discuss whether the Italian Government ought to recognise loans contracted by the Roman Government prior to its dissolution. It would be incorrect of the Papal Government to suppose that Italy will recognise these loans. The Italian Government being acquainted with the amount of the Pontifical debt in June, 1859, and September, 1860, is thus enabled to calculate exactly the increase which has taken place since that date."

GREECE.—Accounts from Athens announce that the Ministry had tendered, but subsequently withdrawn, their resignation. Disturbances had taken place between the Catholics and Greeks in Syra, but they were not of a political character. One company of a regiment had mutinied at Patras.

TURKEY.—Advices from Constantinople deny that the Ottoman Government had consented to deliver up to Russia a Pole who had escaped from Odessa. The fugitive is still at liberty.

EGYPT.—The fresh-water canal from Ismaüla is completed to Port Said. It is an entire success.

INDIA.—A despatch from Bombay, of March 29, says that the laying down of the telegraph cable has been completed to the head of the Persian Gulf. The telegraphic communication with Bombay is now perfect. The Governor-General would not leave Calcutta for Simla until after the publication of the budget. The Patna conspiracy had ended by the capture of all the ringleaders, and the latest advices from that district pronounce everything to be quiet. Some excitement had been caused at Calcutta by a prohibitory order of the Lieutenant-Governor of Bengal against bodies being thrown into the Hooghly or burned on its banks. The order was a most necessary one for the health of the community, but a sect of the Hindoos was endeavouring to raise a cry that the new Governor-General was attempting to tamper with their religion.

CHINA.—The chief event announced by the present Mail is the return of Major Gordon to active service. The direction in which he has moved is to the south-west of the Tae-hoo Lake, against a town named Yih-shing-hsien, not far from Chang-chow-foo. The plan of the campaign includes a combined advance upon Nankin, which, being at present very closely pressed, will, in all likelihood, surrender on mild conditions. The city of Kia-shing-fu has surrendered to the Imperialists. The siege of Hangchau is progressing favourably; six or seven stockades are in the hands of the Franco-Chinese force, and the city is likely to fall soon. Should this expectation be realised the rebellion may be considered at an end. The English officers of the Franco-Chinese contingent have been dismissed owing to an ebullition of ill-temper on the part of General d'Aigabelle, second in command. The troops have expressed disgust at the event.

JAPAN.—The Ambassadors to Europe are at present on their way to France. A rumour is current that they are men of low extraction put forward under false pretences.

AUSTRALIA.—The new Land Bill, framed with the view of "encouraging agricultural and pastoral enterprise," has been introduced into the Victoria Parliament by the President of the Board of Land and Works. It was read a second time on the 17th February without opposition, and is now in committee.

NEW ZEALAND.—The Maoris have formed a regular Maori Quadrilateral, of a strength great in itself at every point, but rendered infinitely greater by the ready support which one part can supply to another. Each of the four positions is strongly fortified with earthworks and flanking angles of stockaded work, while the ground on all sides is honeycombed with a network of rifle pits. There are between 3000 and 4000 men inside, nearly all of whom are available at any point exposed to an attack. General Cameron has surrounded the position with about 2700 men, and is preparing to storm it on the southern side, where the 50th or 70th Regiments, with the colonial force, cavalry, and a company of the Bush Rangers are stationed. The next mail may therefore be expected to bring news of a great fight.

UNITED STATES.—The Confederate General Forrest attacked Union City, Western Tennessee, on the 24th March, and captured the town and 500 Federals. Immediately afterwards he entered Kentucky, and on the 25th occupied Paducah, on the Ohio River, from which he removed many valuable spoils. He also attacked the fort, but for want of heavy cannon was compelled to desist. Two Federal gunboats from Cairo opened fire to dislodge his forces, during which a large portion of the city was destroyed. General Forrest then retired, and at the latest dates was within eight miles of Columbus. The Confederates have also made a reconnaissance from Alexandria up the Red River to Natchitooches, capturing 200 prisoners and four cannon. Admiral Porter's official despatches announce the capture of Fort De Russey, which was surprised and captured while the greater portion of the garrison were upon scouting expeditions. The Federal captures were 250 prisoners and eight cannon. The reported surrender of Alexandria is mentioned. Deserters report that General Polk has joined forces with General Johnston at Dalton; and that the Confederates are moving their artillery to the front, indicating an early advance upon General Thomas at Ringgold. An order from the War Department has been promulgated by General Meade consolidating the troops of the Potomac Army into three corps—namely, second, fifth, and sixth. In consequence, three majors and three brigadier-generals have been relieved of command and ordered to report themselves at Washington. The President, Generals Grant and Halleck, and Mr. Stanton held a consultation at Washington on the 27th ult., and Generals Grant and Meade have since left Washington for Fortress Monroe. It is reported that General Meade is to be removed, and that active commauds will be offered to Generals M'Clellan and Fremont. President Lincoln on the 26th issued a proclamation defining and restricting his previous amnesty proclamation. The proclamation does not apply to persons in military, naval, or civil custody, or on parole. Commissioned civil, naval, and military officers can administer oaths. Serious riots have taken place at Charleston, Illinois, caused by disputes between the Copperhead and Republican politicians. The Copperhead rioters, 1500 strong, are entrenched near Charleston. A large number of troops have been sent to quell the riot.

MEXICO.—Brownsville, Texas, accounts report that a French fleet is off the mouth of Rio Grande, and that an attack upon Matamoras is imminent. There was also a doubtful report that Juarez had captured Guadalajara.

Parliament.

HOUSE OF LORDS.

MONDAY.—The LORD CHANCELLOR laid upon the table a Bill to provide for the endowment of the Regius Professorship of Greek at Oxford. At present that office had only a value of 40*l.* attached to it under the statute of Henry VIII., while other professorships which were founded at the same time had canonries or other ecclesiastical preferments. By his Bill he proposed that the Lord Chancellor, who had a number of canonries in his gift, should confer the first of these that became vacant upon the Regius Professor of Greek. In the meantime he had only to express a hope that the University would be influenced by a sense of justice to make adequate provision for the holder of that office. The Danish Question.—Lord STRATHEDEN moved that in the opinion of the House, if the demand made by Denmark for mediation according to the principle laid down in the protocol of Paris in 1856 had been more decidedly supported by her Majesty's Government, the bloodshed and other evils already occasioned by the war in Denmark might have been prevented, and there would have been less danger than there now was of a more extensive disturbance of the peace of Europe; and that a Conference upon the Danish question in order to lead to a practical result ought to be accompanied by such steps as might convince the Powers of Europe that her Majesty's Government adhered to the treaties in which the Duchy of Schleswig had been guaranteed to Denmark by Great Britain. He believed that the Conference about to be held abounded in the elements of failure, and if it separated without any satisfactory result, the peace and security of Europe would be placed in imminent danger. He thought that a British fleet might be usefully employed in the Little Belt, for the purpose of guarding the Island of Funen from aggression.—The Duke of ARGYLL was at a loss to know how the Government could have prevented war by threatening to take part in it. If they had taken that course, instead of preventing they might have increased the bloodshed. It was true that Great Britain held a high position, and had vast influence in Europe, but she was not the arbitrator in all the quarrels of the continent. Our obligations towards Denmark were contained in the Treaty of 1852, which was not a treaty of guarantee, but of recognition, and had not been signed by England alone. He regarded the blood shed in the present war as altogether unjustifiable, inasmuch as every object could have been attained by negotiation. We should go into the Conference in the first place, to restore peace to Europe; secondly, to secure as far as possible, the local liberties of the two Duchies; and, thirdly, to re-conciliate with that the integrity and independence of Denmark. He admitted that all the obligations of Denmark towards the Duchies had not been adhered to; still, on the other hand, the promises made by Germany to Denmark had also been disregarded.—Earl GREY was not prepared to say that Denmark was not wholly to blame. If since 1852, she had governed the Duchies in a wiser and more conciliatory spirit, the present crisis would never have arisen. As, however, there were probably faults upon both sides, a Conference might be desirable. At the same time, he was convinced that there would have been no war had the English Government pursued a firmer line of policy. He also deprecated the manner in which the war had been conducted by Austria and Prussia, and characterised it as a barbarous, savage, most wanton, and gratuitous outrage upon the feelings of the Danish people.—Earl RUSSELL was of opinion that the arrangement of 1852 between Denmark and Germany was most complicated and unfortunate, and that all the diffitulties which had sprung up within the last 10 years were traceable to it. Denmark had not strictly fulfilled her engagement to Schleswig. On the other hand, Germany had on several occasions made propositions which it was impossible for Denmark to entertain, and which, if acceded to, would have interfered not only with the independence but the integrity of Denmark. This unfortunate state of affairs went on, neither party being altogether right, until the 1st of October, when Germany resolved on enforcing federal execution, and her Majesty's Government had endeavoured so to counsel both parties that a mutually satisfactory result might be arrived at. Their efforts, however, were unsuccessful. He denied that there was anything humiliating in their policy, and said it would have been most unwise, and would perhaps have entailed enormous expense on the country, had her Majesty's Government committed it to hostilities without having the assistance of the other Powers who were signataries to the treaty of 1852. By the firmness and moderation of their language they had extracted from the German Powers a declaration that, notwithstanding the war, the treaty of 1852 would be adhered to, and the independence and integrity of Denmark maintained.—The Earl of DERBY concurred with Earl Russell in thinking that the true policy of this country was essentially a policy of peace; but, unlike the noble earl, he did not regard the matter from an economical point of view. In his opinion, the course adopted by Ministers was more calculated to produce serious complications than if they had adopted a more straightforward and independent policy in the first instance. As he viewed the matter, the great element of danger to the peace of Europe was to be found in the power of the revolutionary party in Germany acting upon the minor States, and that of the latter acting in its turn upon the national jealousies of Austria and Prussia, as to which should obtain the lead in Germany. He joined Earl Grey in condemning the mode in which these two Powers were prosecuting the war, and denounced the bombardment of Sonderborg as an atrocity unexampled in the history of nations claiming to be considered civilised. As to the Conference, he doubted whether it would lead to a satisfactory solution of the difficulty, for he thought its bases should be the engagements entered into in 1852, and that it should not be confounded with the treaty of the following year, the sole object of which was to settle the succession to the Danish Crown.—Lord WODEHOUSE said that when he represented this country at Copenhagen he constantly endeavoured to press upon the Danes that they were not likely to receive material aid from England. He believed it would have been far better for Denmark to have made timely concessions than to have provoked war, but unfortunately all her concessions came too late.—Earl GRANVILLE said with regard to the Conference that most of the great Powers who had consented to send representatives to it, including Austria, were agreed that the first act of the assembly must be the immediate establishment of an armistice.—In reply to Earl Grey, Earl RUSSELL said he understood that the Prussian commander had given a general notice that Sönderborg would be considered part of the fortified position of Düppel. But he thought the inhabitants should have had a special notice 24 hours. The motion was then withdrawn.

TUESDAY.—The MARQUIS of WESTMEATH moved the second reading of the Punishment of Rape Bill empowering the Judge to add flogging to the punishment awarded by the law in the case of persons acting as accomplices in criminal assaults on women.—Lord RAVENSWORTH opposed the Bill. The crime specified was generally committed without premeditation, differing in this respect from the offence of wilfully placing obstructions on a railway with the intention to upset a train, for which the punishment of flogging could be inflicted.—Earl GRANVILLE, on the part of the Government, would not oppose the second reading.—Earl GREY thought the law as it at present stood was not fully administered in these cases. Some Judges had passed scandalously insufficient sentences for such outrages, and those who did so he considered unworthy of their high office.—Lord WENSLEYDALE agreed with Lord Grey as to the disproportion of some recent sentences to the crime committed. It would be desirable if some general understanding could be come to between the Judges as to the punishment they would award for certain classes of crimes.—The Lord CHANCELLOR thought if any general rule of the kind could be fixed it would be better to embody it in an act of the Legislature.—Lord CRANWORTH feared the measure would introduce a new penalty for the offence, and would rather increase the difference between the sentences of different Judges. The Bill was then read a second time. The Charitable Assurance Bill passed through committee. The Prerogative of Mercy Bill passed through committee.—The Earl of CARNARVON moved for copies of the correspondence relative to the case of George Hall, convicted at the Warwick assizes of murder, and subsequently respited by the Crown. He also called attention to the cases of Samuel Wright, George Victor Townley, and Jessie M'Lachlan, and complained of the capricious administration of the Home Office in connection with the infliction of capital punishment.—The Lord CHANCELLOR defended the Secretary of State, especially with reference to the case of Townley, who had not been respited until after it had been found that no case had occurred in which, under similar circumstances, the convict had subsequently been executed. As to the convict Hall, Sir G. Grey had respited him, as he thought, wisely and judiciously, on receiving information which led him to believe that the execution of the criminal would have shocked the moral sense of the community. It was impossible to administer the law in relation to capital punishments differently from the mode that had been adopted; and, if their lordships wanted a change, they should direct their attention to the condition of the law and the subject with a view of applying a remedy. After some observations from the Duke of Marlborough and Earl Grey, the motion was withdrawn.

Thursday.—The Punishment of Rape Bill passed through Committee after an amendment moved by Lord Wensleydale, rendering the measure compulsory instead of optional, had been agreed to.—The Improvement of Land Act (1864) Bill was read a second time.—Lord Redesdale inquired if Government intended to propose any amendment of the Highway Act during the present session.—Earl Granville replied in the negative. Iron Plates for Ships of War.—The Earl of Hardwicke presented a petition from Mr. J. Chalmers, complaining of the conduct of the Admiralty with regard to his invention of a new mode of constructing ships of war. His lordship read the several allegations of the petition, but could not undertake to express any opinion of his own on the merits of the plan.—The Duke of Somerset explained that Mr. Chalmers offered to construct a target that would be lighter, stronger, and less costly than a section of the side of the Warrior. The Iron-plate Committee reported unfavourably of the plan, but Mr. Chalmers provided the target for trial at his own expense, and, when tested, it proved defective in each of the points specified.

Friday.—The Reserve Force.—The Earl of Lucan moved for returns of the strength of the reserve force. If, as he understood, it consisted of only 300 or 400 men, it would be better that they should disband, and join the militia. As to the Limited Enlistment Act, he considered it unadulterated mischief.—Earl De Grey and Ripon said that 10,000 men would take their discharge this year. Those who were entitled to their discharge this year numbered 10,400. From statistics embracing three and a quarter years of experience of the Act of 1847, 7335 men completed their service. Of that number 3845 re-engaged at once, and consequently 3490 were discharged. Of these latter 650 re-enlisted within six months, leaving a total of 2800 men. There was no record of men who had enlisted after six months. Taking statistics as a guide, it was probable that the loss to the army this year, according to the provisions of the Act, would amount to 4000 men.

HOUSE OF COMMONS.

Friday.—Enlistments of Irishmen in America.—Mr. Layard, in reply to Sir A. Agnew, said that her Majesty's Government had received reports from the consuls at Boston, New York, and Portland, stating that a considerable number of Irishmen had been induced to emigrate to the Federal States upon various pleas, had been confined in prison on their arrival there, and when in a state of intoxication had been drafted into the Federal army. Lord Lyons had in consequence received instructions to take steps to prevent a recurrence of these violations of international law, and to demand redress. Monastic Establishments.—On the order for going into Committee of Supply, Mr. Newdegate moved for a Select Committee to inquire into the allegations contained in the petition of Mr. Alfred Smee, relative to conventual and monastic establishments in this country, and proceeded to state the circumstances which have occurred in the cemetery of the Oratorians at Sydenham. He complained that there was no certificate of burial, no register, and no evidence to identify deceased persons but that which appeared on the tombstones, and even this was vitiated by the interpolation of religious names. He also called attention to the proceedings of the Oratory at Brompton, and to the growth of monastic and conventual establishments, which he declared to be dangerous to the peace of the country and contrary to the provisions of the Roman Catholic Relief Act.—Sir G. Grey, while fully sympathising with the natural feelings of Mr. Smee, opposed the motion on the ground that the allegations contained in his petition did not afford sufficient reasons for the appointment of a committee of inquiry. So far as the Sydenham burial-ground was concerned, it was wrong to suppose that the certificate authorising its use had been obtained by the exercise of any improper influence or any other than sanitary grounds. The application was made in the usual way, and there was nothing on the face of it to show that the Brothers of the Oratory were an institution not authorised by law.—Lord E. Howard complained of the tone of Mr. Newdegate's speech, and of the calumnious attacks made upon his own family in the petition. With regard to the Oratory, any acts of that society supposed to be illegal were cognizable by the ordinary tribunals of the country. As to the increase of conventual establishments, most of them were merely educational.—Mr. Neate thought that Mr. Newdegate deserved the thanks of the House for calling its attention to the character of the institution at Brompton.—The Attorney-General for Ireland defended the Oratory, and said that it had been grossly slandered. Its members were not bound together by vows, as they were a voluntary community, who had no property in common, and who could bequeath their substance to any one they pleased.—After a few words from Sir G. Bowyer and Sir P. O'Brien against the motion, Mr. R. Long denied that Mr. Newdegate's motion was directed against the Norfolk family, or against individuals, but simply against monastic institutions. On a division the motion was negatived by 113 to 80.—Mr. Gregory called attention to the condition of the Scientific Institutions of Dublin, which are assisted by Government, and urged the advisability of appointing a select committee to inquire into the subject.—Sir R. Peel admitted that inquiry might be advisable, and expressed his willingness to agree to the appointment of a committee. After some remarks by Sir E. Grogan, Mr. Vance, Mr. Whiteside, and Mr. Adderley the subject dropped.—Mr. Moffatt brought under notice the working of the new Bankruptcy Act, contending that it was a lamentable failure, encouraged gross frauds upon the commercial classes, and demoralised the trading portion of the community. He moved for a Select Committee to inquire into and report upon the operation of the Act.—Mr. Murray seconded the motion.—The Attorney-General said he would be glad to see a committee appointed, as experience had proved that the working of the act was not as satisfactory as could be desired. The collection of assets by creditors' assignees had not produced larger dividends, nor had it diminished expenses. The costs of the court were intolerably great, and an inquiry by a committee of the House into these and other defects of the system might lead to useful results. The motion was then agreed to. The Birkenhead Rams.—Sir L. Palk called attention to a rule obtained for a commission to examine the Pasha of Egypt and other witnesses at Cairo to obtain evidence against the steam rams at Birkenhead, and asked how long the investigation was likely to take, and the probable expense of it; also whether the trial of the Birkenhead iron-clads would be postponed from May next until this information be obtained; and why the rule was not applied for when the vessels were first seized.—The Attorney-General replied that the commission was returnable on the 10th of May, which was an earlier period than that at which the trial could take place. The Crown would proceed with the case with all possible despatch, whether the commission had returned or not. With regard to the expense, all he could say was, that the Crown had adopted the least costly process. The rule had not been applied for when the vessels were seized, because the Crown was not prepared to go to trial.—Mr. Dillwyn called attention to the telegraphic despatch announcing the Bombardment of Sonderborg by the Prussians without previous notice, and asked whether her Majesty's Government had received information whether the despatch was substantially correct; and, if so, what steps had been taken to recall the Prussian Government to a sense of the necessity of carrying on war in accordance with the usages of civilised nations. If the facts were as described, a more dastardly outrage had never been recorded in the annals of history. He suggested that some strong measures should be resorted to on our part, short, he said, of an act of war—such as sending a fleet to the Baltic—in behalf of Denmark.—Mr. Osborne reviewed the negotiations which had taken place between the Western Powers with reference to the Dano-German question, and said that the proposed Conference was nothing more nor less than a political pic-nic got up by the Premier, to which every signatary to the Treaty of 1852 was to be at liberty to bring a basket of suggestions, but at which there would be no pièce de resistance in the shape of a basis. The Government appeared to be ready to enter the Conference without any definite object, and without any intelligible policy. He feared the whole affair would turn out a Parliamentary hoax; and he suggested that it should be put off until the 1st of April in next year. As matters now stood our efforts to preserve the peace of Northern Europe had been utterly futile, and he feared that all the Government had done was to irritate Germany, to cajole Denmark, and to humiliate England.—Lord Palmerston said that the policy of the Government was plain and simple. Its object had been to prevent war; but as hostilities had unfortunately broken out, it was now desirous to restore peace. They were prepared to adhere to the Treaty of 1852, and all the signataries to that treaty were also willing to abide by it. What the Conference might do he could not take upon himself to say, but the basis would be the recognition of King Christian and the independence of his kingdom. The meeting of the Conference would be postponed from the 12th to the 20th inst., in order to give the Diet time to send a representative, and, in default of any such appearing, the Conference would go on without him. France was prepared to maintain the Treaty of 1852, and he hoped the other signataries to the treaty would do the same. With regard to the bombardment of Sonderborg, he feared the facts were as stated, and that many non-combatants had lost their lives. The Government had directed inquiries to be made into the circumstances, but had not as yet received an answer from Berlin.—Mr. Kinglake predicted that great differences would arise at the Conference, as, instead of there being no basis, there would be two, each conflicting with the other. The German Powers would not agree to adhere to the Treaty of 1852, and Denmark would not be satisfied with less.—General Peel deprecated raising an incidental debate on so grave and important a subject on the motion for going into Committee of Supply. He thought the time was not far distant when it would become necessary to discuss the whole question.—After some remarks by Sir H. Verney and Mr. S. Beaumont, Mr. Peacocke said he was prepared to advocate a policy of non-intervention, because, in his opinion, Denmark was originally in the wrong, and had never put herself right. The House then went into Committee of Supply pro formâ. The Warehousing of British Spirits Bill passed through Committee. The Life Annuities and Life Assurances Bill was read a second time.

Monday.—The Conference.—Mr. Horsman asked, if it should be a result of the Conference that England would undertake new engagements with reference to Denmark and the Duchies, her Majesty's Ministers would be prepared to submit those engagements to the consideration of Parliament before they advised their ratification by the Crown.—Lord Palmerston replied that the function of negotiating and making treaties with foreign Powers rested with the Crown, acting on the advice and responsibility of its Ministers, and that if the case contemplated by Mr. Horsman should arise, her Majesty's Ministers would adhere to the spirit and practice of the constitution.—The adjourned debate on going into committee on the Government Annuities Bill was resumed by Mr. Ayrton, who criticised the measure at great length, and condemned it as an unnecessary and inquisitorial interference with private enterprise.—Mr. Hubbard supported the amendment for referring the Bill to a select committee, and Mr. Hankey opposed both the Bill and the amendment.—After some remarks by the Chancellor of the Exchequer in defence of the measure generally, the Bill was referred to a select committee, on the understanding that the form and not the principle of the measure should be inquired into. The House then went into Committee of Supply on the Army Estimates. On the vote for 5,708,938*l.* for general staff and regimental pay allowances and charges, Mr. O'Reilly compared the cost of the French and English services, contending that, whereas the soldier in France cost the country 47*l.* 18*s.* 10*d.* per man per annum, the cost in England was 91*l.* 17*s.* 2*d.*—Sir H. Willoughby, General Peel, Colonel North, Mr. Williams, and Colonel Dickson also criticised the vote, objecting to the policy of reducing trained artillerymen and cavalry soldiers who had already cost the country a considerable sum, and who could not be replaced so soon as soldiers in other branches of the service.—The Marquis of Hartington defended the vote, which was ultimately agreed to without a division.—A vote of 1,319,047*l.* for commissariat establishment services and movement of troops; of 596,694*l.* for clothing establishments, services, and supplies; of 611,165*l.* for barrack establishments; and of 45,433*l.* for divine service, were also agreed to.—On the vote of 40,549*l.* for martial law, Lord Hotham, at some length, called attention to the Crawley court-martial, and commented on the manner in which it was conducted as affecting discipline in the army.—The Marquis of Hartington objected to reopen the question, and after some remarks by Sir W. Fraser, Mr. Hunt, Lord Lovaine, Colonel Dickson, and Mr. Headlam, the vote was agreed to, and the Chairman reported progress. The Warehousing of British Spirits Bill was read a third time and passed. The Cost Security Bill was read a second time.—Mr. Hutt obtained leave to bring in a Bill to amend the laws relating to the Conservancy of the Thames and for other purposes relating thereto.—The Attorney-General obtained leave to introduce a Bill to consolidate and amend the Church Building and New Parishes Acts.

Tuesday.—Mr. Dillwyn postponed his motion relating to Religious Endowments in Ireland until the 12th of May.—In answer to Mr. Griffith, Lord Palmerston said that the parties engaged in the construction of the Suez Canal had applied to the Government of the Pasha for an extension of the time during which they were to be permitted to use forced labour on the works, and he believed some short extension had been granted. He thought it was to be regretted both by England and France that, at a period when both countries were so much in want of cotton, thirty or forty thousand men, who might be usefully employed in cultivating it, should devote their lives to the construction of a canal through a sandy desert, and two harbours in deep mud and shallow water.—In reply to Mr. Newdegate, Sir G. Grey said that it was not the intention of Government to introduce any measure respecting the Registration of Burials in private burial grounds.—Captain Jervis called attention to the report of the Royal Commission on Memorials of Indian Officers, and moved that the House, having by certain acts guaranteed to the officers of the late East India Company's service that their advantages as to pay, pensions, allowances, privileges, promotions, and otherwise, should be secured to them, had learnt with regret from the above report that in certain cases this assurance had been departed from, and was of opinion that full and speedy reparation should be made to those who had suffered by such departure.—Sir M. Farquhar seconded the motion, which was supported by General Evans.—Sir C. Wood admitted that these officers were entitled to liberal and handsome treatment, but said that the entire subject had been dealt with in accordance with the sanction of the highest authorities, including the Indian Council, whose sympathies were altogether with the officers. The question had also been submitted to the law officers of the Crown, who had given it as their opinion that what had been done might have been done by the old East India Company, and that consequently the Government were justified in the course they had adopted. The Government had, however, a scheme before them, founded upon the report of the Royal Commission, the recommendations of which would be carried out in their integrity.—Captain Jervis expressed himself satisfied with this explanation, and withdrew his motion.—Lord Robert Cecil moved, "That in the opinion of this House the Mutilation of the Reports of the Inspectors of Schools, and the exclusion from them of statements and opinions adverse to the educational views entertained by the Committee of Council, while matter favourable to them is admitted, are violations of the understanding under which the appointment of the inspectors was originally sanctioned by Parliament, and tend entirely to destroy the value of their reports." He contended that the reports of the inspectors were mutilated, garbled, or partially suppressed, so as to chime in with the peculiar views of the Vice-President of the Committee of Council, and that, in consequence, the House of Commons was practically deprived of the means of information which it ought to possess.—Mr. Walter seconded the motion.—Mr. Lowe denied emphatically that he had mutilated, garbled, or suppressed the reports of the inspectors. Those reports were not made direct to the House of Commons, but to the Privy Council Office, and, in cases in which they were not made in accordance with instructions laid down for the guidance of the inspectors, they were sent back to the authors, who were thus made to revise their own work. If, however, the House wished to have all the reports of all the inspectors laid before it precisely as they were written, though they often contained much controversial and irrelevant matter, he had no objection whatever, but he warned the House that the expense would be more than was supposed.—Mr. W. E. Forster thought that the House ought to interfere in the matter, and inquired how it came to pass, if it were necessary for discipline that the reports should be dealt with as represented by Mr. Lowe, that the predecessors of that right hon. gentleman had never adopted a similar course.—Mr. Liddell supported the motion.—Sir G. Grey bore testimony to the necessity for the head of a department to exercise some control over the inspectors employed by it. On a division the motion was carried by 101 to 93.—Mr. Darby Griffith obtained leave to bring in a Bill to afford shareholders in joint-stock companies facilities for voting by means of Voting Papers.—Mr. Dillwyn called attention to the inconvenience of the Museum of Inventions at South Kensington, and was proceeding with his address when the House was counted out.

Wednesday.—Mr. L. King moved the second reading of the County Franchise Bill, which would, he said, admit to the franchise a class quite as anxious to maintain the Constitution as the classes already admitted to it. The principle of the Bill was not novel. An occupation franchise in counties as in boroughs had been adopted in 1832, so that the question was solely as to the limit. He urged various arguments in support of a reduced county occupation franchise and in reply to objections to a 10*l.* franchise, which some considered to be too low. He appealed to the Government to accept, under the circumstances, reform in fragments, and hoped that the House would remove a very great and crying injustice.—Mr. Augustus Smith moved as an amendment the previous question, insisting upon the unreasonableness, the impolicy, and the danger of the measure.—Mr. Knightley seconded the amendment.—Lord Enfield said that if the Bill passed the second reading, it had little chance of becoming law. He was not prepared to extend the county franchise to so low an amount as 10*l.*; he was ready to consent to its reduction to 20*l.*, and he should vote for the second reading with the intention of moving in committee an amendment to that effect.—Lord R. Montagu opposed the Bill, which Lord Henley supported as a step in the direction of reform.—Mr. Newdegate, considered the Bill objectionable and insufficient, and as calculated inevitably to swamp the 40*s.* freeholders.—Mr. Warner thought there were reasons why the Bill should be allowed to be discussed in Committee.—Mr. Bentinck said that the effect of the Bill would be to destroy the influence of the rural constituencies.—Mr. Neate intimated his preference of a 20*l.* to a 10*l.* qualification.—Mr. Treherne opposed the Bill as a party, one-sided measure.—Mr. Pease and Mr. Hibbert supported the Bill.—Sir J. Walsh and Mr. Collins opposed it.—Lord Palmerston said he could not vote against the second reading of the Bill, for that would imply that he was adverse to any change in the county franchise; but he could not vote for a 10*l.* franchise. He thought that Mr. King might have done better by abstaining from introducing this measure. There did not exist at present the same anxiety as heretofore for organic changes, which were means to ends, many of which had been accomplished. In voting, therefore, for the second reading, he did not vote for the particular franchise contained in it. On a division, the previous question was carried by 254 to 227. The Bill was therefore lost by a majority of 27.—On the order for going into committee on the Trespass (Ireland) Bill, Mr. Bagwell moved to defer the committee for six months.—After a discussion, in which Mr. W. O. Gore, Mr. Dawson, Mr. M'Mahon, Mr. Bright, Mr. Whiteside, Sir R. Peel, and other members took part, the amendment was negatived on a division by 158 to 45. The House then went into committee on the Bill, when the Chairman was ordered to report progress. The House afterwards went into committee upon the Registration of County Voters (Ireland) Bill, the clauses of which were agreed to. A sum was voted in a Committee of Ways and Means. The report of the Committee of Supply was brought up and agreed to.

Thursday.—Income Tax.—The Chancellor of the Exchequer stated that it was not the intention to propose any material change in the income tax as it stood at the close of 1863. The Danish Question.—In answer to Mr. Osborne, Mr. Layard said that the French despatches, suggesting that the opinion of the inhabitants of Schleswig and Holstein upon the Dano-German question should be taken by universal suffrage, had not been officially communicated to her Majesty's Government; and that it was not intended to lay any further papers relating to the Danish difficulty upon the table at present. Reduction of the Malt Duty.—On the order for going into a Committee of Ways and Means, Colonel Barttelot moved a resolution,—"That the consideration of the Duties upon Sugar be postponed until the House shall have had the opportunity of considering the expediency of the reduction of the Duty upon Malt." He said that this was no party question; but was one which concerned the interests of the public,—the interests of consumers as well as agriculturists. The question was—which would benefit the community most, the reduction of the Malt Tax, or that of the Duties upon Sugar? The latter would chiefly benefit certain classes, but he contended that those taxes should be first taken off which most pressed upon the whole community, and the reduction of the Malt Tax, besides cheapening and improving the quality of beer, would benefit not only the landowner, but the tenant farmer and the labourer. The Malt Tax was, moreover, an expensive tax to collect—a fact which was an important element in the question. It was an impost which had been condemned on all hands, and could be supported only on fiscal grounds.—Mr. COBBETT seconded the motion, and said that he did so in the interest of the labouring man, to whom the price of malt and of beer, one of the necessaries of life to the labouring man, was doubled by the Malt Tax. Many cases had occurred within his own knowledge in which the health of labouring men had suffered through being debarred from wholesome beer.—Mr. SURTEES supported the motion, and said that this tax was not only burdensome in its nature but unjust in principle, and tended to establish a monopoly. —Mr. J. PEEL likewise supported the motion, pointing out the injurious effect of the Malt Tax upon the agriculture of the country.—Mr. STANHOPE contended that, balancing the claims of malt and sugar to the proportion of the surplus proposed to be applied to the reduction of the Sugar Duties malt had a prior claim. The consumption of sugar had largely increased, proving that the duties were not burdensome, and the argument that a reduction of the Malt Tax would be a greater boon to England than to Scotland and Ireland was neutralised by connecting that tax with the spirit duties, which operated in a contrary direction.—Sir E. DERING said it was much to be regretted that a question of so much importance as the Malt Tax should be presented in a shape which rendered it impossible to arrive at a satisfactory conclusion - namely, as a question of malt versus sugar, which brought into the field the great sugar interest. He supported the motion, but should have been better pleased if the issue had been raised simply upon the tax itself — Mr. BEACH, in supporting the motion, argued that the reduction of the Malt Tax would benefit both producer and consumer, and that its history showed that the increase of consumption had been checked by the oppressive character of the tax.—Mr. ALCOCK advocated the entire repeal of the Malt Tax.—Lord R. MONTAGU said that the reduction of the Malt Tax would not make the difference of a farthing in the price of a pot of beer, and that, in considering the labourer, his wife and family should not be forgotten, who had an interest in the cheapening of tea and sugar. He opposed the motion not only upon economical but upon moral grounds. He was no advocate of the Malt Tax, and if he saw his way to its repeal, he would vote for it; but when it was known that it could not be taken off, such a motion was not a fair one.—Mr. P. URQUHART defended the reduction of the sugar duties as a relief to a suffering interest. —Colonel NORTH supported the motion.—Mr. PUGH and Mr. WESTERN opposed it, the latter believing that a reduction of one-fourth of the Malt Tax would be of no advantage to the agricultural interest. —Lord INGESTRE cordially supported the motion. He thought the reduction of the Malt Tax would tend to improve the quality of beer, and lessen the temptation to indulge in ardent spirits, the incentive to vice and crime.—Sir B. BRIDGES likewise supported the motion.—Sir F. CROSSLEY disputed the assertion of Mr. Cobbett, that beer was a necessary of life to a labouring man.—Mr. PACKE spoke shortly in favour of the motion.—Mr. DU CANE did not quarrel with the principles of the Budget; but the rule which should guide the House in the reduction of taxation was justice and fair play, and, if that principle were fairly carried out, the Malt Tax had a priority of claim for a reduction of duty over sugar. It was originally a war tax, and its reduction had been regarded as a complement of the repeal of the Corn Laws, and an essential part of the free trade movement. He disputed the inference drawn by the Chancellor of the Exchequer from the price of barley, which he had assumed from that of the best barley; but those who asked for a repeal or reduction of the Malt Tax were the growers of inferior barley. The benefit to the farmer by the reduction of the tax would be great; but it would be as nothing to that conferred upon the consumer. He enumerated the ingredients infused into the "villanous decoction" sold to labouring men in country beershops under the name of beer. He pointed out a fallacy in the argument of the Chancellor of the Exchequer, that the Malt Tax was only an English grievance, observing that all that was asked was that the Malt Tax might be put on the same footing as other branches of the Revenue.—Mr. COBDEN said that there was no rule more deserving of attention by those who took charge of questions in that House than that one question should not be brought into collision with another with which it has no connexion. Colonel Barttelot had not observed this rule, having blended together the two questions of the Malt Tax and the Sugar Duties. He should prefer abolishing the Sugar Duties. Sugar appealed to the sympathies of all,—of working men, their wives, and children. He acknowledged his objections to the Malt Tax, which appealed to the Legislature in the interest of producer and consumer, and he thought there was good ground for asking a repeal of the tax as a complement of the free-trade policy. If the tax was repealed, it did not follow that the consumption of malt would largely increase; but other sources of revenue would become more productive without any greater consumption of intoxicating liquors. The expenditure might also be greatly reduced. He recommended Colonel Barttelot not to take the sense of the House on his motion, which would oblige him and others, favourable to a reduction of the Malt Tax, to vote against it.—After a few remarks by Mr. BARROW in support of the motion, Mr. M. GIBSON complained that the resolution was vague and indefinite. He was no friend of the Malt Tax; but when the House was asked to assent to the proposal to reduce the tax by one-quarter it should seriously consider whether the Malt Tax could be so dealt with advantageously. The loss of revenue by the proposed reduction of the Sugar Duties would be 1,330,000*l.*; but a reduction of one-quarter of the Malt Tax would cause a loss of revenue in the present year of 1,880,000*l.* Such a reduction in the tax would not cheapen beer, nor would it benefit the farmer. Sugar was more extensively used than beer; it entered into the consumption of every family, and no article in our tariff was of greater commercial importance. He had no doubt that the House would support the proposal of the Government. — Mr. BASS believed that the proposal to take off the war duties on sugar was generally approved. He suggested certain practical objections to a reduction instead of a repeal of the Malt Tax.—Mr. BENTINCK suggested the difficulties with which this question was complicated. He considered that the repeal of the Malt Tax was impossible without an entire revision of the whole system of our taxation, and especially of the unfair and onerous portion borne by the rural districts.—The CHANCELLOR of the EXCHEQUER adverted to the bearing of the taxation of beer and ardent spirits upon the three kingdoms. If the Malt Tax was to be approached, it ought not to be by fractions, or without considering its relations to the whole system of taxation upon beverages. The question before the House was a comparison between malt and sugar, and he believed that, had the Government given priority to malt, an outcry would have been raised upon the opposite benches. The proposal they had made was dictated by sound policy; and he believed the House would support that proposal, which reduced the duties upon an article so intimately connected with the welfare and comfort of the people.—Mr. DISRAELI said that the question had branched out into three distinct subjects — the expediency of a total repeal of the Malt Tax, the remission of a part of the tax, and the engagement which Parliament had entered into with the country as to the remission of taxation generally. After briefly discussing the first two subjects, he addressed himself to the last, which, he said, was the most important point that ought to govern the consideration of the House in this matter. He reviewed the circumstances under which the engagement had been entered into, and though he had now changed his opinion on the Malt Tax, insisted upon the duty of fulfilling that engagement with the country entered into at the period of the Crimean struggle, that the war duties should be remitted.—Mr. MORRITT said, though he deprecated the manner in which the motion had been brought forward, he would nevertheless back it. On a division, Colonel BARTTELOT'S resolution was negatived by 347 to 99. The House then went into a Committee of Ways and Means, when the resolutions for giving effect to the propositions of the Budget relating to the sugar duties, continuing the duty on tea, altering the duty on corn, continuing the income tax at 6*d.*, and those relating to the stamp duties and licences to sell tea were agreed to, after discussion. The resolution on the Fire Insurance Duty was postponed. The Report of the Committee of Ways and Means was brought up and agreed to.

FRIDAY.—National Gallery.—Mr. COWPER said that in a few days he should propose a scheme for erecting the National Gallery in the yard of Burlington House. Poland.—Mr. HENNESSY gave notice that, on going into committee of supply, he would move that the negotiations relative to Poland had not given satisfaction, and that the conditions on which the dominion of Russia over Poland was agreed to had not been complied with. Foreign Trade.—Mr. FORSTER rose to move for a select committee on this subject.

GENERAL GARIBALDI IN THE ISLE OF WIGHT.—On Friday afternoon Garibaldi visited the Poet Laureate at Freshwater, and at the request of Mrs. Tennyson planted a Wellingtonia gigantea in the grounds. During the day he had a long conference with Mr. Negretti, and definite arrangements were made to receive addresses on Monday, the 18th, as well as on Saturday, the 16th, at the Crystal Palace, in order to afford greater facility to working men. On Saturday he visited Portsmouth dockyard and the Excellent, where he witnessed with great interest some target practice, and was afterwards entertained at luncheon by Sir Michael Seymour, the Port Admiral. He then went to Portsea and visited an old friend, Mrs. White, the mother of his youngest son's former governess, and returned to Cowes amidst the enthusiastic cheers of the inhabitants. On Monday he left Brooke House and crossed to Southampton on his way to London, the enthusiasm at Cowes and Southampton being quite as great as it was on his arrival at the latter port. At Winchester and all the other places on the line of the South-Western where the train stopped on its way to London, vast crowds of people were assembled, and his reception everywhere was of the most cordial and enthusiastic character. It has since been announced that the tree planted by Garibaldi in the garden of the Poet Laureate had two of its branches torn off during the night of Saturday. It was carefully watched by Mr. Tennyson's gardener until after dark, but between bedtime on Saturday and Sunday morning was so mutilated that the beauty of its foliage is permanently marred. The tree thus possessed previous interest of association and was valued for the circumstances under which it had been procured and presented to Mr. Tennyson, who has had the mortification of feeling that its crowning honour—that of being re-set by Garibaldi—has been its bane.

ENTRY OF GARIBALDI INTO LONDON.—On Monday General Garibaldi was welcomed by the people of London. It was most emphatically a people's welcome, and was given with such an earnestness and goodwill as has seldom been equalled, and probably never exceeded even in our long history of demonstrations in honour of distinguished visitors from all quarters of the globe. At the entry of the Princess of Wales, the number of spectators may have been greater, because the route was longer, but this made the only difference, for it would have been impossible to have had a crowd more dense along the streets through which the procession passed. From roof to basement every house was thronged — in windows, balconies, and along the parapets; while the streets were so impassable, even for the limited number of carriages which formed the procession, that upwards of four hours were consumed in passing from Nine Elms station to Stafford House, a distance of less than three miles. The General and his sons arrived at Vauxhall station soon after 2 o'clock, and was received by Sir Robert Clifton, M.P.; Colonel Sykes, M.P., Mr. Ewart, M.P.; Mr. Ayrton, M.P.; Mr. Locke, M.P.; Mr. Dunlop, M.P.; Mr. Forster, M.P.; Mr. Gurney, Onslow, M.P.; the Hon. Arthur Kinnaird, M.P.; Alderman Mechi, Mr. Scott, the City Chamberlain, Mr. Chambers, Q.C.; Mr. Richardson, and a number of the Court of Common Council. As soon as he appeared at the entrance to the station, walking between his two sons, Ricciotti and Menotti, a perfect tumult of enthusiasm broke out, that can always be remembered, but never described. The shouts were deafening, and for once the ladies' voices could be distinguished cheering and cheering heartily. The General wore the uniform of the Montevidean Italian legion, a plain gray capote and Garibaldi hat and red tunic. He appeared in better health than when he landed at Southampton, but his lameness seemed to distress him, and without the aid of his stick it was evident that walking would be a slow and most laborious effort. As he advanced up the platform to where he was to receive the addresses, the ladies sometimes offered their hands to him over the barriers, when his usually sad expression of countenance at once changed, as with the most winning courtesy he turned to press their hands, and to say to each a word or two of English to thank them for the honour they did him. A little child was put forward to present him with a bouquet, but he scarcely looked at the flowers, as with the most perfectly natural and fatherly manner he took the child in his arms, kissed it, patted its curls, and tried as well as he was able to speak to it in English. Little as this incident was, it was so unexpected, and, above all, so perfectly simple and natural, that it did more than elicit applause—it seemed to establish familiar and domestic relations between Garibaldi and all the ladies present. For the rest of the way down the platform he seemed almost bewildered by the intense enthusiasm of his welcome, but once on the daïs he turned with the simple dignity that is natural to him, and with his calm, melancholy look, remained to receive the addresses. The first presented and read to him was from the City, which welcomed him as the great apostle of liberty, the heroic and chivalrous soldier whose sword had never been drawn but in a just cause; as the conqueror of a kingdom, that he might deliver its people from oppression; as poor himself, while making others rich; as the self-devoted, self-denying citizen, loving the rights and welfare of his own country and of the whole human race better than his own life; and as the truly good, pure hearted, and upright man whose private worth was only surpassed by his public virtues and more than Spartan and Roman magnanimity. To this address he replied slowly, but with much emphasis and evident feeling:—

"I am very happy to be enabled to-day to have to give my thanks to this noble nation for its generous sympathy for the cause of my country and the cause of all mankind. Long ago I wished well for this day to come, and I am very happy to-day to express to you all my gratitude."

When the cheers which these few words excited had died away, the address from the working-men was read. It told him that his name was to the sons and daughters of toil a household word, the symbol of liberty, associated with lofty daring, bold enterprise, and unselfish devotion to the cause of human progress. It said that they thanked, loved and welcomed him for his noble deeds; and in the name of that liberty for which he had fought, bled, and won for the oppressed peoples, they gave him the first place in their hearts; and while doing so could not forget that there were many who had been associated with him in his glorious enterprises also deserving of admiration and esteem, especially the illustrious Joseph Mazzini, who had done so much for Italy, freedom, and humanity. Almost all the passages in this address called forth loud cheers, especially that which applied to Mazzini, which were welcomed with marked enthusiasm, though almost chiefly, if not entirely, by the Italians who were present. In reply to this, Garibaldi said:—

"I like to see working-men particularly. I am very grateful, and will forget not in all my life this welcome of the class I have the honour to belong to. They like to call me the brother of the working-man of every part of the world!"

The cheering which hailed this simple answer was, if possible, even greater than before, amid which, and as if carried away by the enthusiasm and impulse of the moment, an Italian lady suddenly addressed Garibaldi, saying:—

"General,—You cannot but rejoice at the great demonstration which you have here witnessed to-day—coming from the heart of the most powerful nation in the world. This nation has proved herself to be the friend of our country, and I am overpowered with joy at witnessing this moving scene—the more so as I am a countrywoman of the hero whom we so heartily greet. I wish to raise my voice to the English people to thank them for the honours heaped upon General Garibaldi for his defence of Italian liberty against despotism. General, may at last your noble example kindle all hearts to support you, and enable you to establish that civilisation in Italy which will unite all humanity like a happy family.'

This impromptu address took the audience by surprise, and was received with hearty cheers, amidst which the General with his sons and friends began to move out of the station, at the entrance to which the whole of the long procession intended to precede him was marshalled up the Wandsworth Road. After he had entered the Duke of Sutherland's carriage, which was waiting for him, a small bodyguard of those who had served with him in the campaign which led to the conquest of Southern Italy immediately formed round it. Thus accompanied, he drove out of the station, and emerged from the yard into the vast crowd, which received him with almost boundless enthusiasm and delight. Far and near, the trees, the walls, and housetops were covered with spectators, while up the road, from unseen thousands, came long rolling cheers, and the house-fronts were rippled over with handkerchiefs waving in all directions. The instant the General appeared, the procession, which had been patiently waiting for a long time, began moving past his carriage, and then it was seen at a glance that its utter dissolution as a procession was near at hand. The long waiting outside the station had been fatal to its integrity as a pageant. Its elements of display, always, at the best, of the most slender kind, were now still further marred by intervals of light carts and chaises filled with spectators. As many women as men, too, were in the ranks, and as the public soon found out that they could walk with the procession much more easily than in the crowd, and availed themselves most liberally of the permission so to do, the whole of the walking cortége gradually began to wear the aspect of a crowd in motion. As each of the societies, Trades, Temperance, Friendly, and Foresters, passed the General's carriage they stopped, took off their hats, and cheered him; and this process, which always lasted some few minutes, gave ample opportunities to the crowd to fill up the gaps thus made in the ranks of the procession. The procession first took its way by narrow and winding thoroughfares into Kennington Lane, and ultimately into Kennington Road, from which point its path was, or might have been, tolerably clear. A good deal of time was lost in these narrow gorges, where carriages in front checked their pace under a belief that they might be running away from those on foot, and others behind waited patiently, imagining that a "block" had occurred somewhere in front; but it was nevertheless in the wider thoroughfares, where space permitted crowds to gather more densely, that the difficulty of locomotion was mainly experienced. It was nearly sunset before the procession reached Westminster Bridge, and as the police had received orders not to interfere with the arrangements except to prevent a breach of the peace or to prevent accidents, the dense crowds which had assembled on the bridge effectually broke the little remaining order of the procession, and the Foresters had actually passed Charing Cross before the remainder of the cortége had entered Westminster. On emerging into Parliament Street and Whitehall, where every window and roof which commanded a view, even those of the Government offices, was crowded with spectators, the people collected on Westminster Bridge rushed along after the General's carriage with a frontage of 60 or 70 persons, crushing down platforms, stands, and whatever came in their way. At Charing Cross there was a body of spectators almost formidable in point of numbers, and the windows along Pall Mall were not less crowded than at other portions of the route. The cheering all along this line was equally cordial as on the southern side, but the progress of the carriage was so slow that when they reached Stafford House night had already fallen. The Duke and Duchess of Sutherland warmly welcomed Garibaldi at the entrance of the mansion, and the Earl of Shaftesbury and other members of the nobility were in waiting to offer their congratulations. On Tuesday morning the Polish Revolutionary Committee and a deputation from the vestry of St. Pancras had an interview and presented an address. In returning thanks to the latter the General said that he had a happy recollection of St. Pancras, as it was at the gate of "St. Pancrazio" at Rome, that he fought at the head of the Roman people against the attack of the French army on that city. In the afternoon, accompanied by the Duke of Sutherland, he went to Cambridge House and paid a visit of an hour to Lord Palmerston. He then drove with the Duke to the villa of the Duchess Dowager at Chiswick, where a distinguished party was assembled to meet him at a déjeûner. The road was lined with a considerable body of persons, who saluted him as he passed. The scene was quite a contrast to the vociferous demonstration of Monday, though the recognitions were quite as cordial. After the déjeûner he promenaded the grounds with his noble hostess, the Duchess of Norfolk, and several other ladies and gentlemen, and at the invitation of the Duchess Dowager planted a Cedrus Deodara on the lawn as a memorial of his visit. He returned to London at five o'clock, when he drove to Thurloe Square, and paid a visit to Mr. Stansfeld. In the evening the Duke and Duchess of Sutherland had a family dinner party at Stafford House to meet him. On Wednesday morning he paid a visit to Mr. Seely, M.P., at Princes Gate, and afterwards drove to Chesham Place, where he visited Earl Russell. He then proceeded with the Duke of Sutherland to Woolwich, where he spent a considerable time in an inspection of the resources of the Arsenal. In the evening a large and brilliant party, consisting of public men of all shades of English politics, met him at a dinner and evening party given by the Duke and Duchess of Sutherland. On Thursday morning he received at Stafford House a deputation from the city of Manchester, consisting of the Mayor and corporate authorities, who waited upon him to present an address voted by the Corporation. He next received a deputation from the Fire Brigade, consisting of more than 50 officers, headed by Captain Shaw, and expressed his great pleasure at seeing the brigade, which he considered to be a very fine institution, and composed of a noble body of men. The General was loudly cheered as as he retired to his room. At 11 o'clock Garibaldi left Stafford House, and paid visits to Mr. P. A. Taylor, M.P., at Notting Hill, to Signor Campanella, in Clifton Gardens, Maida Hill, and to Mr. Crawford, M.P., in Grafton Street, where he took luncheon. He then visited M. Gaetano Lemenzo, in Brompton Crescent; Mrs. Neal, in Alexander Square, Brompton; Mr. James France, in Onslow Terrace, and some other friends. He returned to Stafford House about half-past 6 o'clock, and dined with the Duke and Duchess of Sutherland and a select family party, including the Earl of Carlisle, who had just come over from Dublin. At 8 o'clock, accompanied by the Duke of Sutherland, he proceeded to the Royal Italian Opera House, to witness the performance of the operas of Norma and Massaniello. The event excited more than ordinary interest among the patrons and frequenters of the theatre, and possibly a more brilliant and distinguished audience never assembled within its walls. He arrived there in good time, and was received by the fashionable company with demonstrations of respect carried to such an extent that they became personally inconvenient, and Mr. Gye had some difficulty in making a way for him through the dense crowd of ladies who thronged the Floral Hall, through which he had to pass. In the house itself he was received with the greatest possible enthusiasm, the whole audience rising to receive him, and he was evidently delighted with his reception and with the performance, which he applauded loudly. Between the acts of the opera he paid a visit to Admiral Sir R. Mundy, who commanded the Mediterranean fleet during his operations in Sicily and Naples. He remained until the very close of the performance, and the moment he rose to leave his box the whole audience cheered and cheered again, many waving hats or handkerchiefs, while ladies in the boxes immediately above that which was the "State Box" for the occasion broke their bouquets into pieces, dropping the scattered flowers over the head of the popular chieftain as he bent forward in his well known grey capote to acknowledge the hearty salutations of the house. He was conducted by Mr. Gye to his carriage through the Floral Hall, which this time being kept private, he was free from those well-meant importunities which at the beginning of the evening had so inconveniently retarded his arrival. Yesterday morning a deputation from the Reform Club, consisting of Mr. Guildford Onslow, M.P., Mr. Otway, and Mr. Adams Smith waited upon him at Stafford House, in order to invite him to a banquet at the club. The General accepted the invitation for Thursday next. At 10 o'clock the General left town, accompanied by the Duke of Sutherland, for Bedford, where he witnessed the process of ploughing by steam. He returned to town early in the afternoon, and in the evening dined with Signor Panizzi, the Principal Librarian of the British Museum. It was his intention afterwards to visit the House of Commons. To-day he will go to the Crystal Palace. He will leave town privately, and arrive at the Palace about 2 o'clock, when a concert by Italian artistes will be given. Immediately after this swords will be presented to him and his son Menotti, with an address from the Italian Committee. The General will leave the Palace on his return about 5 o'clock. On Monday he will again go to the Palace to receive addresses from the City and Working Men's Committees. Since his arrival in London the General has been visited by Mr. Fergusson, the celebrated surgeon, under whose care he has much improved in health. The General's simple habits have been in no wise departed from since his sojourn at Stafford House. He rises at five, and breakfasts at six, the meal consisting of bread, grapes, cheese, and a glass of wine, and then smokes a cigar while walking in the grounds attached to the mansion.

School for Daughters of Military Officers.—A public meeting was held a few days since at Willis's Rooms for the purpose of establishing a school for the daughters of officers in the army. The Duke of Cambridge took the chair, and the meeting was addressed by General Sir W. Gomm, General the Hon. Sir Edward Cust, General Dacres, General Sir R. Airey, the Hon. General Ashburnham, the Chaplain-General; Sir J. Fergusson, M.P., and Mr. Colquhoun; and resolutions were adopted in favour of establishing a school in which the daughters of officers of limited means shall receive, at the lowest possible expense, a good, practical and religious education in accordance with the doctrines of the Church of England, but open to children of any religious persuasion. It was stated during the meeting that the Lansdowne College at Bath has been purchased for the proposed schools by means of a fund already in existence, raised soon after the Crimean war, for the benefit of the families of officers in the army. The building stands on about 8 acres of ground, which cost originally 16,000*l*., has been purchased for 6000*l*., and is well suited for the purpose. It admits of ready adaptation, and about 5000*l*. is required to fit up and furnish it for the accommodation of 100 girls, while not less than 2000*l*. per annum will be required to maintain the girls, with the necessary teachers and attendants.

The Shoeburyness Experiments.—On Thursday week the practice was attended by the Commander-in-Chief and the Secretary at War. The guns were laid for firing by the competitors themselves and not by the Shoeburyness officers, and if one elevation was not found to answer, the competitor was allowed to try another. At the close of the day's experiments Sir William Armstrong's 600-pounder was fired at a distance of 200 yards against a box-target, having an outer plate of 6½ inches of solid iron, backed up by 24 inches of teak, lined with an inner skin of iron 1 inch thick, making 7½ inches of iron and 24 inches of teak in all. With a charge of only 70 lb. of powder, a conical steel shot of 612 lb. weight, was sent clean through the target, from which the massive splinters flew like chips. On Friday the experiments were continued with a view to test the range rather than the accuracy of the different guns. On Monday the firing commenced at a stockade, and at increased ranges, and on Wednesday, after some discussions as to the proper mode of laying and sighting the guns, a competition for length of range took place, followed by some interesting experiments with shell fired against abattis. In a few days the real and most important trial of all, the question of endurance—the effort to break down the guns by rapid and continuous firing—will be made. In other matters it is said that the guns are equal, as far as the trials have yet gone; and that it is almost impossible to say which is the best, the Armstrong shunt gun or the Whitworth.

THE PUBLIC-HOUSES OF LONDON.—Few persons, says the "Cornhill Magazine," are aware of the immense sums spent in these places by the London workmen. An advertisement some time since appeared in the Despatch newspaper for the sale of a large public-house in Edgware Road, the returns of which were 240*l.* a week. This is an amount equal to the whole expenditure for wine, beer, and spirits of the Athenæum, Reform, and Conservative Clubs put together, with a balance of more than 1000*l.* a year to spare. The returns of the Trevor Hall, Knightsbridge, are said to exceed the expenditure in alcoholic liquors of the four largest clubs in St. James's put together, and yet there are 17 other public-houses, all doing a flourishing trade, within a radius of 300 yards of the building. Give every public-house or beershop in London an average frontage of 21 feet, and we shall find, if placed side by side, they would make a row of houses 39 miles in length. To find the amount of money spent annually in these establishments would require more time and space than we could bestow upon the question, but we will take one portion of it alone—the rent, taxes, gas, and establishment charges, all of which the customer has, indirectly, to pay for before he obtains the commodity he requires. Let us assume, then, that the average rent, taxes, and establishment charges of the London public-house to be 125*l.* per annum. This sum is far below the real amount, but we like always to work on minimum data.

MYSTERIOUS AFFAIR AT KENTISH TOWN.—On Saturday much excitement was created in Kentish and Camden Towns by the discovery of the body of Mrs. Esther Thomas, who had evidently been dead some days, in her house, No. 25, Hawley Road. Mr. Edward Thomas, deceased's husband, who is a musician, had left London for Liverpool about ten days before to fulfil an engagement there. On Thursday he wrote his wife a letter stating that he should be home on the following day about 5 o'clock P.M. On Mr. Thomas's arrival on Friday he found his house completely closed and locked up, and being unable to gain admission he consulted Mr. Jones, a butcher, in the neighbourhood, who said he had not seen Mrs. Thomas for some days. They then went to the house, and by removing a pane of glass, succeeded in gaining an entrance. The first thing that attracted attention was the parrot in its cage, with its head in its food box, dead. The doors were all fastened, and they were broken open with a cleaver. On entering the kitchen it is stated there was a leg of mutton which had been partially roasted, hanging in front of the fireplace, and had evidently been so for some days. On going upstairs to the bedroom Mrs. Thomas was found lying in her bed dead and nearly black from decomposition. The only living creature in the house was the dog, who, although he barked feebly, refused food when offered him. A little girl who attended daily to act as servant, states that on the morning after Mr. Thomas left she went to the house as usual, and after knocking for a long while, and being unable to get in, she returned home to her parents, who, finding the house locked up, thought Mrs. Thomas might have left town to join her husband, and therefore no notice was taken of the matter. Dr. Lankester has ordered a post mortem examination, preparatory to holding an inquest on the body.

GREAT ROBBERY OF GOLD BARS.—It will be remembered that in February last a vessel called the Golden Age, sank near San Francisco, laden with gold bars of great value. It appears that bars to the amount of about 50,000*l.* were subsequently recovered from the sea, and that the finder afterwards decamped with them. It is supposed that some of these bars have been brought to London, and a reward of 3000*l.* has been offered for the detention and apprehension of the thieves. One of the party has already been arrested.

THE PUBLIC HEALTH.—The Registrar-General's Weekly Return states that the deaths in London in the week that ended Saturday, April 9th, were 1501. In the corresponding week of the 10 years 1854-63 the average number, corrected for increase of population, was 1383. The present return is therefore 118 above the average. During the week the births of 1018 boys and 995 girls, in all 2013 children, were registered in London. In the 10 corresponding weeks of the years 1854-63 the average number was 1966.

Provincial.

EXMOUTH.—A Prussian merchant vessel put into this port on Monday to avoid capture by a Danish cruiser, which had given her chase. The cruiser afterwards sailed for Torbay.

GUILDFORD.—The adjourned inquest on the Rev. Frederick Cuthbert Beresford Erle, who was killed by being shot by a ramrod at the recent Volunteer Review, at Blackheath, was resumed on Monday. The evidence proved that the accident, which was traced to a private in the Queen's Westminsters, was really due to the dangerous way in which the crowd was mixed up with the Volunteers, there being no adequate force to keep the ground clear. The jury, by Lord Lovaine, their foreman, returned a verdict of Accidental Death.

MACCLESFIELD.—The London mail bag was stolen a few nights since from the Chelford railway station, and although the most searching investigation has been made by officers of the General Post Office, aided by a London detective, and a reward of 50 guineas has been offered by Government for the conviction of the thieves, no clue has yet been obtained of the guilty parties. The success with which the robbery was carried out leaves no room to doubt that it was well matured by skilled hands. It appears that the mail bags from Macclesfield and Knutsford are conveyed to Chelford by the usual mail carts, a Post Office guard accompanying the former. At Chelford they hung on three posts, a hundred yards apart, a man being stationed with a lamp at the two outside ones. The mail train from Manchester at 10 55 stops at Alderley for passenger accommodation, but does not stop at Chelford, the Post Office van of the train catching up the bags as they hang suspended from the posts. On the night of the robbery the bags were hung up as usual about 10 minutes before the passing of the mail, the men with lights watching the two outside posts as usual. As there are only two men to the three posts, the centre one was without a watcher, and it was from this post that the bags in question were stolen, during the short interval between their being hung up and the passing of the mail. Two hours and a half afterwards the guard, on his return by the down mail from Crewe, gave information that the London mail-bags on the centre of the three posts were not caught up. It was at first supposed to be an accident, but an hour's search made it apparent that a robbery had been committed. No tidings of the missing bags were heard till three days afterwards, when they were found in a plantation about three-quarters of a mile from the Chelford station, the strings cut, seals broken, and every letter and document cut open carefully as with a knife or some sharp instrument. It has since been ascertained by the letters that have been returned through the dead-letter office that the valuables stolen are postage stamps and banknotes, cheques, drafts, &c. Some of the money, however, was in half banknotes only; but in one or two instances the halves of 20*l.* notes were enclosed in separate envelopes, but sent by the same post. These, of course, are missing. The supposition is that the robbery was committed by some person hidden behind the low and recently cut fence that separates the railway from a field adjoining to and easily accessible from the high road. The detective officer found that he could get over the hedge, cross the line, take down the bags from the post, and return in the space of 40 seconds, thus showing the facility for committing the robbery unobserved on a dark night. The Macclesfield Corporation, in a special meeting, have made urgent representations to the Postmaster-General with reference to the uncertainty attending the present method of transmitting the bags, and a reply has been received that the matter is undergoing a rigid investigation.

ROTHERHAM.—A shocking murder was committed on Saturday evening near this town, resembling in its details the murder of Mr. Whittaker, a farmer, which was accompanied by the robbery from his person of 200*l.* The victim in this instance is John Cooper, of Handsworth, near Sheffield, a young man 27 years of age. It appears that on Saturday night last he left the nursery of Messrs. Fisher & Holmes, at Handsworth, where he was employed, to visit his father at Stone. On his way he called at Mottram's beerhouse at Brookhouse, where he had two glasses of ale, and sat talking until about 10 o'clock, when he left for his father's. Nothing more was heard of him until Sunday morning, when he was found by the roadside weltering in his blood, about midway between Slade Hooton and Roche Abbey. His skull was fractured, his eyes blackened, and his lower jaw broken. Near him was lying a hedge stake, which had been broken out of the hedge 50 yards from where he was found. His pockets were turned out, and everything he had was gone. The spot is a mile from any house, and is a most unfrequented spot, and from the appearance of the grass a deadly struggle seemed to have taken place. Deceased was a powerfully-built man, standing 6 ft. 1 in. high, and would be a fair match in a question of life and death for any two men. The affair is in the hands of the police, but as yet they have no clue to the perpetrators of the deed.

WINDSOR.—A few days since one of Her Majesty's keepers was making his customary inspection of the Royal deer in Windsor Great Park, and on passing the deer pen by Bears Rails observed his dog to remain for some distance behind him, and to leave the place reluctantly. The keeper returned to the spot and found the dog had scratched a large hole in the earth. The dog continued tearing up the earth until at last he came to a handkerchief, which contained a large number of valuable gold and silver watches, also a quantity of gold and silver chains. The property had evidently been stolen and placed there during the night, as many of the watches were still going with the right time of the morning indicated. It is expected that these articles may prove to be a portion of the plunder from a house at Henley-on-Thames, which had been broken into and robbed the night previous.

WORCESTER.—A young man, named Walter W. Jones, employed in the Engineer's office at the Great Western Railway Works, and son of a most respectable surgeon of this city, made an attempt on the lives of two persons on Tuesday. It appears that he had gone to the shop of a gunsmith in Worcester, and taken from the shop a six-barrel revolver pistol. Having by some means also obtained possession of powder and ball, he went down to the racecourse, where the Militia recruits were at drill, and there saw a young girl, named Emma Bell. He accosted her, and on her refusing to accompany him for a walk he presented the pistol at her. The girl raised her hand, Jones fired, and the ball passed through her hand. The girl cried out and ran away, on which Jones was followed by a number of persons. He contrived, however, to elude them for some time. Police-sergeant Drew, of the Worcester force, was among those who followed, and overtook him in a passage on the Moors, near the racecourse, when Jones again presented the pistol, and placing it against Drew's cheek fired. The ball carried away a portion of the officer's jaw and some teeth, and then entered a wall. Eventually Jones was captured and taken before the magistrates, by whom he was remanded for a week. On Wednesday the officer, who had been in a dangerous state, was pronounced better. No possible cause for the outrage can be assigned.

THE LATE FIRE AT QUEEN'S COLLEGE, CORK.—It may be remembered that Queen's College, Cork, has twice narrowly escaped total destruction by fire, and that there was a strong suspicion these fires were wilful. A strange scandal arose out of the first of these conflagrations, which happened in 1862. In the course of last year one of the professors, Dr. Bullen, wrote a letter to the Irish Government charging Sir Robert Kane, the Principal of the College, with having come to him and attempted to persuade him to sign a report implicating certain parties in the incendiary acts. The Lord Chancellor of Ireland and other visitors of the College were requested to inquire into the charges, and on their assembling in the College on Tuesday for that purpose, the affair came to an extraordinary and most unexpected conclusion. When the visitation was opened, counsel for Sir Robert Kane read a letter from Dr. Bullen, withdrawing in the most unqualified manner the serious charges he had brought against him, and tendering an ample apology. Mental excitement was the principal ground on which he excused his conduct. The Lord Chancellor said he would lay the letter before the Lord Lieutenant.

CENTRAL CRIMINAL COURT.—The Marylebone Murder.—Devine, 18, a very young-looking man, was charged with the wilful murder of Joseph Duck, a retired tradesman in Marylebone. The facts of the case have been recently given in our Metropolitan News, and the evidence against the prisoner, though of a circumstantial character, left no doubt of his guilt. The jury returned a verdict of Guilty, accompanied by a strong recommendation to mercy. In answer to the Court as to the grounds on which the recommendation was made, the foreman said the jury were of opinion that the prisoner inflicted the injuries on deceased while in the act of robbing him, but at the same time they thought he did not intend to murder him. The prisoner was then called upon in the usual form to say whether he had any reason to urge why sentence of death should not be passed upon him according to law. He made no reply, but covered his face with his hands and burst into tears. Mr. Justice Willes having put on the black cap, addressed the prisoner, and said that the recommendation of the jury should be forwarded to the advisers of her Majesty, whose prerogative alone it was to act upon it; but it was to warn him that the offence for which he had been convicted was one of such a terrible and alarming character, that a highway robbery accompanied by such violence as to cause death, that he should not be discharging his duty if he held out the slightest hope that the recommendation would be acted upon. His lordship then passed sentence of Death in the usual manner. The prisoner, who continued sobbing the whole time the judge was addressing him, when the sentence was passed burst into a fresh fit of weeping, and at the conclusion was so overcome, that he had to be assisted downstairs by the gaoler, murmuring that he was not guilty.

METROPOLITAN CATTLE MARKET.

Monday, April 11.

We have a few more Beasts than on Monday last; there is, however, a demand for them, and prices remain about the same as on that day. The number of Sheep is not quite so large, but the trade for them is worse, and a clearance cannot be effected, although lower prices are taken. Trade is slow for Calves and Lambs at Thursday's quotations. From Germany and Holland there are 1140 Beasts, 1360 Sheep, and 119 Calves; from Spain, 92 Beasts; from Ireland, 130; and 2920 from Norfolk and Suffolk.

The supply of Beasts is about the same as on Thursday last; the demand is not quite so good, and prices generally are lower. The number of Sheep exceeds the demand; Monday's quotations are realised for business done, but several remain unsold. There is more inquiry for choice Lambs, at rather higher rates. Trade is dull for Calves at Monday's quotations. Our foreign supply consists of 510 Beasts, 820 Sheep, and 370 Calves. Milch Cows, 70.

MARK LANE.—Monday, April 11.

The supply of Wheat from Essex and Kent to this morning's market was small, and factors not being inclined to accept lower prices, only a small portion of it was disposed of towards the close of the market. The sale of Foreign was of the smallest possible extent, at barely former prices. Barley sold slowly at last week's rates. Beans and Peas were unaltered in value. The Oat trade was very dull, and sales were made at a reduction of 6d. per qr. In Flour there was but little business done.

Friday, April 15.

The weather since the 8th has been fine, with a higher temperature, although the last three nights have been frosty. We are unable to report any amelioration in the dulness which has so long characterised the Wheat and Flour trades, and the tendency of prices throughout the kingdom continues to be downwards. The value of all kinds of Spring Corn remains generally unaltered, excepting perhaps Beans, which in a few instances have slightly improved. Since Friday last only one cargo of Wheat has been reported off the coast, and only two cargoes were left on sale yesterday. The floating trade has been inactive. Linseed and Cottonseed have been in good demand at rather higher prices; all sorts of grain, however, are dull, and Wheat has been sold about 1s. under late rates. Paris, April 14.—Flour is rather high. The six marks for delivery this month are quoted equal to 33s. 6d. per 280 lbs. The present stock of Flour is estimated at about 15,870 cwt. Wheat has remained unaltered in value, but is a little firmer. The arrivals of grain and Flour of all kinds during the week have been small. The attendance at this morning's market was very limited, as was also the sale of Wheat, Monday's prices for English being obtained with difficulty. The sale of Foreign was limited, but on the little business done extreme rates were insisted upon for Dantzic and Konisberg, owing to the notification of the blockade of those ports on the 19th instant; the value of other qualities was unaltered. Spring Corn was quiet without alteration in value.

Liverpool, April 12.—We have had a fair attendance of both town and country millers and dealers at market, but the inquiry for Wheat was found to be only of a most restricted character, at about the rates of Friday last. Flour irregular, both in demand and value Indian Corn was only saleable in retail, and prices must be quoted the turn in buyers' favour. Oats and Oatmeal depressed. Beans steady, at full prices.

Friday, April 15.—Wheat in moderate demand, at full rates for amber; other qualities 1d. lower. Flour unaltered. Indian Corn steady; mixed, 28s; Egyptian Beans without change in rates; Saidi, 31s. to 31s. 6d. Oats and Oatmeal unaltered.

PATENT GUTTA PERCHA SOLES.—IMPORTANT TO GARDENERS.—The Gutta Percha Company have the pleasure to acknowledge the receipt of the following letter from G. GLENNY, Esq., the celebrated Florist:—

"Gentlemen,—I have worn Gutta Percha Soles and Heels these two years, and being so much in a garden as I necessarily am in all weathers, and with the ground in all states, I would on no account be without them. As a matter of economy I would recommend Gardeners to use them, for they may repair the worn part at all times by warming the material at the fire, and pressing it from the thick parts to the worn parts, as easily as if it were so much dough. I think it the duty of all persons who must occasionally wet their feet to adopt a material that completely defies damp. Many a gardener would escape colds and rheumatism by the use of Gutta Percha Soles. Your obedient servant, G. GLENNY."

Every variety of Gutta Percha articles, such as Mill Bands, Tubing, Soles, Sheet, Pump, Buckets, Fire Buckets, Bosses, Union Joints, Flasks, Bottles, Bowls, Chamber Vessels, Toilet Trays, Sponge Bags, Curtain Rings, Galvanic Batteries, Calbotype trays, &c., manufactured by the Gutta Percha Company and sold by their wholesale dealers in town or country.

THESE MACHINES

ARE IN DAILY USE

AT THE

ROYAL GARDENS,

CRYSTAL PALACE GARDENS, &c.

In again submitting their LAWN MOWERS to the notice of purchasers, Messrs. SAMUELSON & Co. wish to state that they do not make annual changes in the principle of their LAWN MOWERS. Experience has fully proved that the general design on which their MACHINES have been built for many years past is the best, and their attention has been given therefore rather to substantial improvements in manufacture, reduction of the draught, and increase of durability by the use of malleable iron in place of cast metal, than to the production of ephemeral novelties. Their MACHINES are superior to all others in lightness of draught, elegance, and efficiency under all circumstances of ground and weather, being self-cleaning, and not liable to derangement in the gearing. Selections from several thousand Testimonials free on application.

The Furnishing of Bed Rooms.

HEAL AND SON have observed for some time that it would be advantageous to their Customers to see a much larger selection of BED-ROOM FURNITURE than is usually displayed, and that to judge properly of the style and effect of the different descriptions of Furniture, it is necessary that each description should be placed in separate rooms. They have therefore erected large and additional Show Rooms, by which they are enabled not only to extend their show of Iron, Brass and Wood Bedsteads, and Bed Room Furniture, beyond what they believe has ever been attempted, but also to provide several small rooms for the purpose of keeping complete suites of Bed Room Furniture in the different styles.

Japanned Deal Goods may be seen in complete suites of five or six different colours, some of them light and ornamental, and others of a plainer description. Suites of Stained Deal Gothic Furniture, Polished Deal, Oak, and Walnut, are also set apart in separate rooms, so that customers are able to see the effect as it would appear in their own rooms. A Suite of very superior Gothic Oak Furniture will generally be kept in stock, and from time to time new and select Furniture in various woods will be added.

Bed Furnitures are fitted to the Bedsteads in large numbers, so that a complete assortment may be seen, and the effect of any particular pattern ascertained as it would appear on the Bedstead.

A very large stock of Bedding (HEAL & SON'S original trade) is placed on the Bedsteads.

The stock of Mahogany Goods for the better Bed Rooms, and Japanned Goods for plain and Servants use, is very greatly increased. The entire Stock is arranged in eight rooms, six galleries (each 120 feet long), and two large ground floors, the whole forming as complete an assortment of Bed Room Furniture as they think can possibly be desired.

Every attention is paid to the manufacture of the Cabinet work, and they have just erected large Workshops on the premises for this purpose, that the manufacture may be under their own immediate care.

Their Bedding trade receives their constant and personal attention, every article being made on the premises.

They particularly call attention to their Patent Spring Mattress, the Sommier Elastique Portatif. It is portable, durable, and elastic, and lower in price than the old Spring Mattress.

HEAL & SON'S ILLUSTRATED CATALOGUE of Bedsteads, Bedding, and Bed Room Furniture sent free by Post.

From the ADDRESS of the PRESIDENT of the CAMBRIDGE UNIVERSITY NATURAL SCIENCE SOCIETY.

"I hope that a most valuable recent addition to scientific literature will soon find a place on our table. I allude to the 'Quarterly Journal of Science,' which is conducted by some of the best men in science. In addition to a complete summary of scientific progress during the past quarter, and reviews of recent scientific publications, it contains a series of deeply interesting original articles on popular subjects, thoroughly scientific, and models of simple elegant language. In short, it is the very magazine of all others which, as most suited to a society like ours, we should have placed first on our list had it been in existence when the list was compiled."

3. The Construction of Roads.
4. The Grubbing and Clearing of Old Woodlands, Enclosing, Fencing, and Reclaiming Land.

The owners of estates, not entailed, who may be desirous to avoid the expense or inconvenience of a legal mortgage, may also charge their Estates with an outlay in improvements under the simple and inexpensive process of the Company's Act.

The term of years for the rentcharge is fixed by the landowner, so as to adapt the amount of annual payment to the circumstances of the tenants, the term for building works being limited to 31 years.

No investigation of title being required, and the charge not being affected by encumbrances, no legal expenses are incurred.

The arrangements for effecting improvements are threefold:—

No. 1. The works may be designed and executed entirely by the landowner's agent, and the Company employed only to supply the loan and conduct the matter through all the official forms for charging the outlay on the estate.

No. 2. The Company will supply plans, specifications, and estimates for any improvements to be executed by the landowner's agent as under No. 1. In each of these cases the landowner will be solely under the control of the Enclosure Commissioners.

No. 3. The Company will undertake the entire responsibility of the improvements, prepare the plans, execute the works, and finally charge on the estate the actual amount expended, with their commission thereon, approved by the Enclosure Commissioners.

Landowners may thus obtain what assistance they require from the Company, and no more, in effecting the objects in view.

Works of Drainage and other improvements are also executed on commission for landowners, who merely require the skill and experience of the Company's officers and a staff in constant practice.

News of the Week.

IN the House of Lords on Friday the Settled Estates Amendment Bill and the Charitable Assurances Enrolment Bill were read a third time and passed. On Monday Earl GRANVILLE informed the House that in consequence of the recent vote in the House of Commons, Mr. LOWE had resigned the office of Vice President of the Committee of Council on Education, and took the opportunity of eulogising the abilities of Mr. LOWE, and of contradicting the statement that he had unduly interfered with the reports of the inspectors. The Vestry Cess Abolition (Ireland) Bill was read a third time and passed. On Tuesday, in answer to the Earl of MALMESBURY, Earl RUSSELL said that no answer had been received to the question he had instructed the English Minister at Berlin to ask of the Prussian Government respecting the bombardment of Sonderborg, except a remark that it was not usual for a neutral power to inquire into the conduct of belligerents. The Earl of CLARENDON referred to the report that the approaching departure of General GARIBALDI from this country had been hastened by her Majesty's Government, at the dictation of the EMPEROR OF THE FRENCH, and said that his Imperial Majesty was too high-minded to make such a communication, and that if it had been made, her Majesty's Government would not have condescended to listen to it. During his recent visit to Paris the reasons for GARIBALDI'S visit to this country were never alluded to in his presence and the EMPEROR had observed to him that he perfectly understood how the character and qualities of GARIBALDI were likely to excite the enthusiasm of the English people. The Landed Securities Company Bill, and the Bill amending the Improvement of Land Act, were read a second time. On Thursday, in reply to the Earl of CARNARVON, Earl RUSSELL stated that the reason why the Conference on the Dano-German question had been postponed until Monday next was that the Austrian and Prussian representatives had received instructions not to take part in it until Baron BEUST, the representative of the Germanic Confederation, was present. The Earl of MALMESBURY and Lord STRATFORD DE REDCLIFFE warned the Government to be on their guard against a repetition of these postponements.

In the Commons on Friday Mr. W. FORSTER called attention to the arrangements of the Foreign Office and the Board of Trade in reference to trade with foreign nations, and moved for a Select Committee on the subject. Mr. LAYARD and Mr. GIBSON assented to the motion, which was agreed to. On the report of the Committee of Ways and Means on the Sugar Duties, Mr. CRAWFORD moved a resolution in favour of a uniform duty, instead of a graduated scale of duties on sugars. Mr. CARDWELL opposed the motion, which was negatived on a division by 133 to 17. The resolution imposing an excise duty of 3*s.* 4*d.* per cwt. on sugar used in brewing for sale was then agreed to. On Monday Mr. Lowe announced that, in consequence of the vote of the House on the previous Tuesday, he had felt it his duty to resign the office of Vice President of the Council on Education. He complained that the House had arrived at a decision suddenly and in the absence of all evidence, and denied in the most direct terms the implied charge that the reports of the inspectors had been mutilated in the office. Lord Palmerston expressed his regret at Mr. Lowe's resignation, and said that the House must now be of opinion that its vote of Tuesday had been hastily adopted. It would not be respectful to the House to ask it to rescind its decision; but he should move on a future day the appointment of a committee to inquire into the subject. Mr. Disraeli called attention to the distribution of the Government Offices, by which not less than five Under Secretaries of State had seats in the House of Commons, and moved a resolution declaring that the provisions of the law, whereby four Chief Secretaries and four Under Secretaries, and no more were allowed to have seats in the House, had been violated, and that the seat of the fifth Under Secretary had been thereby vacated. Lord Palmerston admitted that the Government had unintentionally and by an oversight done what the law did not authorise, but the House and the Opposition must share the blame. Sir G. Grey assented to the first part of the resolution, but moved to amend the latter part by adding that a Select Committee should be appointed to inquire whether the Under Secretary last appointed had vacated his seat. With this amendment the motion of Mr. Disraeli was agreed to. The House then went into Committee on the Penal Servitude Acts Amendment Bill when Mr. Hunt moved to add to the 4th clause, words declaring that any holder of a license, who shall fail to report himself to the police at stated times, or change his locality without notice, shall be liable to summary conviction of a misdemeanor, and forfeit his licence. Sir G. Grey opposed the amendment, which was carried on a division by 148 to 120. The remaining clauses were agreed to with amendments. On Tuesday Lord Palmerston stated, in reply to Mr. D. Griffith, that the report of the sudden termination of General Garibaldi's visit to this country having been the result of some suggestion made by her Majesty's Government, at the dictation of the Emperor of the French, was entirely without foundation, and those who had spread or believed such a report did great injustice both to the Emperor and to her Majesty's Government. Mr. Osborne moved a resolution, declaring that it was both unjust and inexpedient to insist on the provisions of the Treaty of London, 1862, so far as they related to the order of succession in the Duchies of Schleswig and Holstein, as a basis for the settlement of the Dano-German dispute. Mr. Peacocke moved as an amendment a resolution approving the avowed policy of Her Majesty's Government to maintain at the Conference the Treaty of 1852. After a long debate, Mr. Osborne said that he was satisfied with the discussion, and would withdraw his motion, but this course being objected to, Mr. Peacocke withdrew his amendment, and Mr. Disraeli moved the previous question, which was carried. On Wednesday Mr. Blake moved the second reading of the Grand Juries (Ireland) Bill. Mr. P. Dawson moved as an amendment, that the Bill be read a second time that day six months. On a division, the amendment was carried by 150 to 27. The Bill was therefore lost. The Chief Rents (Ireland) Bill and the Joint-Stock Companies (Voting Papers) Bill, were read a second time. On Thursday, in reply to Mr. Kinnaird, the Chancellor of the Exchequer explained the proceedings which had given rise to what he termed "the absurd rumours" as to the reasons of General Garibaldi's departure from England, and declared that the "ridiculous stories" which had been circulated on the subject were entirely destitute of any shadow of foundation. On the order for going into Committee of Ways and Means, Mr. Sheridan moved as an amendment, that such a reduction of the Fire Insurance Duty as that contemplated by the resolution of the House, passed last session, would be best effected by an uniform reduction of 1*s.* per cent. on all descriptions of property liable to the duty. On a division, the motion for going into committee was carried by 170 to 117. The amendment was therefore lost. The House then went into Committee of Ways and Means, and agreed to the resolution of the Chancellor of the Exchequer reducing the duty on stock in trade to 1*s.* 6*d.* per cent. The Court of Justiciary (Scotland) Bill, the Fish Teinds (Scotland) Bill and the Summary Procedure (Scotland) Bill passed through committee. The Charitable Assurances Enrolments Bill was read a second time. The Bridges (Ireland) Bill was lost in committee on a division. The Select Committee on the Government Annuities Bill having been nominated, Sir M. Farquhar moved that the Committee have power to send for persons, papers, and records. On a division the motion was negatived by 127 to 104.

The fortress of Düppel, after a gallant defence of two months, was taken on Monday morning by assault, and the Danish army has lost its last hold on the mainland of Schleswig. The latest news says that the Danes have passed over to the Isle of Alsen, and that the greater part of the Prussian army with their artillery have been ordered to march into Jutland, to occupy the whole of that province and besiege Fredericia.

The France of Saturday states that France and England are agreed on the principal points of the Conference: and La Presse says, under reserve, that the interviews between the Emperor and Lord Clarendon have been of so reassuring a character for the peace of Europe that it is not impossible that considerable reductions may be made in the naval estimates of both countries.

From the United States we learn that the House of Representatives has unanimously passed a resolution declaring its intention not to recognise the new monarchy of Mexico.

The vacancy occasioned by Mr. Bruce's advance to the Vice-Presidency of the Education Committee will be filled by Mr. Thomas George Baring, now in the India Office; and the future Under-Secretary for India will be a peer, leaving only the usual complement of the four Under Secretaries in the House of Commons.

Convocation of the Province of Canterbury.—On Tuesday morning both houses assembled for the first time this year, at Westminster, for the despatch of business. In the Upper House the Bishop of London brought up the report of a committee appointed to inquire whether it would be desirable to license lay teachers to assist incumbents of parishes, and what should be the qualifications of such teachers. The report recommended that every incumbent of a parish should be empowered to recommend one or two of his parishioners, being communicants, to be lay teachers to help him; that the bishop should issue, by authority, his licence to those persons, to extend to the 31st of December, those licences being necessarily terminable, if not asked to be renewed in three months. It recommended that it should be left to the discretion of the bishop to test the qualifications of these teachers by examination, and that their duties should be, in addition to those usually performed by district visitors, to visit and pray with the sick and infirm, to conduct cottage and school-room lectures, and to hold short religious services in hamlets, and that they should be entrusted with the management of parochial charities. The report further stated that the committee thought it would be right that the incumbent should have the power of assigning a stipend to the new lay teachers where necessary, but they did not consider it necessary to give any specific name to the new order. His lordship concluded by moving the adoption of the report. The Bishop of Lincoln seconded the motion. The Bishop of St. David's doubted the power of their lordships to do what would clearly make a new order of preachers in the Church. After some discussion, ending in some verbal alterations, the report was received, and referred to the Lower House for its consideration. The Venerable Archdeacon Bickersteth, who had been elected prolocutor of the Lower House, was introduced in a Latin speech by the Rev. Canon Wordsworth. The Archbishop of Canterbury accepted the election in a Latin reply. The Bishop of Oxford gave notice that at the next session he would move a resolution affirming the necessity of a more satisfactory court of appeal in ecclesiastical causes. In the Lower House, the members proceeded to the election of a prolocutor in the room of Dr. Elliot, Dean of Bristol, who had resigned. Archdeacon Bickersteth was unanimously elected. The house then proceeded to discuss the question of diocesan synods. The debate was ultimately adjourned. In the Upper House on Wednesday, a deputation from the Lower House brought up a gravamen, signed by 40 members of the house, calling attention to the grave question involved in the publication of the book called "Essays and Reviews," and praying their lordships to take some action on the matter, with a view to the condemnation of that work. The Bishop of Oxford, in a speech of great length, moved the appointment of a committee to consider and report upon the subject. The House rose before the motion was disposed of. In the Lower House the adjourned debate on diocesan synods was resumed at great length, and after an amendment for a committee to consider the subject had been withdrawn, it was resolved without a division to present an address to the Upper House, stating their opinion that it is desirable to hold diocesan synods annually for consultation, and that, to render such an assembly as useful as possible, the bishop should invite to the synod any laymen in his diocese whose attendance he may deem desirable. On Thursday, in the Upper House, the adjourned debate on the Bishop of Oxford's motion, for a committee on the subject of Essays and Reviews, was resumed, when the motion was strongly opposed by the Bishops of London and St. David's. On a division the Bishops of Oxford, Llandaff, Salisbury, Glocester and Bristol, and Bangor, voted in favour of the motion, and the Bishops of London, St. David's, Lichfield, Lincoln, and Ely, against it. The numbers being thus equal, 5 to 5, the Archbishop of Canterbury gave his casting vote in favour of the motion, and a committee consisting of all the bishops of the province was appointed. In the Lower House a petition signed by several scientific men was presented, expressing their regret that researches into scientific truth were perverted into occasion for casting doubt upon the truth and authenticity of the Holy Scriptures, and praying Convocation to do all in their power to maintain a harmonious alliance between physical science and revealed religion. Dr. Jelf moved the adoption of the report of the committee on the burial service, recommending a revival of the discipline of the Church, instead of any alteration in the language of the service. The Dean of Norwich moved as an amendment that the recommendations of the report in favour of the restoration of discipline do not meet the alleged difficulties, which would be better remedied by modifying the expressions against which exception has been taken. The debate was ultimately adjourned.

Foreign.

FRANCE.—The Emperor has addressed the following letter to the Minister of Finance :—

"The happy solution of the Mexican affair creates in me a desire to see the country profit by the first repayment of the expenses of the war by diminishing the taxes on landed property. Be good enough, therefore, to see if it be not possible to effect the immediate suppression of the second decime registration fee, only preserving of the general law prepared by the Council of State, those arrangements which may be strictly necessary for balancing the Budget. This measure, together with the hopes of peace, which every day become more certain, will contribute, I trust, to the development of public prosperity."

In accordance with this letter, M. Rouher, the Minister of State, announced on Saturday, amidst loud cheers, in the Corps Législatif, the suppression of the seconde décime duty on registration, to commence from the 1st of July next, with a modification in the system of registration itself. These measures have been received with the greatest satisfaction by the public. The amount obtained by the second decime duty is estimated at 26,000,000f., and the modification in the system of registration will produce a further saving of 12,000,000f.; and to make up for the deficiency the Mexican indemnity will be applied. La France of Wednesday says:—

"It is asserted that it is impossible sufficiently to examine the Bill rearranging the registration fees. The Government will therefore confine itself this year to decreeing the suppression of half a decime upon the registration fee, and will bring the subject for debate before the Corps Législatif in its next Session."

On Friday the Corps Législatif voted the Conscription Bill, fixing the contingent of 1864 at 100,000 men. M. Picard moved an amendment to reduce the number to 80,000, which was rejected. The debate on the Budget is not expected to commence before next Monday. The convention between France and Mexico was published on Sunday. It states that the French troops are to be reduced as soon as possible to 25,000 men, including the foreign legion. The French troops will gradually evacuate Mexico, as the organisation of the Mexican troops proceeds. The foreign legion, composed of 8000 men, will remain in Mexico six years after the recall of all other troops. Wherever the garrison of a place may not be exclusively Mexican the commandant will be a Frenchman. The French commanders will not be able to intervene in the Mexican administration. The expense of the French expedition until July, 1864, is fixed at 270,000,000f. After July, 1864, Mexico will pay an annual indemnity of 1000f. for each French soldier. The Mexican Government will pay annually 25,000,000f. in cash, in liquidation of the sums due to France. The Convention further states that a committee will examine the claims of French subjects and the indemnities due to them. Señor Hidalgo had a private audience of the Emperor on Sunday, and remitted to his Majesty his credentials as Minister in Paris of the Emperor of Mexico, whose accession to the throne he officially notified. The Moniteur of Saturday publishes a decree of the Emperor Maximilian creating a committee at Paris deputed to form "a great book" of the foreign public debt of Mexico. Relative to the Mexican loan of 200,000,000f., 6,600,000f. in six per cent. Rente will be inscribed in the book to the credit of the French Government, who will give in exchange a receipt for 66,000,000f. applicable to the diplomatic convention of the 10th of April. Another decree of the Emperor of Mexico orders that 20 half-yearly coupons due to the Mexican bondholders are to be consolidated into New Three per Cent. Stock at an issuing price of 60 stock for each 100*l.* coupons. The Earl of Clarendon dined on Friday at the Tuileries, and on Sunday with M. Drouyn de Lhuys. On Monday night his lordship left Paris on his return to London. The Moniteur contains an article stating that there is no foundation for the assertion of two of the London newspapers, that the British Government had abridged the sojourn of Garibaldi in England to please the Emperor of the French. La France of Saturday evening states that France and England are agreed upon the principal points of the Conference, and that the two Powers will propose an armistice at the opening of the sittings. The Constitutionnel of Wednesday says:

"France intends to maintain the Treaty of 1852; but should the Conference find that convention no longer harmonises with the present state of affairs, and wish to replace it by a fresh combination, the French Government, in conformity with its principles, would not consider itself entitled to dispose of the population of the Duchies before they had been consulted. The statements of certain foreign journals, that it has been decided to take the vote of the Duchies by universal suffrage, are incorrect. France is aware that in such questions the usages of a country should serve as a guide."

La Presse of Saturday evening says, under reserve :—

"It is asserted that the interview between the Emperor and Lord Clarendon was of an essentially reassuring character for the peace of Europe, and that it is not impossible that considerable reductions may be made in the naval estimates of the Budgets of both countries. The debate on the Budget in the Corps Législatif has been postponed to the 25th inst., it having been supposed that an event might happen which would enable M. Fould to modify his financial plans."

The Government have prohibited an intended banquet and theatrical performance in honour of the tercentenary of Shakspeare. They were both got up by French literary men, and it is said that at the banquet a manifestation would have been made in favour of Victor Hugo. The English banquet announced for to-day has not been interfered with.

SPAIN.—The bill annulling the constitutional reform has been adopted in the Cortes by 187 against 17 votes. The bill on the press was brought forward on Friday. The Queen will leave for Aranjuez on the 22d inst., accompanied by Señor Mon. The Ministry is strong, notwithstanding the current rumours of agitation and uneasiness existing among political parties.

SWITZERLAND.—The Swiss Federal Council have resolved to put in force the decree of expulsion against Mazzini, on the ground that he has lately several times abused the right of hospitality. Orders have consequently been despatched to the different cantons to that effect.

THE DANISH DUCHIES.—The fortress of Düppel was captured by the Prussians on Monday by assault. This event had been anticipated for several days, extraordinary efforts having been made by the besiegers for the attack by the construction of new parallels, and batteries, and by keeping up the bombardment day and night almost without intermission. The assault was delivered at 10 o'clock on Monday morning. A terrible fire from the Prussian artillery destroyed three redoubts, which were immediately occupied by the besiegers. The left wing of the position was consequently given up, and the Danish troops were compelled to fall back, with great loss. The evacuation of the right wing took place under more favourable conditions, but also with considerable loss, the greater part of four Danish regiments being annihilated. The tête-de-pont and the bridges were demolished by the Prussian artillery, but were defended by the Danes until the army had crossed to the Island of Alsen. The Rolf Krake arrived too late to take part in the defence of the works; she was struck by some shells and retired. 2600 Danish soldiers, 40 officers, 90 guns, and many Dannebrogs, fell into the hands of the Prussians. The Danes lost in killed and wounded between 80 and 100 officers, and 4000 men; General Duplat and two commanders of brigade were among the killed. The Prussian loss in killed and wounded amounted to two generals, 60 officers, and upwards of 1000 men. Immediately after the storming of the tête de-pont the greater part of the troops and the artillery were ordered to march into Jutland, to occupy the whole of that province and to besiege Fredericia. On Tuesday hostilities were suspended from 10 A.M. until 6 P.M. to allow the Danes to evacuate Sönderborg. If the place was not evacuated by that time the bombardment was to re-commence. During this suspension of hostilities a flag of truce was sent to the Prussian army, to obtain intelligence of the Danish officers wounded and prisoners. 811 Prussians, many of whom were severely wounded, and 21 Danish officers and 580 men, were then in the hospital at Gravenstein. On Friday General Mouster made an expedition to Julsminde, and carried off a considerable amount of military stores. On Sunday afternoon Captain Hoffmüller and Lieut. Hassel, of the 15th Regiment of Infantry, landed with 16 men on the island of Alsen. They drove away some Danish soldiers, and spiked the two guns of a Danish battery. Large masses of Danes being then observed issuing from the adjoining wood, the Prussians withdrew to their positions without loss, carrying away with them all the war material and ammunition. On Thursday morning the King of Prussia, accompanied by the Minister of War, Herr von Roon, arrived at Rendsburg. His Majesty was enthusiastically received at the railway station. Herr Wiggers addressed the King, who replied as follows:—

"The cause of the Duchies is sacred to me. The work which we have commenced with such earnestness shall be completed in like manner. The people may be assured that the blood of my children has not been shed in vain."

Young girls dressed in the national colours strewed flowers before the King. The band played the Prussian National Hymn and the song of Schleswig-Holstein, amid the cheers of the people. Salutes were fired from the Carlshütte (an iron foundry near Rendsburg). The magistracy and town council of Kiel have since sent a deputation to Flensburg to pay their respects to the King. They requested all the Holstein communes, by telegraph, to join them. A Bremen ship and three Hamburg vessels were captured on Tuesday by Danish frigates off the Weser. The report that the Hamburg and New York steamer Bavaria was among these captures was unfounded. The Danish line-of-battle ship Skiold, with 22 other vessels, was in sight near Horup Hav on Tuesday. Two hundred and fifty officials of the various Governmental departments, who have taken the oath of allegiance to King Christian, held a meeting at Neumunster on Sunday, when it was resolved to retract the oath, and to send intelligence of the same to Copenhagen.

FRANKFORT.—The Federal Diet having obtained the sanction of the King of Saxony for the nomination of Baron von Beust as their representative at the Conference, the latter has declared himself ready to accept the nomination, and expressed his thanks to the Federal Diet for its choice. On Monday morning the Baron left Dresden for London to attend the Conference as representative of the Federal Diet, visiting Gotha on his way by the invitation of the Duke of Saxe-Coburg. On Saturday he had a long conference at Dresden with a deputation from the Holstein Estates, which had arrived in that capital for the purpose.

PRUSSIA.—A despatch from Berlin of Wednesday says, that as the British Cabinet had fixed the 20th inst. as the date of the meeting of the Conference without the consent of the great German Powers, and without considering that Baron von Beust could not arrive in London for a few days, the Prussian representatives in London had received instructions not to be present at the opening of the Conference as fixed by England. It is asserted that the Austrian representatives had received similar instructions. The victory before Duppel was announced by salutes on Monday evening. Great crowds of people surrounded the Royal Palace, cheering the King and Queen, and singing the Prussian National Hymn. Their Majesties appeared on the balcony, and thanked the people. Hearty cheers were given also for the army, and many houses were magnificently illuminated. The King immediately sent the following telegraphic message to Prince Frederick Charles, and on Wednesday left Berlin for the seat of war :—

"Next to the Lord of Hosts I have to thank my splendid army and thy leadership for the glorious victory of this day. Express to the troops my highest acknowledgment and my Royal thanks for their performances." "WILHELM."

The Nord-Deutsche Allgemeine Zeitung of Tuesday says that the occupation of the whole of Jutland has been resolved upon, as a pledge for the indemnification of those Prussian and German subjects who have suffered losses by "Danish piracy." It is also announced that the Prussians will energetically contend at the Conference for the rights of neutrals.

AUSTRIA.—The official Wiener Zietung of Saturday says :—

"The two great German Powers consider substantial and permanent guarantees as an indispensable condition for the welfare of the Duchies, and as the basis of any resolutions to be taken by the Conference. The leading points of these guarantees can only be—'The inseparability of the Duchies, their occupying towards Germany the position of protected States, and finally their administrative and political independence. The representatives of the German Powers will not deviate from these points.'"

Hungary.—Count Forgach, the Hungarian Aulic Chancellor, has resigned at the request of the Minister President. He will be succeeded by Count Herman Zichy.

Italy.—The Emperor and Empress of Mexico arrived in Rome on Monday and took up their residence at the Mareschotti Palace. Their reception was brilliant. An immense crowd had assembled at the railway station, and the French regimental bands performed as they passed through the streets. On Tuesday the Emperor and Empress had an audience of the Pope. They also visited the Basilica of the Vatican, the ex-King of Naples, the Neapolitan Royal family, and Cardinal Antonelli. In the evening their Majesties gave a dinner party, followed by a reception, which was attended by the Cardinals, the Pontifical Ministers, the diplomatic body, and the Roman nobility. On Wednesday the Emperor and Empress attended mass at the Vatican, and the Pope afterwards returned the visit of their Majesties. In the afternoon the Emperor and Empress left Rome for Civita Vecchia, where they embarked on the same evening for Mexico.

Poland.—The investigation into the affairs of the Credit Institution of Landed Proprietors was made on the 14th, when the books and assets were declared to be perfectly in order. An Imperial decree has since been published ordering the issue by the Institution of duplicates of the bonds which have been purloined from the public treasury in Warsaw. An Imperial ukase has been issued withdrawing the administration of the diocess of Warsaw from Monsignore Felinski. It is asserted that the Russian Government is making preparations for the secularisation of the convents, and intends taking measures against the Catholic clergy.

The Danubian Principalities.—The Wanderer publishes news from Jassy announcing that General Kotzebue, the Commandant of Odessa, had received orders from St. Petersburg to enter Moldavia under certain circumstances. A Russian officer communicated these orders to the Roumain Commandant. Great excitement was caused by the intelligence.

India.—Advices have been received from Sir Charles Bright announcing the entire completion of the Persian Gulf cable on the 27th of March. The line was working excellently through its whole length. The land line between the head of the gulf and Bagdad is not yet completed.

China.—Major Gordon has attacked Eshing, which was subsequently evacuated by the garrison. Frightful destitution prevails in Northern China. Sir Harry Parkes has arrived at Shanghai and taken charge of the Consulate.

United States. — The Federals at Somerville, Tennessee, were defeated by the Confederates under General M'Cullough on the 30th ult., with a loss of three officers and 75 men killed and wounded. General Forrest is moving out of Kentucky, and it is rumoured that he intends attacking Memphis. A slight engagement, lasting three hours, occurred on the 28th ult., 35 miles above Alexandria, Louisiana, between 8000 Federals and the Confederates, who were estimated 12,000 strong. The Federals are reported to have captured 500 prisoners, and then continued advancing, endeavouring to bring on a general engagement. The Confederate ram Tennessee is reported to have sunk at Grant's Pass, Mobile, during a gale. St. Louis telegrams of the 5th state that the Confederates in Mississippi are re-occupying their old lines on Big Black and Yazoo Rivers. They are also constructing strong fortifications at the Orange and Alexandria Railway crossing of the Rapidan. On the 5th General Grant returned to the Army of the Potomac. It is reported that General Meade is to be removed, and that active commands will be offered to Generals M'Clellan and Fremont. Mr. Seward has sent to the Congressional Committee on Immigration the outline of a Bill which provides for the advance of passage money to emigrants to America as a loan, to be afterwards repaid by their labour. The Bill authorises the naturalisation of foreigners after one year's residence. The House of Representatives on the 4th unanimously adopted a resolution by Mr. Winter Davis, declaring that the United States would never recognise or tolerate a monarchy in Mexico. The Senate has passed a resolution amending the constitution so as to abolish slavery. The resolution has yet to pass the House of Representatives and the State legislatures. In Louisiana the election for delegates to the State Constitutional Convention has resulted in the success of the Free State party. An enormous mass meeting of working men has been held at New York, protesting against legislative interference with strikes.

Mexico.—Accounts from Vera Cruz to March 19 state that there is no military news. The army of Juarez no longer exists, Juarez himself being a fugitive, and his whereabouts unknown. There are only some bands of plunderers wandering about the country.

San Domingo.—Advices from San Domingo state that the town of Palama and the insurgent garrison, with the stores of provisions and ammunition, had fallen into the hands of the Spaniards. The Government is now preparing for a decisive campaign, and General Gandara is on the point of setting out for Manilla with all the available troops.

Parliament.

HOUSE OF LORDS.

Friday.—The Reserve Force.—In answer to a motion by the Earl of Lucan for returns of the strength of the reserve force, Earl De Grey and Ripon said that it was probable that the loss to the army this year, according to the provisions of the Limited Enlistment Act, would amount to 4000 men. To give an additional inducement to the men to re-enlist, he proposed to give an additional bounty of 1*l.* The Government were convinced that the act had carried out the object for which it was passed, and that they had no intention of altering it, whilst they were ready to listen to any suggestions for improvement.—The Earl of Dalhousie was glad to find that the Act had worked satisfactorily. He would never have introduced it if it had not had the sanction of the Duke of Wellington, who supported it in every step. The Settled Estates Act Amendment Bill, and the Charitable Assurances Enrolment Bill, were read a third time and passed.

Monday.—The New Gun.—The Earl of Derby called attention to the favourable trials of the piece of ordnance invented by Mr. Mackay, of Liverpool, which, he said, bids fair to become a formidable rival to the guns of Mr. Whitworth and Sir W. Armstrong.—Earl De Grey and Ripon said that the reports in the newspapers as to the merits of the gun in question were confirmed by the officer deputed by Government to be present at the trial; but that at the distance at which the gun was tried equally satisfactory results had been attained by other guns, which subsequent trials at other ranges had not realised. At present, therefore, a decisive opinion could not be formed as to the ultimate value of Mr. Mackay's invention. The Earl of Hardwicke denounced the Armstrong gun as unsuitable to the navy.—The Duke of Somerset said that he had obtained from Sir W. Armstrong a muzzle-loading wrought iron gun for present use, which had been satisfactorily tried; but that, with respect to rifled guns generally, there was so much difference of opinion among the highest authorities that he could not take upon himself the responsibility of ordering any large number of rifled ordnance for the navy.—After some remarks from the Earls of Malmesbury and Ellenborough, the subject dropped. The Steam Rams.—The Earl of Derby gave notice that on Tuesday, the 26th inst., he should call attention to the correspondence between her Majesty's Government and Messrs. Laird, of Birkenhead, in reference to the steam rams in the Mersey. Committee of Council on Education.—Earl Granville announced that, in consequence of the vote of the House of Commons on Tuesday last, Mr. Lowe had resigned the office of Vice-President of the Committee of Council for Education. He paid a high compliment to the ability and energy of the right hon. gentleman, under whose auspices, he said, the Education Department of the Government had advanced immensely in efficiency, and asserted that Mr. Lowe had not been guilty of interfering in any improper way with the reports of the inspectors of schools.—The Earl of Derby admitted that a certain discretion ought to be allowed to the chief of every department to strike out from the reports it received the irrelevant matter that might lead to much controversy; otherwise official reports might become pamphlets advocating individual opinions. He felt confident that Lord Granville would never allow any report to be laid before Parliament so altered as to convey a meaning not intended by the writer, or giving undue favour to the particular views of the Government itself. He understood that a committee of the House of Commons was to be appointed to inquire into the subject. This appeared to him the most expedient course to be adopted. The Union Relief Aid Acts Continuance Bill and the Land Drainage (Provisional Orders) Bill were read a second time. The Vestry Cess Abolition (Ireland) Bill was read a third time and passed.

Tuesday. — The Departure of Garibaldi. — The Earl of Clarendon, in referring to a rumour that the departure of General Garibaldi was to be traced to suggestions from the Government at the dictation of the Emperor of the French, denied that there was the slightest truth in the report. During his recent visit to Paris no allusion was made either directly or indirectly by the Emperor of the French or by any member of his Government with respect to the cause of his arrival in this country or as to the probable time of his departure. He would not say that the subject was not alluded to, for it was adverted to by himself, and he said that the enthusiasm with which General Garibaldi was received on his entrance into London was caused by the circumstance of his having risen from the ranks of the people by the services he rendered to his country, and because he was brave and honest, and that similar scenes of enthusiam would await him in different parts of England. Nobody was more convinced than himself of the inconvenience and impropriety of alluding to any communication with which he was honoured by the Emperor of the French; but he thought he was not betraying any confidence when he stated that the Emperor said he fully understood and entirely believed how such qualities as those went home to the hearts of the English and commanded their admiration. As to the pending Conference, no concessions had been asked from the English Government, the Emperor wishing that on all questions that might arise a cordial understanding should exist between the two countries. Bombardment of Sonderborg.—The Earl of Malmesbury asked whether any reply had been received to the inquiries which the Government had made at Berlin with respect to the bombardment of Sönderborg without notice, and the destruction of unarmed and inoffensive inhabitants. He denounced that proceeding in strong terms, and said that every private letter confirmed the original account of that great outrage upon humanity. — Earl Russell said that no reply had been received from Berlin, and he believed that the silence of Prussia was to be attributed to the opinion held by that Power that England, being a neutral Power, had no right to make such an inquiry. He agreed with the Earl of Malmesbury that the bombardment of Sonderborg was repugnant to the feelings of humanity, and inconsistent with the practice of civilised nations. The Landed Securities Company Bill was read a second time on the understanding that it was to be referred to a select committee.—The Lord Chancellor moved the second reading of the Land Improvement Act (1864) Bill, the object of which is to grant facilities for the improvement of estates. He anticipated very beneficial effects from the operation of the measure.—After a few words from Lord Berners the Bill was read a second time, and referred to a select committee. The Union Relief Aid Act Continuance Bill passed through committee.

Thursday.—The Joint-Stock Companies (Foreign Countries) Bill was read a second time. The Union Relief Aid Acts Continuance Bill and the Land Drainage (Provisional Orders) Bill were read a third time and passed.—Lord Chelmsford called attention to the returns made to the House under the Land Transfer Act, and argued that the results which were anticipated from the passing of the Act had not been realised. Only 65 applications for registration had yet been made, and only 11 estates had been registered. He therefore regarded the Act as a complete failure.—The Lord Chancellor denied that the Act had been a failure, and experience proved that all such changes were very slowly adopted. The Act only came into operation in October, 1862. From that time until March last property to the amount of 2,000,000*l.* had been registered, and numerous applications for registration had since been made.—After some observations from Lord Cranworth, the Duke of Montrose, and Lord Overstone, the subject dropped.—In reply to the Earl of Carnarvon, Earl Russell stated that the reason why the Conference on the affairs of Denmark and Germany had been postponed until Monday next was that the Austrian and Prussian representatives had received instructions not to take part in the Conference until M. Beust, the representative of the Germanic Confederation, was present.—The Earl of Malmesbury hoped the Government would be on their guard against a repetition of these postponements.—Lord Stratford de Redcliffe thought the proceedings of Austria and Prussia ought to be closely observed, as the hostilities were not only continued in a cruel and murderous spirit, but there was an apparent intention to extend them to the whole of Jutland.

Friday.—Sentence of Death. — The Earl of Ellenborough introduced a Bill to relieve the Home Secretary from the sole responsibility of deciding whether the sentence of death should be carried out, by providing that the subject should be considered by the whole Cabinet, and that the result arrived at should be embodied in an order of the Queen in Council. The Bill was read a first time. The Metropolitan Railways.—The Earl of Derby moved that it shall be an instruction to the committee on every bill for the construction of a new railway within the metropolis, to insert provisions securing to the labouring classes a cheap transit by a morning and evening train, with such modifications as may appear required by the circumstances of each case.—Lord Stanley of Alderley, Earl Grey, the Earl of Ellenborough, and the Earl of Shaftesbury entirely concurred in the motion, which was agreed to. [Left sitting.]

HOUSE OF COMMONS.

Friday.—Under Secretaries of State.—Mr. Disraeli called attention to the fact that at the present moment not less than five Under Secretaries of State occupied seats in the House of Commons, being one more than was authorised by statute.—Lord Palmerston said that no change had recently taken place, and that these officers were precisely in the same position as they had been for some years past.—On the order for going into Committee of Supply, Mr. W. Forster called attention to the arrangement between the Foreign Office and the Board of Trade in reference to trade with foreign nations; and, after representing the inconveniences suffered by the commercial community by having to deal with the two offices, by the difficulty of getting them together, and the want of responsibility under such a system, moved for a Select Committee to inquire whether means could not be devised to put the trading interests in direct communication with the Foreign Office. In the course of his speech, he adverted to the success of the French Treaty, which he said was wonderful, and taught a lesson to the nations of Europe.—Mr. Layard explained that there was not any divided responsibility between the Foreign Office and the Board of Trade, and that the present system of conducting business in those departments was as good as any that could be devised. Any attempt to bring the machinery of the Board of Trade into the Foreign Office would be impracticable. The inconvenience referred to was caused by the difficulty in making and carrying out commercial treaties with foreign nations, for which neither the Foreign Office nor the Board of Trade were responsible. With regard to a Committee of Inquiry, he had no objection whatever to its appointment, as his desire was to make our commercial relations with foreign countries as satisfactory as possible.—Lord Stanley thought a fair primâ facie case for inquiry had been made out.—Mr. Barnes and Mr. Bass supported the motion.—Mr. Henley also approved of the motion, although he could not exactly see his way to remedy the evil complained of.—Mr. Newdegate expressed his obligations to Lord Palmerston for the facilities given for obtaining returns through our consuls. He considered, however, that the duties of consuls ought to be limited to commercial functions, and should not be mixed up with politics.—Mr. M. Gibson was not prepared to say that the Board of Trade was absolutely perfect in its machinery, and was therefore willing to agree to inquiry; but he denied that there existed that divided responsibility which Mr. Forster had complained of.—Mr. Cobden commented upon the vast progress which had been made of late years in our commercial relations, and contended that the Board of Trade had always been in advance of the Foreign Office in opening up new markets for the absorption of our manufactures.—After a few words from Mr. Bazley, the motion for a committee was agreed to. Crime in Ireland.—Mr. Whiteside moved for returns of indictable offences tried before the judges at the late assizes for the counties of Roscommon, Cavan, Longford, Limerick, and Westmeath.—Sir Robert Peel assented to the motion, and gave explanations with regard to the state of crime in those districts, and the measures adopted by the Irish Executive for its repression. The discussion was continued by Mr. M'Mahon, The O'Connor Don, Lord C Hamilton, and other members.—The Attorney-General for Ireland reviewed the moral condition of the country, and the organisation of the police force, claiming for the former a high place among the nations of Europe, and for the latter the reputation of being thoroughly efficient in the discharge of their duties. The motion was withdrawn. The Sugar Duties.—On the report of the resolution of the Committee of Ways and Means relating to the sugar duties, Mr. Crawford moved a resolution, that it is not possible for the officers of the Customs to ascertain by inspection the quantity of crystallisable saccharine matter contained in any sample of sugar, and that a law which seeks to effect such an object is unjust to the producer, while it excludes large quantities of fine sugars from the market, and thereby injures both consumers and the revenue by limiting the supply.—Mr. Potter seconded the motion.—Mr. Cardwell opposed it, urging that the propositions contained in it were based on a misconception of facts, and admitted of a clear refutation. On a division, the motion was negatived by 133 to 17, and the report of the Committee of Ways and Means was agreed to. The House then went into Committee, and agreed to the resolution for carrying out the proposition in the budget relating to excise duty on sugar used in brewing. The remaining business was then disposed.

Monday.—Resignation of Mr. Lowe.—Mr. Lowe made a personal explanation with reference to the resignation of his office as Vice-President of the Committee of Council for Education. Adverting to the resolution passed by the House on Tuesday last which condemned the practice of mutilating the reports of the inspectors of schools, he declared emphatically that he had never either marked or mutilated any of the reports in question, but that a practice had originated in the department, when it was under the control of Mr. Adderley, for a clerk to mark certain passages, in order to attract the notice of the President or Vice-President. Mr. Adderley had struck out certain passages thus distinguished, but when the practice of marking passages came to his (Mr. Lowe's) knowledge two years since, he issued peremptory instructions for its discontinuance. The fact that he himself had not seen the marks set against the paragraphs was to be attributed to the circumstance that he was physically unable to read lengthy manuscripts, and that in consequence they were read to him by his secretary or by a clerk. He submitted that the House had arrived at a hasty and unjust decision, and that it had condemned and censured him without affording him an opportunity to answer the evidence brought against him.—Lord R Cecil expressed his regret that Mr. Lowe had taken up the matter in a personal sense, as the resolution which had led to his retirement had been directed against the Committee of Council, and not against the right hon. gentleman himself. If the latter had on Tuesday night made the frank explanation which he had now offered to the House, the resolution might not have been pressed to a division, or the result of the division might have been different.—Lord PALMERSTON, having paid a high compliment to the administrative capacity of Mr. Lowe, said that he had endeavoured, but to no purpose, to prevent him from resigning his office, as he did not consider that the resolution of Tuesday last amounted to a vote of censure upon him personally. He would not ask the House to reverse its decision, but he intended on Thursday to move the appointment of a select committee to ascertain the manner in which the Committee of the Privy Council for Education conducts its business in reference to the reports of her Majesty's inspectors of schools.—Mr. DISRAELI, on the part of the Opposition, declared that they accepted the statement of Mr. LOWE, so far as his personal honour was concerned, as perfectly satisfactory. He regretted, in common with the noble lord at the head of the Government, that the country had lost so competent a public servant as Mr. Lowe had proved himself to be, but contended that the misfortune was to be attributed to the circumstance that the right hon. gentleman had not been supported by his colleagues. —After a few words from Mr. WALTER and Mr. W. E. FORSTER, disavowing any personal feeling against Mr. LOWE, the subject dropped. Under Secretaries of State.—Mr. DISRAELI brought under notice, as a question of privilege, the circumstance that throughout the present session of Parliament five Under Secretaries of State had been sitting in the House instead of four, which was a violation of the statute. He submitted a resolution to the effect that notice having been taken by a member of the House that more than four Under Secretaries of State had been sitting and voting in the House at the same time during the present session, resolved that the provision of the law had been violated, and that the seat of the fifth Under Secretary of State had been thereby vacated.—Lord PALMERSTON was ready to admit that the Government had unfortunately and by oversight done that which the law did not allow. He was, however, prepared to take the whole of the blame upon himself, although he held that the Opposition, and indeed the House generally, were likewise to blame, because the peculiar function of the Opposition was to watch the conduct of the Government and to pick them up even before they fell. Looking at the subject from this point of view, the Government were justified in complaining that the Opposition had allowed them to go on so long breaking the law. He suggested that the better course would be to bring in a bill of indemnity.—The ATTORNEY-GENERAL explained the provisions of the statute, and pointed out an objection to the latter part of the resolution.—Mr. WALPOLE expressed a doubt whether, by the 29th section of the statute of Anne, the last appointed Under Secretary of State had not made himself liable to a penalty of 500*l*.—Sir G. GREY thought the more advisable course would be to appoint a select committee to consider the whole subject in connection with the proposed bill of indemnity. He suggested that the House should agree to the first portion of Mr. Disraeli's motion, and omit the second, substituting for it the words, "and that a Select Committee be appointed to consider whether the Under Secretary of State who was last appointed to that office had thereby vacated his seat."—After a few words from Sir F. KELLY, the motion of Mr. Disraeli, with the amendment suggested by Sir G. GREY, was agreed to. A new writ was then ordered to issue for Merthyr Tydvil, in the room of Mr. H. A. Bruce, who has accepted the office in the Education Department, vacant by the resignation of Mr. Lowe.—The House then went into Committee on the Penal Servitude Acts Amendment Bill.—Mr. ADDERLEY moved a resolution to the effect that the ticket-of-leave system without police supervision should no longer be continued. After a brief discussion the motion was withdrawn. Clauses 1 to 3 inclusive were agreed to.—On clause 4, Mr. HUNT moved to add the following words:—"If any holder of a license who shall be at large, shall fail to report himself to the chief police station of the borough or district where he shall be on his arrival therein, and subsequently on the first day of each month, or shall change his locality without having previously notified the same to the police station to which he last reported himself, he shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanour, and may be summarily convicted thereof, and his license shall be forthwith forfeited by virtue of such conviction."—The amendment was opposed by Sir G. GREY, Mr. WHITBREAD, and Mr. HENLEY, and supported by Mr. BEACH, Mr. MARSH, Mr MOOR, and Mr. H. SEYMOUR. On a division, it was carried against the Government by 148 to 120. The remaining clauses were agreed to, and the Bill passed through Committee. The High Court of Bombay Bill and the Court of Chancery (Despatch of Business) Bill were read a second time. The Common Law Procedure (Ireland) Amendment Bill was read a third time and passed.

TUESDAY.—Departure of Garibaldi.—In reply to Mr. D. GRIFFITH, Lord PALMERSTON stated that he had heard the report that the sudden termination of General Garibaldi's visit to this country was the result of some suggestion made by her Majesty's Government, and that that suggestion had been dictated by a communication received from the Emperor of the French. All he could say was that those who had either spread or believed such a report did great injustice both to the Emperor of the French and to her Majesty's Government. The Emperor of the French was too high-minded and generous to have made any such an application to the Government; and if any foreign sovereign were to make any communication of the kind it would be civilly but firmly resisted and repelled. He had reason to believe that the Emperor of the French regarded the reception which Garibaldi had met with in this country as extremely creditable to the national feeling. With regard to her Majesty's Government, they had nothing to do with shaping General Garibaldi's arrangements; and he was told that the visit was to be brought to an earlier termination than was at first intended purely and entirely by a regard to his health. The Danish Question.—Mr. OSBORNE moved "That it is both unjust and inexpedient to insist on the provisions of the Treaty of London, 1852, so far as they relate to the order of succession in the Duchies of Schleswig and Holstein, as a basis for the settlement of the Dano-German dispute." He contended that Denmark had not performed her part of the Treaty of 1852 as regards Schleswig and Holstein, and urged that the policy pursued by Earl Russell, while extremely injurious to the prestige of England at foreign Courts, and calculated to plunge the country into war, was of such a nature as to lead Denmark to believe that if she resisted the demands of the German Powers she would receive material assistance from Great Britain. He severely criticised the despatches of Earl Russell in reference to the Duchies; and, referring to the notice given by Mr. Disraeli to move the previous question, hinted that it would be desirable for the Opposition to declare what their foreign policy was, as he was persuaded that the noble lord at the head of the Government was too good a tactician to allow an opponent to usurp his place without extorting from him a confession of his political faith.—Mr. PEACOCKE moved, as an amendment, that the House, without expressing any opinion as to how it had been carried out, approved the avowed policy of the Government in maintaining the Treaty of London of 1852, and in calling on the Danish Government to fulfil the promises which it made to the two great German Powers in 1851-2.—Mr. A. F. EGERTON seconded the amendment.—After some remarks by Mr. GRANT DUFF, Mr. C. BENTINCK, Mr. B. COCHRANE, Mr. NEWDEGATE, Sir H. VERNEY, Lord R. MONTAGUE, and Mr. LIDDELL, Mr. LAYARD deprecated as extraordinary a debate in Parliament on a subject which, within 24 hours, was to be submitted to the solemn consideration of a Conference. He charged Mr. Osborne with having misrepresented the actions and policy of the Government, and vindicated the conduct of Earl Russell, who had not, he said, given Denmark any promise of material support against Germany. On the contrary, the Danish Minister himself had admitted that all her Majesty's Government had promised was their sympathy. War having unfortunately broken out, her Majesty's Government had turned their attention to localising it as much as possible, and he believed that, had it not been for their exertions and their influence in Europe, a general war would have broken out.—Mr. DISRAELI said that he was not prepared to move the previous question as an amendment to the motion of Mr. Osborne because he had any confidence in the foreign policy of the Government. He had no confidence in—nay he had more than suspicion of—that policy; but he held that this was not the proper moment to raise the issue. He was of opinion that the foreign policy of the Government, especially during the last twelve months, was such as justly to occasion great anxiety and apprehension in the country. The climax of mismanagement was reached when the noble earl at the head of the Foreign Office entered into diplomatic communications with France and Russia on the subject of the Polish insurrection. The Opposition had not heretofore challenged the foreign policy of the Government by proposing a vote of want of confidence, because they found it impossible to obtain the necessary information, and also because they would not incur the responsibility of raising such a question while the Government was in communication with the German Powers. The Opposition, however, reserved to themselves the right to invite the House to express an opinion upon the policy of the Government, and he assured the latter that he would take the first fitting opportunity of doing so.—Lord PALMERSTON assured Mr. Disraeli that there was no necessity whatever for the disclaimer which he had made of confidence in her Majesty's Government. The right hon. gentleman had blamed the Government for what they had done in reference to Poland and to Denmark, but he had omitted to point out what ought to have been their policy. He maintained that the Government had been influenced in their conduct by a sincere desire to obtain favourable terms for Poland, and to maintain the independence of Denmark. With regard to the Conference which was to meet within a few hours, he believed that the signatories to the treaty of 1852 were bound in honour to maintain it, and he hoped that one of the first results of the Conference would be an armistice. He recommended the House to accept the "previous question," as suggested by Mr. Disraeli; and he would give that right hon. gentleman a confidence which he had declined to place in the Government, by following him into the lobby in support of that proposition. —After a few words from Mr. KINGLAKE, Mr. OSBORNE expressed his willingness to withdraw his motion.—Mr. PEACOCKE then withdrew his amendment; but the House objecting to the withdrawal of the original motion, Mr. DISRAELI formally moved the previous question, which was carried. The Court of Chancery (Despatch of Business) Bill was read a second time. The Consolidated Fund (15,000,000*l*.) Bill was read a third time and passed.

WEDNESDAY.—Mr. BLAKE moved the second reading of the Grand Juries (Ireland) Bill, the object of which was to separate the criminal from the fiscal business, and to vest the latter in elective boards. He adverted to previous attempts to reform the Grand Jury system, and said that his Bill contained nothing more than was to be found in Bills which had been already before the House.—Mr. DAWSON moved that the Bill be read a second time that day six months.—A long discussion followed, in which Mr. BAGWELL, Mr. P. URQUHART, Mr. MAGUIRE, Lord J. BROWNE, Lord NAAS, Mr. HERBERT, and Mr. M'MAHON took part.—Sir R. PEEL, on the part of the Government, said it was impossible to affirm the principle of this Bill, which, though described as a Bill to "amend" the law of Grand Juries in Ireland, by one of its provisions abolished Grand Juries altogether. The attention of the Government had been directed to the subject, and they would introduce a Bill early next Session.—After further debate the motion for the second reading was negatived on a division by 150 to 27.—Mr. LONGFIELD moved the second reading of the Chief Rents (Ireland) Bill, sent down from the Lords, explaining briefly the object of the Bill, which was a purely permissive and enabling measure.—Mr. WHITESIDE said that the principle of the Bill was novel, and pointed out what appeared to him to be objectionable in some of its provisions.—After a short discussion, Sir E. GROGAN moved to defer the second reading for six months. Ultimately the amendment was withdrawn, and the Bill was read a second time. The Joint-Stock Companies (Voting Papers) Bill was likewise read a second time. The House went into committee on the Bridges (Ireland) Bill, when the CHAIRMAN was ordered to report progress.—Mr. M'MAHON obtained leave to bring in a Bill to amend the law as to Oyster Fisheries in Ireland.

THURSDAY.—Departure of General Garibaldi.—In reply to Mr. KINNAIRD, the CHANCELLOR of the EXCHEQUER referred to what he termed the "incorrect and absurd rumour," that he had conveyed to General Garibaldi an intimation that his continued presence in England was a cause of embarrassment to her Majesty's Government. All that he had done was to consult with the friends of the General assembled at Stafford House on Sunday evening, when the question was raised as to whether the General's constitution would be able to stand the excitement and exhaustion incidental to the demonstrations in which he was asked to play so conspicuous a part. Invitations had been sent to him to visit no fewer than 30 towns, and his friends were of opinion that if he went to the provinces at all he ought to contract the circle of his engagements and adjust his programme, so that there should be no departure from it hereafter. On the whole, however, the General's friends were opposed to his being any longer exposed to the physical wear and tear to which he was at present subjected. Having been requested to tell the General what he thought on the subject, the latter observed that there was great force and propriety in the view taken by his friends, and he was quite willing to adopt it, as he considered that the purpose of his visit had already been attained. That object he said was to express his acknowledgments and thanks to the Government and people of England for what they had done for his country. He also added that he hoped upon some future occasion again to visit England, when perhaps it might be in his power to see his friends in the provinces.—Mr. V. SCULLY, amid general laughter, inquired whether the right hon. gentleman had led Garibaldi to believe that the feelings of the metropolis represented those of the people of Ireland.—The CHANCELLOR of the EXCHEQUER replied that he had not referred in any way to the people of Ireland. On the order for taking into consideration the petitions of Messrs. Kennedy, Pelan, and Richardson, in the matter of the Lisburn Election, Mr. BUTT moved that a select committee be appointed to inquire and report upon the matter of the petitions, supporting the motion by a dry legal argument, citing authorities and precedents.—After a few remarks by Mr. HUNT and the ATTORNEY-GENERAL, the motion was negatived. Fire Insurance Duty.—On the order for going into committee of Ways and Means, the CHANCELLOR of the EXCHEQUER made a short statement in reference to the fire insurance duty, contending that if the proposition to reduce the duty in differently upon all insurances, instead of on those on stock in trade only, as recommended by the Government, was adopted, it would exhaust the whole of his surplus and leave a deficit.—Mr. H. B. SHERIDAN then moved, in a speech of great length, an amendment to the effect that such a reduction of the fire insurance duty as that contemplated by the resolution of the House passed last session would be best effected by a uniform reduction of 1*s* per cent. on all descriptions of property now liable to the duty.—Mr. HADFIELD seconded the amendment.—Mr. DISRAELI said that the principle of the amendment was the right one, and he should therefore support it, but if it became a substantive proposition he should move to strike out the words "one shilling," so that the House would commit itself only to a uniform reduction of duty. On a division the motion for going into Committee was carried by 170 to 117. The amendment of Mr. Sheridan was therefore lost, and the House immediately went into Committee of Ways and Means.—The CHANCELLOR of the EXCHEQUER having moved his resolution to reduce the duty on insurances on stock in trade by 1*s*. 3*d*. per cent., Sir H. WILLOUGHBY moved an amendment to reduce the duty on houses and buildings instead of on stock in trade. After a short discussion, the amendment was negatived without a division, and the motion of the Chancellor of the Exchequer was agreed to.—On the motion for going into Committee of Supply on the Navy Estimates, Colonel DICKSON moved for a Select Committee to inquire into the Claims of Mr. John Cox, jun., for compensation for designs supplied to the Admiralty in connection with iron shipbuilding and the construction of gun-boats.—Lord C. PAGET opposed the motion, on the ground that the case of Mr. Clare had already undergone a patient and impartial trial before the Lord Chief Justice, and that the result was unfavourable to him.—The SOLICITOR-GENERAL also opposed the motion, urging that Mr. Clare had no claim whatever for compensation. The motion was ultimately negatived without a division. The Iron Clad Fleet.—In answer to Sir J. PAKINGTON, Lord C. PAGET stated that the first-class steam reserve consisted of three iron-plated ships, two line-of-battle ships, two frigates, three corvettes, and three sloops—making 13 in all; and all quite as ready as the same fleet organised by the right hon. baronet when he was First Lord of the Admiralty. The House then went into Committee of Supply pro formâ, when Lord C. PAGET said he would take the Navy Estimates on Monday.—The High Court of Bombay Bill was read a third time and passed.—The Court of Justiciary (Scotland) Bill, the Fish Teinds (Scotland) Bill, and the Summary Procedure (Scotland) Bill passed through committee. The Bridges (Ireland) Bill was lost in committee by 128 to 85.—The CHANCELLOR of the EXCHEQUER moved the nomination of the select committee on the Government Annuities Bill.—Sir M. FARQUHAR moved that the committee have power to send for persons, papers, and records.—Mr. S. ESTCOURT, the CHANCELLOR of the EXCHEQUER, Lord PALMERSTON, and Mr. VIVIAN opposed the motion, as unusual, and urged that if it were carried the effect would be to throw over the Bill to another Session.—Lord J. MANNERS, Mr. HANBURY, and Mr. AYRTON, on the other hand, supported the motion, which was negatived on a division by 127 to 104. The committee was then agreed to.

FRIDAY.—Fortifications at Spithead.—Mr. OSBORNE asked whether it was intended to continue the fortifications at Spithead on the original plan, or at Surbridge and the Horse-shoe Sands.—Lord PALMERSTON said that at Surbridge the foundation was bad. The other arrangements would be continued where there was a foundation. Case of Captain Melville Wood.—In answer to Colonel FRENCH, Mr. LAYARD said he had seen the award, and it was not favourable to Captain White. China.—On the Order for going into Supply, Mr. LINDSAY moved "That in the opinion of the House further interference on the part of this country in the civil war in China is impolitic and unnecessary." [Left speaking.]

Metropolis and its Vicinity.

General Garibaldi's Visit.—On Saturday morning General Garibaldi received the Mayor and a deputation from Salford, inviting him to visit that borough while at Manchester. The invitation was cordially accepted. He then visited the brewery of Messrs. Barclay, Perkins, and Co., in Southwark. The workpeople employed at that establishment determined to make his reception in every respect a contrast to that which they gave to the Austrian General Haynau some years ago. As the General went over the works he was everywhere received with enthusiastic cheers by groups of the workmen and their families, who were permitted to be present. In honour of his visit Mr. Perkins gave the name of Garibaldi to the finest horse in the establishment, the animal having particularly attracted Garibaldi's attention. In the afternoon the General went to the Crystal Palace, accompanied by the Duke of Sutherland and the Earl of Shaftesbury, to receive an address from his Italian countrymen now in London. There was an immense attendance of the wealthier classes, and the road from London to Sydenham bore some resemblance to a Derby day. Garibaldi was received at the entrance to the Palace by the members of the Italian Committee in London, who presented him with a flag of the Italian colours, bearing upon it the words "Rome and Venice." Garibaldi received it with evident gratification, and addressed his countryman in Italian, and with an animation and eloquence which contrasted in a remarkable manner with the few simple phrases with which he has hitherto acknowledged in English the compliments paid to him. He spoke as follows, and was frequently interrupted with loud cheers:—

"I thank you, Italian fellow countrymen, for the manner in which you have received me. You share with me, I know, the feeling of gratitude to the noble and glorious English nation for the help which they have given to us, and the magnificent manner in which they have received me. England has helped us in evil times as well as in good times. The English people assisted us in our war with Southern Italy, and even now the hospitals of Naples are supplied from the abundance sent to us from this country. I speak from what I know, that the Queen and the Government of England, represented by Lord Palmerston, Lord Russell, and Mr. Gladstone, have done a wonderful deal for our native Italy. If it had not been for this country we should still have been under the yoke of the Bourbons at Naples. If it had not been for the English Government I should never have been permitted to pass the Straits of Messina. Countrymen, our landing at Naples would have been prevented, if possible, by those despots who are now trying to crush poor little Denmark. It is said when two nations are contrying to put down a little country that has no assistance from any one, and has only its native strength to resist the invaders. Countrymen, I am not a soldier by profession; I do not like the profession of a soldier. I only took up the trade of a soldier when I found robbers in my house, and I turned soldier to expel them. I became a soldier to fight against the oppressors of my country. Countrymen, I admire this noble nation, which stands so proudly at the head of the civilisation of the world. I have seen since I have been in this country a great deal—more, perhaps, than you are aware of; I have seen one great thing—half a million of people kept in order by a dozen policemen—plain, simple policemen; and when I speak of English policemen I take off my hat (suiting the action to the word), for there are no gendarmes, no mouchards in this country. They cannot live in its free air. Do you know how this great fact is brought about? I will tell you. It is because the English people love their dear Queen. [At the mention of the name of her Majesty, whom the General called 'Cara Regina,' the cheering was very great for some time.] The English people, he proceeded to say, have a respect for the laws, which they know are good and just, and they love their free and glorious nation. The English people have not only pity and sympathy for others, they have something here. (Garibaldi accompanied the word with laying his hand energetically upon his heart) Let the conduct of Englishmen be a lesson to us. Let us imitate them, and admire their noble and splendid institutions and their imperishable love of liberty. England is envied by every country. Although she has got what we all know to be the bravest army in the world, she also has 170,000 citizens called volunteers, and if ever the occasion should arise—if ever their country should be invaded, the volunteers would have the support of millions of brave and gallant men. Or supposing—but this is not likely—that their united strength should not be sufficient to resist the invader, then, if our poor feeble efforts, our arms and our lives could be of any service, we should always be ready to come and assist them as they have helped us."

He was then conducted to luncheon, and afterwards occupied a place in the central transept, when loud and prolonged cheering burst forth from the assembled thousands. The addresses and swords to him and his son Menotti were then presented, after which there was a concert of Italian music, including Garibaldi's Hymn. On his return to town he called on the Duke of Somerset at the Admiralty, and in the evening dined with Lord and Lady Palmerston at Cambridge House. On Sunday morning he drove to Teddington, and took luncheon at the house of M. Herzen, where he met Signor Mazzini, Signor Saffi, and other Italian gentlemen. On his return to town in the afternoon he paid a visit to Miss Florence Nightingale. In the evening he dined with M. Fabricoli, at Clapham. On Monday morning he received deputations with addresses from the parish of Marylebone, from the Danish residents in London, and from a body of Poles, members of a national lodge. He then drove to St. John's Wood, and paid visits to Mrs. Karl Blind, M. Ledru Rollin, and M. Louis Blanc. At half-past 12 o'clock he left Stafford House for the Crystal Palace. He drove there in Mr. Seely's carriage, and on his way visited Mr. Anderson, Chairman of the Peninsular and Oriental Company at the Grove, Norwood, to thank him for the free passage which the Company had given him from Caprera. After remaining there to luncheon he proceeded to the Crystal Palace, where about 25,000 persons had assembled to receive him, most of whom had been brought up during the morning from all parts of the country by excursion trains on the Great Western, North-Western, South-Eastern, London, Chatham and Dover, Brighton, North London, and Great Eastern lines of railway, all converging and discharging their traffic upon the Crystal Palace. As soon as the General made his appearance on the platform he was received with a perfect tumult of applause. Two little girls, in dresses exhibiting the Garibaldian colours, were then led forward to present the General with bouquets. He received their offering with evident pleasure, and excited a fresh burst of enthusiasm when, with the utmost tenderness, he took the children in his arms and kissed them with fatherly fondness. The deputations were then introduced in the following order:—

Corporate Bodies.—The Mayors and Corporations of Dover, Brighton, and Woolwich. Deputations from Public Meetings.—Norfolk, Marylebone, Lambeth, Southwark, and Brighton. Societies of Various Kinds.—Friends of Fatherland, Norwood Working Men's Institute, St. Margaret's (Brighton), Working Men's Club (Hastings), Working Men of Brentford, Working Men of Brighton, Brighton Young Men's Christian Association, Maidstone Reform Association, Streatham Temperance Society, Popular Ratepayers' Association, Clapham Temperance Societies, Central Horticultural Society, Marylebone Vestry, Shoreditch Working Men's Association, Local Orange Institution, London Unity of Odd Fellows, Welsh Congregational Dissenters, Universal League, T. W. Cave, Collegiate School, and London Mechanics' Institute. Bodies with Foreign Relations.—The Memphis Lodge of Freemasons (Grand Orient Lodge), Garibaldi Italian Unity Committee, Garibaldi Reception and Testimonial, Hoxton Friends of Italian Liberty, French Residents in London, Polish Residents in London, Swiss Residents in London, and the Garibaldi Volunteers.

The addresses of these 36 bodies were not read, but the General sat in his chair and shook hands with each person who desired such a favour. In the deputation from the Norwood Working Men's Institute were two of the Surrey Volunteers. On observing them Garibaldi exclaimed with delight, "Brave volunteers!" and seemed much pleased at their appearance. The Central Horticultural Society had sent with their deputies a little girl dressed in white, and a boy of about 10 years of age, attired in a red woollen shirt and white trousers, one bearing a basket of fruit and the other a basket of flowers. On presenting their offerings to the General, he kissed them fondly amidst the renewed cheers of the vast assemblage. The first infraction of the rule as to reading addresses, was made by the French deputation, and much impatience was manifested during the reading of their addresses in French. At its conclusion, Garibaldi said in French:—"Tell your countrymen that in the name of Italy an humble individual like myself thanks them for their sympathy." A small procession then made its appearance, at the sight of which the enthusiam of foreigners present, and eventually of the English section of the assembly, was fully roused. It advanced with a slow step, as if its mission should rather be to assist at funeral obsequies than to share in demonstrations of joy or triumph. It carried a banner the very tinge of which was significant, having upon it the one word "Poland." At sight of this Garibaldi for the first time rose from his seat, and received the members of the deputation standing and with every demonstration of respect. When they had passed to the other side of the platform Garibaldi walked to its extremity nearest the public, and twice exclaimed, with as distinct and emphatic pronunciation as he could attain—"Generous English nation, abandon not Poland!" The enthusiasm evoked by this appeal was only second to that which greeted the General upon his first entrance. His mind was evidently full of the subject, for in response to the address from the Swiss residents in London, which was next presented, he said—"And you also, I beg that you will not allow poor Poland to die." At this point the band suddenly burst into the "Garibaldian Hymn," and the Garibaldi Volunteers, forming on the platform under command of Captain Styles, Lieutenant Byrne, and Colour-sergeant Jaques, read and presented an address to their old chief. The General briefly, but feelingly expressed the pride with which he again saw himself surrounded by his brothers in arms; and the proceedings at this stage terminated with the presentation of an address from the Garibaldi Reception and Testimonial Committee. So far nothing could have been more orderly than the conduct of the assembly, but when the General and his party quitted the platform with the object of reaching a point overlooking the grounds, a sudden rush was made to seize the opportunity of shaking hands with him. So vigorous was the onset, and such imminent peril did it threaten to his weakened limb, that the utmost exertions of friends, followers, police, and all the officials at the moment on the spot were required to cover his retreat. Some 20 minutes later, when the crowd had in a great measure forsaken the building for the grounds, Garibaldi re-appeared in one of the galleries overlooking the gardens, and was received with a fresh outburst of enthusiasm. He was evidently delighted with the scene, which presented a bright and striking contrast to its appearance on Saturday, when it was weighed down with a murky atmosphere. On his return to town he drove through Peckham, where he received an address from the boys of the Upper School. He drove thence direct to the residence of Mr. Seely, M.P., at Prince's Gate, whose guest he will remain for the next few days. In the evening he dined with the Marquis and Marchioness of Clanricarde in Stratton Street. On Tuesday morning the General made some early calls, and at a later hour proceeded to the residence of Mr. Ashurst, in Norfolk Crescent, where he had luncheon. He then called on Colonel Armstrong Roberts, in Arlington Street, and the Duke and Duchess of Sutherland, at Stafford House. In the afternoon Garibaldi "received" at Mr. Seely's house, which was literally thronged with company from two until six o'clock, upwards of 1000 persons attending the reception. In the evening he went to Her Majesty's Theatre to witness the performance of the opera of "Lucrezia Borgia." During the day a private meeting of noblemen and gentlemen was held at Stafford House, to consider the propriety of presenting the General with some substantial mark of admiration. It was unanimously resolved that a subscription should be raised for the purpose, and nearly 2000*l.* was subscribed by those present at the meeting. It subsequently transpired that the General had determined to leave England immediately for Caprera, abandoning all his engagements in the North. Great excitement was caused throughout the metropolis by this announcement, especially as it was associated with a rumour that the Government had requested him to leave, at the suggestion of the Emperor of the French. This report was authoritatively contradicted on the same night in both Houses of Parliament, and on Wednesday a correspondence was published, showing that the General's departure had been urged upon his friends by Mr. Fergusson, the surgeon, who was alarmed at the effect produced on his constitution by the events of the previous 10 days, and imperatively urged the necessity of retirement and rest. After a consultation of his friends, including Mr. Seely, the Duke of Sutherland, Lord Shaftesbury, Mr. Gladstone, Mr. Stansfeld, Signor Negretti, General Eber, and Signor Saffi, the General declined to act upon their suggestion that he should adopt a restricted programme and confine his provincial visits to a few of the principal towns, and said that if he could not carry out all his promises he would at once return to Caprera. On Wednesday morning the General went to the Duke of Argyll's residence at Campden Hill, Kensington, and breakfasted with the duke and duchess. He returned to Mr. Seely's at 10 o'clock, and received visits from a few friends. About 12 o'clock he left Mr. Seely's house in a procession, consisting of about a dozen private carriages, for Guildhall, to receive the honorary freedom of the City of London. His reception in his progress from Prince's Gate to the Hall was as flattering to him as any of his former welcomes, and showed that the enthusiasm for him is still unabated. There was a brilliant assemblage of carriages along the line of the park to see him pass; and the streets all along the route were filled with a crowd, which, though less dense, was as cordial and enthusiastic as that which greeted his first entrance into London. The Lord Mayor, Aldermen, and Common Council received him in their full official costume, and with the state and ceremonies usual on such occasions, and the presentation of the freedom in a gold box of the value of 100 guineas was made by the Chamberlain, in a complimentary address which was received with great applause by the members of the Corporation present. General Garibaldi replied in English as follows:—

"It is certainly impossible for me to express the gratitude I feel towards you, Mr. Mayor, and to the representatives of the glorious and great city of London, for the honour you have conferred on me to-day. I am prouder of that honour than of any that the false glare of war has reflected upon me. The greatest compliment for me is to be a freeman of this renowned city—this focus of the civilisation of the world. I think I do not exaggerate when I say that this is the very centre o liberty. Here there are no foreigners, because every man is at home in England. I repeat (placing his hand upon his heart) that it is impossible for me to express my gratitude to you and the city of London. I have to thank you, not for my proper self alone, but in the name of all my countrymen, who can certainly never feel grateful enough to the English people for the sympathy, succour, and material aid given to them, as to oppressed people in almost every clime and under many circumstances. This is not the only occasion by many on which I have had the happiness to meet English people. I have been happy with you in many parts of the world, and at many times. In America particularly I was saved by the protection afforded me by the English flag; in China I received favours at the hands of English people so great that I can never forget them; and therefore my gratitude and my love towards England are imperishable. I am grateful for my country, too, for the sympathy shown it by the English people, and on their behalf and my own I thank you."

At the conclusion of this speech, which was repeatedly interrupted with cheers, the General was presented to the Lady Mayoress, and afterwards received the congratulations of the Lord Mayor and the rest of the Aldermen. In the midst of the enthusiasm which his presence and bearing had called forth, he stepped forward to the front of the platform and said with great emphasis, "I am proud to belong to you all my life." After having signed the Roll of Honorary Citizenship, which he did immediately after the name of the Prince of Wales, he was escorted to the Mansion House, where he was entertained by the Lord Mayor at luncheon, which was served in the Egyptian Hall in a style of great splendour to about 250 persons. On leaving the Mansion House he returned to Prince's Gate by Moorgate Street, City Road, Portland Place, and Oxford Street. In the evening he dined with the Chancellor of the Exchequer and Mrs. Gladstone, who had a brilliant reception in the evening in his honour. On his return to Mr. Seely's about midnight a deputation from the City Reception Committee, in conjunction with a deputation from the Working Men's Reception Committee, who were waiting his return, had an interview for the purpose of representing to him the great disappointment that would be felt should he leave London as at present intended. After hearing the several speakers the General replied:—

"I feel deeply grateful to the people of England for the honour they have conferred upon me, an honour of which I feel myself unworthy. The reception I have received from all classes, but especially from the working classes, will never be forgotten by me. I much desire to visit my old friends in Newcastle and the North. I will consider if I can, consistent with my promise, alter my determination, and will write a note, expressing my intentions, to my friend, Mr. Beales, to-morrow morning."

On Thursday morning the deputation received the following letter, announcing his final determination to leave England:—

"Prince's Gate. Kensington, April 21.

"Dear Friends,—Pray accept my heartfelt thanks for your sympathy and affection. I shall be happy to see you again on a better occasion, when it will be possible for me to enjoy at leisure the hospitality of your noble country. For the present I feel obliged to leave England. Again, and again, my gratitude to you all." "G. GARIBALDI."

At 7 A.M. the General went to Chiswick Cemetery, and visited the tomb of the distinguished Italian writer and patriot, Ugo Foscolo, upon which he deposited a laurel crown in bronze, with an appropriate inscription. He was afterwards entertained at a breakfast in the Reform Club under the presidency of Lord Ebury. In the afternoon he went to Richmond, and paid a visit to the Earl and Countess Russell at Pembroke Lodge, Richmond Park. On his return to town he visited the Houses of Lords and Commons during the debates, and in the evening dined at Fishmongers' Hall. Yesterday morning, having expressed a desire to meet the American residents in London before his departure, he accepted an invitation to breakfast with the Consul General of the United States at Kensington Gate, where he met several of the principal Americans now in London. He expressed himself warmly in favour of the United States in the struggle with the slave power, and said he would go there at once and tender his services if they were needed, but happily they were not. He also said he was proud to acknowledge himself a citizen of the United States, and that he could claim them as his adopted country. They were the great bulwark of human liberty, and England and America, united in sentiment, would keep the peace of the world. He then paid visits to some private friends, and then proceeded with Mr. Seely and Lord Shattesbury, to Stafford House, where a meeting took place between him and the Prince of Wales, who arrived in town at an early hour yesterday morning for the purpose. The Prince remained at Stafford House for upwards of an hour. After the departure of the Prince, General Garibaldi left Stafford House in an open carriage and four, accompanied by the Duke and Duchess of Sutherland, for Cliefden, the residence of the Duchess Dowager of Sutherland, where he was to remain last night, proceeding to-day to Cornwall on a visit to Colonel Peard, "Garibaldi's Englishman." After staying with him for two days, he will embark at Looe or Fowey for Caprera in the Duke of Sutherland's yacht, the Duke and Duchess accompanying him to his destination. A special meeting of the Working Men's Committee was held on Thursday night, at which a resolution was unanimously adopted expressing the opinion that the cause of the General's departure was not illness, but pressure exercised on him by members and adherents of the Government, and especially by Mr. Gladstone, and a deputation was appointed to carry a copy of the resolution to Mr. Gladstone, Mr. Seely, and to Garibaldi himself. We may add to these details that the Lord Mayor has received during the week telegrams from Florence, Milan, Genoa, Palermo, Messina, and other places, expressing the delight of the inhabitants at the enthusiastic reception of General Garibaldi by the English people.

THE SHOEBURYNESS EXPERIMENTS.—An official report has been published, giving the results of the experiments up to this time, but stating that it is given as only substantially accurate. From this report it appears that the two rival muzzle-loading guns are about equal, the Armstrong breech-loader being inferior to both, which is partly accounted for by the fact that the charge of powder is less. In firing shell, however, both the Armstrong guns have an advantage over the Whitworth.

MURDER AND SUICIDE.—On Monday morning a shocking case of murder and suicide occurred at No. 5, Leighton Street, Burton Crescent. It appears that Mr. Ashley, tailor, the householder, had engaged a man named Pierce, employed at the St. Katharine's Docks, to look after the house. On Monday morning, on going down to his shop a little after 8 o'clock, he was surprised to find it still closed, and that his breakfast was not ready. He went to the door of the back parlour occupied by Pierce and his wife, but found it closed, and on knocking could gain no admittance. Suspecting that something was wrong, he then sent for the police, who made an entry into the room by breaking the window. The bodies of Pierce and his wife were then found quite dead with their throats cut, and blood running from the wounds. Near the man was a large sheath knife covered with blood. It seemed to have been recently sharpened. The surgeon of the division on examining the bodies gave it as his opinion that death had taken place within a couple of hours. He found on the head of the woman an immense cut from the front of the neck down to the spine, her head only hanging by the back bone. Above that wound was another cut, which had severed the windpipe, and which was sufficient to have caused death; but the cut below it was so serious that death must have taken place instantaneously. The man's throat was cut half-way across the windpipe, and there is no doubt that death in his case also was instantaneous. The surgeon stated that the man must first have stabbed his wife and then cut her throat, for it was impossible for her to have inflicted such a wound on herself. Although the deceased were fully dressed, it was evident that they had been in bed, for there were evident traces that the bed had been occupied by two persons. It is stated that a few days ago Mrs. Pierce had informed the landlord that her husband had stated his intention to murder her through jealousy, but she at the same time stated that there was not the least foundation for his suspicions. The evidence at the inquest showed that the husband was subject to hereditary insanity, and the jury returned a verdict, in the case of the woman, of "Wilful Murder against John Thomas Pearce," and in that of the man 'Suicide while in an unsound state of mind."

Provincial.

HALIFAX.—On Thursday the 14th a double murder was committed in the quiet village of Rastrick, near this town, by a respectable Irishwoman, the wife of William Dyson, a mason, upon her two children, one aged 2½ years, and the other 5 months. For some time she has given signs of great depression of spirits, and a short time ago said to her husband that she would make away with herself. She was passionately fond of her children, and during the four years of her married life has lived on the best terms with her husband. About 6 o'clock on Thursday morning her husband left her in bed with the children, and about 9 she took a razor from the mantel-piece, placed the eldest child on the floor, and cut its throat almost from ear to ear, the child at the time having a piece of bread in its hand. Whilst the little girl was dying she laid her infant on the floor also, and almost cut its head off, placing the razor behind the head. She then ran out of her house and screamed out that she had murdered her children. She then went to the house of a constable shrieking and tearing her hair, and told him that she had "killed her poor innocent children." Subsequently, on being told by the officer that she must go with him, she washed and dressed herself with the greatest composure, and did not make the least resistance to being taken to prison. At the inquest on Friday the jury returned a verdict of Wilful Murder against her, and she was committed for trial at the Assizes. The unfortunate woman bears an excellent character for cleanliness and industry. She is a good looking woman, only 23 years of age, and has had a superior education for a person in her position.

LIVERPOOL.—It is stated that the Alexandra has been handed over to her owners by the Government. —The execution of James Clitheroe, who was found guilty of the murder of his paramour at St. Helen's at the last Lancashire assizes, took place on Saturday in front of the county gaol. He persisted to the last in his story that both he and the woman agreed to commit suicide, which was successful in her case, but he was saved by the people coming to the house.

NEWCASTLE.—A very serious accident occurred a few days since in the Peggy Pit, Newbottle, the property of the Earl of Durham, which threatened to be of very serious consequence. A number of men had been driving a drift in the western part of the pit, in order to reach some whole coal in that direction. It is usual to use bore rods when employed in the neighbourhood of old workings, and a man thus employed unfortunately "holed" into some old workings of a pit, which exploded 65 years ago, and killed several men, and has not been worked since. The gas rushed out of the old working with such force that the man ran away, forgetting, unfortunately, his Davy lamp. The consequence was that the gas so accumulated around the Davy lamp that it became red-hot and burst the lamp. The explosion that thus occurred ignited the gas, which set the coal on fire. The horses and everything of value were taken out of the pit, and a number of men were sent down with fire-engines to attempt to put the fire out, but they were quite unsuccessful. More active measures were subsequently adopted. A six-inch pipe was laid on from Harrington Mill-burn, and workmen were employed pumping into the pit, but nothing was effectual until it was determined to stop up the entrances to the pit, and prevent all ingress of air. This measure has proved successful, and the fire is now said to be entirely extinguished.

SOUTHWELL.—On Saturday Richard Thomas Parker, who is charged with shooting his father and mother at Fiskerton, was brought before the bench of magistrates in this town, for further examination. The depositions having been read over, he was committed for trial at the next assizes, on the charge of attempting to murder, and on the same evening he was lodged in the county gaol. No hopes whatever are entertained of the old lady's ultimate recovery. On Friday an attempt was made to take her depositions, but she was not in a condition to give evidence.

STRATFORD ON AVON.—The Festival that is to celebrate the 300th anniversary of Shakspeare's birthday in the town where he was born and died, commences this morning, and will be continued for a week at least. The programme includes for to-day a public dinner under the presidency of the Earl of Carlisle, followed by a display of fireworks; on Monday the performance of the Messiah in the morning, and a Grand Concert of Music from Shakespeare in the evening; on Tuesday an Excursion to Charlecote in the morning, and a performance of "Twelfth Night" in the evening by the Haymarket Company, followed by "Lord Dundreary" in a new farce. On Wednesday 'A Shakespearean Reading' in the morning, and in the evening, in consequence of the withdrawal of Mr. Fechter, the performance of "Romeo and Juliet," under the direction of Mr. Vining, the character of Juliet by Mademoiselle Stella Colas, and the "Comedy of Errors;" the two Dromios by the Brothers Webb. On Thursday a concert of instrumental music and glees from the plays of Shakespeare in the morning, and the performance of "As You Like It" in the evening. On Friday evening a Grand Fancy Dress Ball. During the Festival there will be an exhibition, in the Town Hall, of many of the well-known portraits of Shakespeare and eminent actors of his plays, and a popular pageant of Shakespearian characters is announced for the 2d and 3d of May, the expenses of which will be entirely defrayed by the middle and lower classes.

SOUTHAMPTON.—In consequence of the reported capture of the steamship Bavaria by the Danish cruisers, the company's steamer Germania, which arrived in this harbour on Tuesday from New York, did not continue her voyage to Hamburg, but landed her passengers, who proceeded to their destination through London. The Germania has since gone into dock, where her cargo will be transhipped into an English vessel for Hamburg, and the Germania will return to New York direct. The report of the Bavaria's capture was subsequently found to be erroneous, and she has since arrived here on her outward voyage. On Wednesday, when a few miles from the entrance of the harbour she ran into the Channel Islands passenger steamer Normanby, which was seriously injured, but was able to get back into the port. The Bavaria was scarcely at all injured by the collision.

TRURO.—The largest block of granite ever cut in Cornwall, weighing more than 40 tons, was drawn by 50 horses to the Penrhyn railway station on the 13th, for conveyance to Strathfieldsaye, where it will form part of a monument to be erected to the memory of the late Duke of Wellington by the present duke.

WARWICK.—George Ditton, late head gamekeeper to Mr. Sheldon, of Brailes, died on Sunday week in the County Gaol, where he was awaiting his trial, charged with the murder of Henry Clifton, at Brailes, on the 21st of February last. It will be remembered that Clifton was passing along a footpath leading across one of Mr. Sheldon's farms when deceased attempted to prevent him. A struggle ensued, and Clifton struck the gamekeeper with a stick. The latter then levelled his gun and shot Clifton dead. At the recent assizes the trial was postponed, on the ground that deceased had not had time to prepare his defence. During his incarceration he had suffered greatly from mental anxiety, and his health had for some time past been in a precarious state, as, though not suffering from any disease, he was upwards of 60 years of age. On Sunday morning he became suddenly worse, and died shortly afterwards.

Obituary.

THE BISHOP OF PETERBOROUGH died on Monday afternoon at the Palace, Peterborough. The last hours of the venerable prelate were peaceful in the extreme, and he died almost without a struggle. Though his illness was somewhat sudden, his great age, 84, and his increasing infirmities had prepared the public for the result. The Right Rev. Dr. George Davys, Bishop of Peterborough, graduated at Christ's College, Cambridge, in 1803, as tenth wrangler, and gained a Fellowship. He subsequently became curate of Littlebury, and in 1814 of Chesterford: the latter curacy he held until Dr. Blomfield, the late Bishop of London, was presented to that living, when Mr. Davys became curate of Swaffham Prior. He afterwards removed to Kensington, and was appointed tutor to the Princess Victoria. He was advanced to the see of Peterborough in 1839. In theology his lordship belonged to the Evangelical party in the Church. He took no active part, however, in theological controversy, and was liberal towards all religious creeds. Of late years he seldom occupied his seat in the House of Lords; and, in fact, his ambition through life was rather to be good than great. In the affectionate regard of his former pupil, our present gracious Queen, the Bishop held a high place. For many years portraits of the Royal family were annually sent to the Bishop, and costly tokens of her Majesty's grateful affection were frequently bestowed upon him. Throughout his diocese the Bishop was universally loved and respected, and his loss will be deeply regretted.

During the past week the arrivals both coastwise and by rail have been large, and the weather being bright, with powerful sunshine, has diminished the consumption, and the trade is in a very depressed condition. METROPOLITAN CATTLE MARKET.
MONDAY, April 18.
Although the number of Beasts is smaller than on Monday last, it is quite equal to the demand, and prices are not better; indeed, to effect a clearance, a reduction has in some instances been submitted to. The supply of Sheep is shorter, and the trade is more cheerful, but it is very difficult to obtain higher prices. Choice Lambs and Calves are in request, but middling qualities meet with a dull sale. From Germany and Holland there are 980 Beasts, 1630 Sheep, 130 Calves, and 60 Pigs; from Scotland, 350 Beasts; from Ireland, 70; and 2670 from Norfolk and Suffolk.

The number of Beasts is not quite so large as on Thursday last; the demand is, however, very limited, and except for some choicest kinds prices are not better. There are a few more sheep; trade is slow for them at Monday's quotations. Choice Lambs and Calves are in request at higher rates. From Germany and Holland there are 295 Beasts, 680 Sheep, and 127 Calves; and from Spain, 32 Beasts. Milch Cows, 85.

MARK LANE.—MONDAY, April 18.
The supply of Wheat from Essex and Kent to this morning's market was moderate, and taken slowly at a decline of 1s. per qr. on the prices of this day se'nnight. Foreign Wheat met but little inquiry, and to have forced sales Friday's rates could scarcely have been maintained. Barley was a dull sale at barely last week's quotations. Beans and Peas brought late rates. The Oat trade was heavy, and in some instances rather less money was accepted. Flour was neglected.

FRIDAY, April 22
The weather on Saturday was wet, with N.W. and N.E. wind; it has since been warm and bright, and, with the exception of one or two slight frosts at night, quite resembling summer. The Wheat trade continues to be inanimate, and millers generally being well stocked with Dantzic Wheat, the blockade of that port and Konigsberg exercises no influence upon them. Prices of all kinds of Wheat continue to have a declining tendency, and in the majority of markets are quoted about 1s. lower. The late value of Beans continues to be well supported, the quotations for all other kinds of spring corn have not undergone any material change. Flour continues to be neglected, and is quoted rather lower in several important markets. Since Friday last three vessels have been reported off the coast. The floating trade has been extremely quiet; there is a little demand for Barley at late rates, but all other descriptions of grain are entirely neglected. In the absence of business Wheat must be quoted about 1s. per qr. lower, and spring corn unaltered in value. Linseed and Cottonseed, after having been in good demand, close quiet. Paris, April 21.—The prices of Wheat and Flour have remained unaltered, but both articles are difficult of sale. The present stock of Flour is estimated at 17,550 cwt. The six marks for delivery this month are quoted equal to 33s. 6d. per 280 lbs. The arrivals of foreign Barley during the week have been large, but of all other grain moderate. To-day's market was very thinly attended, and business in Wheat, both English and foreign, was exceedingly limited; Monday's prices must be considered nominal. Spring corn of all descriptions was a very dull sale at about Monday's quotations.

LIVERPOOL, April 19.—Our market has been rather poorly attended to-day, and Wheat has attracted only a retail inquiry at about the rates current on Friday, or a shade less. Flour quite unsaleable. Indian Corn neglected, but held firmly. Oats and Oatmeal no lower. Beans, Peas, and Barley move slowly at our quotations. We have a fine bright sunny day and a very flat market.

FRIDAY, April 22.—There was a thin attendance at market. Wheat a slow sale, and nominally unaltered. Nothing doing in Flour. Indian Corn dull; mixed, 28s. Egyptian Beans steady. Oats and Oatmeal dull.

BARNARD'S

NOISELESS LAWN MOWER.

This MACHINE differs from all other Lawn Mowers, in being constructed without either Gear-wheels, Chains, or Levers, the power being transmitted to the Cutters by a loose intermediate wheel, with an India-rubber tyre, which is placed between a plain-faced driving wheel and pinion; it is very certain in action, and at the same time so simple that it cannot be deranged.

When the MACHINE is drawn back, the intermediate wheel throws itself out of work, and the Cutters cease to rotate. The Cutters have steel on both sides, and when blunt can be reversed, bringing the sharp edges forward. It is perfectly noiseless, both in its forward and backward action, and works with considerably less power than any other Machine for the purpose yet introduced.

BY HER MAJESTY'S ROYAL LETTERS PATENT.

The India-rubber tyre will last from one to two seasons, and can be replaced at a cost of a few pence. An extra tyre is sent with each Machine

The iron work of Grass-box is Galvanized, which prevents its being destroyed by rust, to which this part is so liable from its contact with damp Grass.

PATENT GUTTA PERCHA SOLES.—Important to Gardeners.—The Gutta Percha Company have the pleasure to acknowledge the receipt of the following letter from G. Glenny, Esq., the celebrated Florist:—
"Gentlemen,—I have worn Gutta Percha Soles and Heels these two years, and being so much in a garden as I necessarily am in all weathers, and with the ground in all states, I would on no account be without them. As a matter of economy I would recommend Gardeners to use them, for they may repair the worn part at all times by warming the material at the fire, and pressing it from the thick parts to the worn parts, as easily as if it were so much dough. I think it the duty of all persons who must occasionally wet their feet to adopt a material that completely defies damp. Many a gardener would escape colds and rheumatism by the use of Gutta Percha Soles. Your obedient servant, G. Glenny."
Every variety of Gutta Percha articles, such as Mill Bands, Tubing, Soles, Sheet, Pump, Buckets, Fire Buckets, Bosses, Union Joints, Flasks, Bottles, Bowls, Chamber Vessels, Toilet Trays, Sponge Bags, Curtain Rings, Galvanic Batteries, Calbotype trays, &c, manufactured by the Gutta Percha Company and sold by their wholesale dealers in town or country

The Furnishing of Bed Rooms.

HEAL and SON have observed for some time that it would be advantageous to their Customers to see a much larger selection of BED-ROOM FURNITURE than is usually displayed, and that to judge properly of the style and effect of the different descriptions of Furniture, it is necessary that each description should be placed in separate rooms. They have therefore erected large and additional Show Rooms, by which they are enabled not only to extend their show of Iron, Brass and Wood Bedsteads, and Bed Room Furniture, beyond what they believe has ever been attempted, but also to provide several small rooms for the purpose of keeping complete suites of Bed Room Furniture in the different styles.
Japanned Deal Goods may be seen in complete suites of five or six different colours, some of them light and ornamental, and others of a plainer description. Suites of Stained Deal Gothic Furniture, Polished Deal, Oak, and Walnut, are also set apart in separate rooms, so that customers are able to see the effect as it would appear in their own rooms. A Suite of very superior Gothic Oak Furniture will generally be kept in stock, and from time to time new and select Furniture in various woods will be added.
Bed Furnitures are fitted to the Bedsteads in large numbers, so that a complete assortment may be seen, and the effect of any particular pattern ascertained as it would appear on the Bedstead.
A very large stock of Bedding (Heal & Son's original trade) is placed on the Bedsteads.
The stock of Mahogany Goods for the better Bed Rooms, and Japanned Goods for plain and Servants use, is very greatly increased. The entire Stock is arranged in eight rooms, six galleries (each 120 feet long), and two large ground floors, the whole forming as complete an assortment of Bed Room Furniture as they think can possibly be desired.
Every attention is paid to the manufacture of the Cabinet work, and they have just erected large Workshops on the premises for this purpose, that the manufacture may be under their own immediate care.
Their Bedding trade receives their constant and personal attention, every article being made on the premises.
They particularly call attention to their Patent Spring Mattress, the Sommier Elastique Portatif. It is portable, durable, and elastic, and lower in price than the old Spring Mattress.
Heal & Son's ILLUSTRATED CATALOGUE of Bedsteads, Bedding, and Bed Room Furniture sent free by Post.

News of the Week.

IN the House of Lords on Friday the Earl of ELLENBOROUGH introduced a Bill to amend the present practice with regard to the remission of capital sentences. The Bill was read a first time. The Earl of DERBY moved that it be an instruction to all committees on metropolitan railway Bills to insert provisions to secure a cheap train morning and evening for the labouring classes. Lord STANLEY of ALDERLEY and other Peers expressed their cordial concurrence in the proposal, which was agreed to. On Monday Earl STANHOPE gave notice for the 23d of May, of his intention to bring under their lordships' notice the report of the Public Schools Commission. The Consolidated Fund (15,000,000*l.*) Bill was read a third time and passed. On Tuesday Lord CHELMSFORD called attention to the mode in which the Government proposed to deal with prizes brought by the belligerent Powers of America into ports within her Majesty's dominions, as described in the correspondence presented to Parliament with respect to the Tuscaloosa. Earl RUSSELL stated that the Government had observed perfect neutrality, and had no intention of showing any partiality on the one ide or the other. The LORD CHANCELLOR said that the most serious consideration had been given to this question, and that the result would be embodied in clear and definite instructions, which would be generally circulated throughout all our colonial possessions. The Duke of ARGYLL introduced the Vagrancy (Scotland) Bill, which was read a first time. The Mortgage Debentures Bill was read a second time and referred to a Select Committee. The Warehousing of British Spirits Bill was read a third time and passed. On Thursday the Marquis of WESTMEATH moved the third reading of the Punishment of Rape Bill. Lord WODEHOUSE moved as an amendment that the infliction of the punishment of whipping provided by the Bill should be discretionary and not compulsory. On a division the amendment was agreed to by 55 to 20. The Bill was then read a third time and passed. The Regius Professorship of Greek (Oxford) Bill, after a long discussion, was read a second time. The Joint Stock Companies (Foreign Countries) Bill was read a third time and passed. The Registration of County Voters (Ireland) Bill was read a second time.

In the Commons on Friday, Mr. LIDDELL moved a resolution that further interference on the part of this country in the civil war in China is impolitic and unnecessary. Mr. LAYARD opposed the motion, which was supported by Mr. W. E. FORSTER and Mr. FERRAND. While the latter was speaking the House was counted out. On Monday the report of the Committee of Ways and Means on the Fire Insurance Duty was brought up and agreed to. Mr. SCHOLEFIELD moved the second reading of the Partnerships Bill, the object of which was to remove restrictions from unlimited liability, so as to enable capitalists to invest money in mercantile firms without making themselves responsible for the liabilities of the concern. Mr. HUBBARD moved as an amendment that the Bill be read a second time that day six months. The amendment was negatived without a division, and the Bill was read a second time. The Customs and Inland Revenue Bill was read a second time. The Civil Bill Courts (Ireland) Bill, the Court of Chancery (Despatch of Business) Bill, and the Charitable Assurances Enrolments Bill passed through committee. The Thames Conservancy Bill was read a second time and referred to a select committtee. Mr. O'HAGAN obtained leave to bring in a Bill to alter the constitution and amend the practice and course of proceeding in the High Court of Chancery in Ireland. On Tuesday Mr. MILLS called attention to the war in New Zealand, and moved for all correspondence between the GOVERNOR and the Colonial Office relating to the policy of confiscation which had been adopted by the New Zealand Legislature. Mr. CARDWELL assented to the motion, and explained the views of Government for the restoration of peace and order in the colony. He said that the new Act of Confiscation had not been reserved for the sanction of the Crown, but was in legal and actual operation at this moment, and that to have disallowed it would have created fresh difficulties, and led to renewed anarchy. But while he deemed it impolitic to disallow the Act under the circumstances, instructions had been sent out to Sir G. GREY to limit and restrain its operation, which he trusted would result in the restoration of peace and the permanent settlement of the colony. Lord R. CECIL, Sir J. PAKINGTON, and other members expressed their satisfaction at the policy sketched out by the Colonial Secretary, and the motion was agreed to. Mr. LINDSAY moved a resolution that her Majesty's Government should adopt measures for the construction of harbours of refuge on the coasts of Great Britain and Ireland. Sir S. NORTHCOTE moved as an amendment the addition of words making provision for the expense of such harbours by means of tolls upon shipping. After a long debate the House divided on Sir S. NORTHCOTE's amendment, which was negatived by 191 to 39. The original motion was then negatived by 142 to 84. On Wednesday Mr. NEWDEGATE moved the second reading of the Church Rates Commutation Bill; the object of which was to substitute for church rates an annual church charge of 2*d.* in the pound, to be deducted by the tenant on paying his rent unless there was an agreement to the contrary. Sir C. DOUGLAS moved, as an amendment, that the Bill be read a second time that day six months. On a division the amendment was carried by 160 to 60. The Bill was consequently lost. Sir J. HAY moved the second reading of the Bank Notes (Scotland) Bill, the object of which was to give increased facilities to banking in Scotland by allowing new banks to issue notes against gold. Mr. BLACK moved, as an amendment, that the Bill be read a second time that day six months. After a long discussion the original motion and the amendment were both withdrawn. The House went into committee on the Trespass (Ireland) Bill, but no progress was made. The Court of Chancery (Despatch of Business) Bill was read a third time and passed. On Thursday Mr. PEACOCKE called attention to the case of the Confederate vessel Tuscaloosa, and moved, that the instructions contained in the despatch of the Duke of NEWCASTLE to Sir P. WODEHOUSE, dated the 4th November last, and which remained still unrevoked, were at variance with the principles of international law. The SOLICITOR-GENERAL opposed the motion, which was negatived on a division by 219 to 185. The Customs and Inland Revenue Bill passed through committee.

The Conference on the Danish question met at the Foreign Office on Monday. The representatives of the German Powers are said to have declined the proposal of an armistice on the ground that they had no instructions on the subject. The Conference was consequently adjourned to enable them to refer to their respective Governments.

From the United States we learn that both armies are making active preparations for the new campaign, which the Confederates have commenced by capturing Fort Pillow on the Mississippi. The Senate has declined for the present to endorse the resolution of the House refusing to recognise the empire of Mexico. The House of Representatives has been occupied with the discussion of a motion for the expulsion of two of its members who had expressed opinions adverse to the war, and in favour of the recognition of the Southern Confederacy. The motion for expulsion was negatived, but votes of censure were agreed to in both cases.

Haigh, of the Royal Engineers, has been appointed by Her Majesty to be in attendance on the Prince.

The Cabinet.—A Cabinet Council was held on Saturday at the official residence of the First Lord of the Treasury in Downing Street.

The Conference.—The Plenipotentiaries accredited by the several European Powers to the Conference, with a view to the restoration of peace in the north of Europe, met on Monday at 1 o'clock, in the room prepared for them at the official residence of the First Lord of the Treasury, in Downing Street. All the members appointed to the Conference were present. They were as follows: —Austria: Count Apponyi and Privy-Councillor Biegeleben. France: Prince de la Tour d'Auvergne. England: Earl Russell and the Earl of Clarendon. Prussia: Count Bernstorff and Privy-Councillor Balan, formerly Ambassador at Copenhagen. Russia: Baron Brunnow. Denmark: Baron de Bille, M. Quaade (the Minister), and Councillor Krieger. The German Confederation: Baron von Beust, Saxon Minister. Sweden: General Count Wachtmeister. It is understood that after having exchanged their credentials, Lord Clarendon brought forward the question of an immediate armistice, with the maintenance of the existing blockade. The proposal was supported by the Plenipotentiaries of France, Russia, and Sweden, but the Austrian and Prussian plenipotentiaries asked for time to refer to their Governments for instructions. The Conference has been adjourned until these instructions have been received.

Order of the Garter.—It is said that the vacant Garter will be conferred on the Marquis of Ailesbury.

The Peerage.—The Queen has directed letters patent to be passed under the Great Seal of the United Kingdom, granting the dignity of a Baroness to the Countess De La Warr, by the title of Baroness Buckhurst, of Buckhurst, in the county of Sussex, during her life, with remainder of the Barony to the Hon. Reginald Windsor Sackville West, her second surviving son, and the heirs male of his body lawfully begotten, with other remainders over. The House of Lords has admitted the claim of Lord Ockham, son of the Earl of Lovelace, to the Barony of Wentworth.

Parliamentary Movements.—The Select Committee of the House of Commons have reported that the Marquis of Hartington, the fifth Under Secretary of State in the House of Commons, did not, in accepting that appointment, lose his seat. Mr. H. A. Bruce was re-elected for Merthyr on Monday without opposition. The death of Mr. Kershaw has caused a vacancy at Stockport. Sir Joshua Walmsley is said to be the Liberal candidate, and Mr. Romaine Callender, jun., one of the largest manufacturers in Manchester, is mentioned as likely to come forward in the Conservative interest. Sir Hugh Owen has announced his intention of retiring from Pembroke at the next general election. It is reported that Sir Morton Peto will be invited by the Liberals to become a candidate for the seat, and Mr. R. Potter, Chairman of the Great Western Railway, is named as a probable candidate in the Liberal-Conservative interest. Alderman Lusk is a candidate for Finsbury in the Liberal interest. Alderman Copeland is about to retire from Stoke-upon-Trent; and Mr. Beresford Hope is a candidate for the vacant seat. The Conservatives have determined to bring forward a candidate for Rochdale in opposition to Mr. Cobden at the next election.

The Episcopal Bench.—The bishopric of Peterborough, which is now vacant, is the 13th nomination which has fallen to Lord Palmerston in seven years among the 28 English and Welsh bishoprics. They include the sees of Canterbury, York, London, Durham, Carlisle, Ely, Gloucester and Bristol, Norwich, Peterborough, Ripon, Rochester, and Worcester. Such a circumstance, or anything like it, of one Minister nominating nearly half the English episcopate was never before known in the Church of England.

Foreign.

France.—The Paris papers give the following as the basis for deliberation which Austria, Prussia, and the German Confederation propose to bring forward at the Conference now sitting:—"Integrity of the Danish Monarchy; Political and administrative autonomy of the Duchies; Maintenance of their union in one single State (nexus socialis); Rendsburg to be made a German Federal fortress, as a guarantee of the autonomy and indivisibility of the Duchies." The Mémorial Diplomatique, in an article on the Conference, says:—

"Lord Clarendon has returned to London, having in the name of his Government formally engaged to support energetically the demand for an armistice which the Prince de la Tour d'Auvergne has been instructed to make at the first sitting of the Conference. In other words, France and England have mutually bound themselves to declare war against that Power which should refuse to agree to a truce. We believe ourselves able to state that no mention of an armistice was made at the first sitting of the Conference, since so important a question could only be negatively discussed by the representatives of Germany. We believe that the armistice will be based upon the uti possidetis principle, unless Denmark should refuse to evacuate the island of Alsen. Austria and Prussia will then on either side evacuate the territory of Jutland."

La France of Thursday says:—

"At the meeting of the Conference on Monday the first question mooted was that of an armistice. The demand was made conjointly by France and England. We are assured that the Plenipotentiaries of the German Powers had come without any instructions on the subject, and that they have been obliged to refer to their respective Governments."

La Patrie of Thursday says:—

"We have received from various sources accounts of the sitting of the Conference on the 25th inst. The proposition of an armistice was formally brought forward, with the condition that the suspension of hostilities should not imply that of the existing blockade. The Plenipotentiaries of Austria and Prussia at once declared that they had no instructions on that point, but accepted the proposition ad referendum—that is to say, that they must first consult their respective Governments."

The Journal des Débats of Thursday says:—

"We do not pretend to know everything that passed at the Conference on the 25th inst.; but what results can we expect from a Conference which finds itself paralysed in its action at the very onset by such strange proceedings as those of Austria and Prussia, who are already rolling heavy stones into the path to obstruct the action of diplomacy?"

On and after the 1st of May next the Moniteur will publish an evening edition. The French Army in Algeria has sustained another disaster from the treachery of the Arabs. Colonels Beaupretre, at the head of 250 Turcos, Spahis and auxiliary horsemen, started from Tiaret on March 24, in pursuit of Sid Seliman, the son of a leading chief of the south, who died suddenly three years ago, during a sea voyage from Oran to Algiers. During his march, he was surprised by the Arabs of Sid Seliman, who suddenly fell upon his troops at daybreak and destroyed them all, not leaving one survivor. The Arabs subsequently decapitated the bodies. It is feared that this surprise marks the commencement of another insurrection of the nomad tribes in Algeria.

Spain.—The banquet of the Progressist party is fixed for the 3d of May. The question of inviting Espartero is being discussed. M. Alexandre Laya has published a project for cutting a canal on a vast scale through the Spanish territory, to supersede the Strait of Gibraltar, and render useless the possession of the Rock by England. M. Laya states that his plan could be executed without serious difficulty, at a cost of four or five millions sterling. It is said that his plans have been examined by engineers and financiers in France, Belgium, Holland, Italy, and Spain.

Portugal.—An Austrian screw liner, two steam frigates, and one iron-clad frigate have arrived at Lisbon.

Switzerland.—M. Kern has received fresh instructions to enter into negotiations for a treaty of commerce with France, which it is hoped will have a favourable result.

Sweden.—The Nord Deutsche Zeitung publishes news from Malmo, stating that the great concentration of Swedish troops has again been entirely countermanded.

Denmark.—The King has issued the following proclamation to the army:—

"Brave soldiers! Undaunted and heroic comrades! The army occupying the Düppel position has been forced to retreat to Alsen, after a defence which will be memorable to remotest posterity, not only on account of the inequality of the contest, but also for the heroism with which it was fought. Heavy, indeed, have been the sufferings the development of the contest has entailed upon you; nor will the great and painful losses of the last few days ever be forgotten. But by God's help neither the sufferings nor the losses of the last few days will have been in vain: they will bear fruits in the struggle we are now waging against violence and injustice—a struggle the aim of which is the existence and independence of our beloved country. I return you the fervent thanks of myself and my people for the perseverance and self-sacrificing heroism you have displayed, and I am convinced that you will still be inspired by the same spirit. God preserve my brave Danish army! May it receive the reward of its persevering bravery, and may He confer everlasting peace upon our fallen heroes! "Christian R."

The Minister of War has published a report of the fall of Düppel. The Danish army has lost in killed, wounded, and missing nearly 5000. The defenders of the works of Düppel did not exceed 8000. The Danish forces of all arms now amount to 36,000 men. The following despatch has been addressed by Bishop Monrad, the Danish Premier, to the Danish diplomatic agents at foreign Courts:—

"Copenhagen, April 9, 1864.

"Sir,—The acts and proceedings of the allied commissioners in Schleswig have unfortunately given us too frequent occasion to communicate with you upon the character the German Cabinets have impressed upon the invasion, in spite of their former declarations, and notwithstanding the assurances they appear to have given to neutral Courts upon the subject of their intentions. I find myself now compelled to call your attention to another series of still graver facts, in which, not content with setting aside the rights of the King, our enemies have gone so far as to violate the precepts of the right of nations and the first principles of humanity. The commander-in-chief of the Prussian army has recently, without any previous warning, proceeded to bombard the open and inoffensive town of Sönderborg. Peaceable inhabitants, women and children, have been buried beneath the ruins or slaughtered by the bursting of shells, and hospitals filled with wounded have had to be evacuated under a hail of bullets. Some Prussian Hussars had been surprised during the night by a small Danish detachment near the village of Assendrup. To revenge themselves for this occurrence, which was owing to the heedlessness of their officers, the Prussians have set fire to the farms at which the Hussars were lodged, and not content with reducing poor peasants to indigence, surrounded the burning buildings with a guard to prevent furniture and even animals being saved from the flames. In Jutland the allied armies have overwhelmed the inhabitants with contributions of all kinds, and to so exorbitant an extent, that certain localities have found it absolutely impossible to fulfil these requirements. The allied generals wished the Danish authorities to afford them assistance in these extortions, and when they refused to co-operate in the work of pillage, 10 prefects and burgomasters were arrested as prisoners and transported to the fortress of Rendsburg, where they have already been detained upwards of a month. Though tormented in various ways, and exposed to every species of humiliation and privation, these honourable officials do not for a moment regret having done their duty, but fears are entertained lest this unjustifiable treatment may not soon cost at least one of their number his life. I could swell the list of these atrocities by many more examples, but limit myself to again recalling to recollection that even churchyards and national monuments have not been secure from the Vandalism of the invaders. The Government of the King has unquestionably a right to make reprisals against this barbarous manner of waging war. If it has nevertheless decided upon not availing itself of the right of retaliation, it is from a belief that whatever the excuses capable of being put forward for such a course, the nation would not be slow bitterly to repent an offence against laws never violated with impunity. The reprobation of the present age, and the condemnation of history, in fact, are punishments so rigorous that we cannot add to their weight. We restrict ourselves, therefore, to notifying the facts. Europe and entire humanit will judge. I have the honour, &c., "D. G. Monrad."

The Danish Duchies.—Accounts from Veile state that on the 20th a body of Prussian troops arrived there, and proceeded after a few hours' rest to Horsens, where 8000 Danes had fortified themselves. The latest news says that the Prussians have occupied Horsens, and that on Saturday they were a mile and a half south of Aarhuus. On Monday they marched, 10,000 strong, to Wiborg. Only a few Danish troops have been left in the towns of Southern Jutland. The semi-official Prussian organ of Wednesday says that the Danish General Hegermann, commanding the troops in Jutland, has retreated across the Limfjord without accepting battle. Among the Danish dead lying in Ulkeböl after the storming of Düppel were three colonels, five captains, eight lieutenants, three cadets, and one chief surgeon. Of the Danish officers captured unhurt, or only slightly wounded, the following are at present known:—One major, two captains, and 28 lieutenants. The Prussians have erected a battery near Bastion No. 10 of the Düppel intrenchments, and are erecting another opposite the Danish work at Suurslokke. On Thursday they continued to throw a few shells, but none reached Alsen. They are now at work in the Düppel intrenchments, and are strengthening their batteries on the shore of the Alsen Sound as well as at the tête-de-pont, and between Rägebol and the Sound. The two Danish ironclad men-of-war are in position to defend the passage to the Island of Alsen. On the 24th an engagement took place off the coast of Rügen Island, within view of the Post-house of Wittow, between a Prussian gunboat and the Danish ironclad frigate Tordenskiold. The Danish frigate sailed off, pursued by nine slow-sailing Prussian boats, which failed to overtake her. The Tordenskiold was, however, subsequently overtaken by the Grille and set on fire, but the Danes succeeded in extinguishing the flames. In the afternoon of the 21st the King of Prussia arrived at the castle of Gravenstein, and after a short stay proceeded to Atzbüll, where he saluted the regiments which had been engaged in storming the Düppel redoubts. His Majesty praised and thanked several of the officers and soldiers, and the whole of the troops defiled before the King; after this he took his leave, and at 4·30 p.m. went on to the trenches. On Friday his Majesty visited Flensburg, and on Saturday took his departure for Berlin. Herr von Bismark, accompanied by Herr Kendell, Councillor of Legation, joined the King of Prussia at Flensburg. It is said that the object of his Majesty's visit to the Duchies was to sound the population, and to pave the way for a vote in conformity with the views of the Prussian Government. It is also said that the Emperor of Austria is expected in the Duchies. Prince Carl of Prussia, father of Prince Friedrich Carl, arrived at Hamburgh on Sunday evening with a large suite, and alighted at the Hotel de l'Europe, where it is said that he will await the arrival of the Emperor of Austria, and accompany his Majesty to the theatre of war. Convoys of ammunition and supplies continue to pass through Hamburgh for the North. A proclamation of the Federal Commissioners, dated the 25th inst., says;—

"The King of Prussia on his departure declared that he felt himself most deeply moved by the gratifying reception he had met with from the clergy and all classes of the people. His Majesty has likewise expressed his sincere thanks for the cordial reception given to those Prussian troops on their return from Schleswig to Holstein after a severe engagement The Commissioners bring these expressions of thanks to the knowledge of all concerned."

The Supreme Court of Holstein has passed a resolution stating that it will fully concur in the declaration of national rights which has been adopted by the members of the Holstein Diet, and it has sent a declaration to that effect to London.

SAXONY.—The Chamber of Deputies on Tuesday unanimously resolved upon an address to be presented to Baron von Beust. The address contains a vote of confidence in the Minister, and also a protest to be handed in at the Conference to the following effect:—The separation of the Duchies from Denmark and the recognition of the hereditary succession of the Augustenburg family to the inseparably-united Duchies is demanded both by right and the will of the people. If the question of right be disputed, the decision appertains not to a Conference of the Powers, but only to the people and its representatives. A protest is also raised against any resolution upon the future disposition of the Duchies which may be made without their consent, and contrary to their wishes. In conclusion the protest reserves the rights of Germany and of the Schleswig-Holstein people.

FRANKFORT.—The following are the resolutions of the Frankfort Diet on the subject of the Conference:—

"1. To accept the invitation to the Conference proposed by the British Cabinet; and, consequently, to request the President to send a reply to the Notes of the Plenipotentiary of Great Britain, under the dates of the 23d and 26th ult., conformable to the project proposed by the united Committees. 2. To send the Conference a representative of the Confederation, and to select for that purpose a statesman who does not belong to the German States already represented at the Conference. 3. To proceed immediately to the election of the said Plenipotentiary by ballot. 4. To request the President of the Diet to take all such measures as might ulteriorly appear necessary.

The Plenipotentiary of the Confederation to receive the following instructions:—

"1. To exert all his efforts to assure the recognition of the rights of the Germanic Confederation and of the Duchies of Holstein, of Schleswig, and of Lauenburg, and especially to obtain the greatest possible independence for these latter. 2. To avoid as much as possible all dissension between the German Plenipotentiaries at the Conference, to concert preliminarily with the representatives of Austria and of Prussia whenever any important deliberation is to be brought forward, the representatives of the said Powers being equally invited to follow the same example under analogous circumstances."

The Bavarian representative proposed to substitute the following, instead of the words "to obtain the greatest possible independence for the Duchies:"—

"To endeavour to obtain the recognition of the rights of the hereditary Prince of Augustenburg as Duke of Schleswig-Holstein, and, consequently, the complete separation of the Duchies from Denmark."

The Bavarian amendment was rejected by the Diet.

PRUSSIA.—The King returned to Berlin from his visit to the Duchies on Sunday morning, accompanied by Herr von Bismark and General von Manteuffel. Herr von Roon, who remained with his wounded son, was expected to return on the following day. The Minister of Public Worship has sent Privy Councillor Stiehl to Schleswig to inquire into the condition and wants of the school system in that duchy.

AUSTRIA.—A despatch from Vienna of yesterday says that the Emperor and the Empress of Russia are expected on the 15th of May at Kissengen. His Majesty will remain a fortnight. The Emperor and Empress of Austria are also about to visit Kissengen, and a meeting of the sovereigns will probably take place. The evening edition of the official Vienna Gazette of Tuesday says:—

"Although it is scarcely to be expected that Austria and Prussia will agree to the proposal made in yesterday's sitting of the Conference for the maintenance of the blockade of the German ports during the armistice, yet the negotiations between the Cabinets need not be broken off, nor the friendly relations between the German and Western Powers be subject to any interruption."

According to the Oesterreichische Zeitung of Thursday, the Cabinets of Vienna and Berlin have declined as inadmissible the proposal made at the Conference on Monday for an armistice, with a maintenance of the blockade of German ports. The Emperor of Austria has adjourned the International Exhibition, which was to have taken place in 1866, at Vienna. The reasons given for this step are—firstly, because the political state of affairs in every quarter has prevented industrial development; secondly, because Austria is in a transitory state as regards her general commercial policy, and in her position towards the Zollverein; and, lastly, on account of the International Exhibition in Paris, which is to be held about the same time. The General Correspondenz declares the statements which have appeared in several journals of the probability of an intervention of Russia and Austria in the Danubian Principalities to be wholly unfounded. The Emperor Maximilian before his departure for Mexico charged M. Auber, the composer, to compose the music of a Mexican national hymn, the words of which have been written by M. Aguilar, ex-Minister of State in Mexico, and now Envoy at the Court of Rome.

ITALY.—The Italian frigate Rê Galantuomo, which was supposed to have been lost on the coast of America, arrived on Monday morning at Gibraltar, and proceeded to Naples on the next day. The Italian Parliament recommenced its sittings on the 18th. In the Chamber of Deputies on the 20th Signori La Porta and Miceri, wishing to put a question on Roman affairs and the general policy of the Government, requested that papers in reference to those subjects should be laid upon the table. In reply the Minister for Foreign Affairs stated that he had no fresh papers, but that the explanations demanded would be given. The Minister of Finance presented his Budget for 1865, and an account of the state of the Treasury up to the 1st of January, 1864. Several Bills, including one for the reform of the laws on public registration, were also brought forward. The Minister of Marine introduced a Bill to raise a credit of 7,000,000f., to be applied to the construction of iron-plated ships. A Bill to retain in force several of the articles of the law relating to brigandage was brought forward by the Minister of the Interior. A popular meeting has been held at Naples, when an address of thanks to the English people for the reception given to General Garibaldi was voted, and also an address of sympathy with Hungary. The address was presented to the English Consul at Naples.

GREECE.—Advices from Athens state that the Canaris Ministry had resigned. It was stated that a new Ministry would be formed by M. Balbes.

RUSSIA.—Advices from St. Petersburg state that it is not likely that Russia will send a second Plenipotentiary to the London Conference. Should however the Conference be changed to a general Congress, Prince Gortschakoff, the Minister for Foreign Affairs, would proceed to London. The Russian Minister at Turin, Count Stackelberg, has obtained leave of absence for two months. It is said that the merchants of St. Petersburgh intend to propose to the Government the abolition of export dues, on the ground that they impede the development of commerce, while the revenue derived from that source is comparatively unimportant.

POLAND.—Advices from Warsaw to the 25th inst. state that on the previous day a letter from Archbishop Felinski was read to the various congregations, abolishing mourning in the churches. In consequence of this the bells and organs are again used. It is reported that two engagements have taken place between the Poles, under Bossak, and the Russian troops. The official Warsaw Gazette acknowledges that fresh bands of insurgents have made their appearance.

DANUBIAN PRINCIPALITIES.—The Chamber of Deputies has passed a resolution that in future the Ministers are to take the oath of allegiance to the people, and not to the Prince. An important public manifestation was commenced at Bucharest on Wednesday. The corporations and professors, with a large concourse of people, assembled with a view of thanking the Prince for the new electoral law. The assembly, however, dispersed at the invitation of the authorities.

CIRCASSIA.—Advices from Constantinople state that a battle was fought between the Circassians and the Russians on the 1st inst., in which the former lost 2000 and the latter 1500 men. The Circassians are now negotiating with the Turkish Government for permission to settle in Turkey. All the foreign officers who assisted the Circassians escaped safely to Trebizonde. The Porte has sent five steamers to convey them to Sinope, Samsoun, and Varna.

TUNIS.—Disturbances of a serious character have broken out in Tunis. The tribes are all in a state of insurrection and refuse to pay the taxes. The city of Tunis is, however, still tranquil, and the Bey still occupies that city with the necessary force for resistance. The Governments of France, England, and Italy have each despatched a naval force to that quarter. The English, French, and Italian Admirals have disembarked troops, who will act in concert and protect the subjects of their respective countries if necessary.

CAPE OF GOOD HOPE.—News from the Cape to the 21st March states that the Governor on leaving Graham's Town made excursions to the Kowie, and then to Fort Beaufort, where he met Sir Percy Douglas, the Commander of the Forces. His Excellency then visited Queen's Town, where he was enthusiastically received by 2500 Tambookies. At the last accounts he was journeying through Albert to Aliwal, to visit the new President, Mr. Brand, and the aged chief Moshesh, and to determine the boundary line between Basutoland and Winburg. The Session of Parliament was summoned for the 27th of April at Graham's Town. It is rumoured at Graham's Town that Sir Percy Douglas was expecting by the next mail his commission as Lieutenant-Governor of Kaffraria. The Imperial Government has purchased Cape Castle from the colonists for 50,000*l.*, which is to be expended in the erection of barracks at King William's Town. The Confederate war steamer Alabama put into Table Bay, March 20th, for coal.

INDIA.—The Bombay mail of the 28th March has arrived. Colonel Stewart reported to the Governor of Bombay on the 22d March, by telegram direct from Bushire through Kurrachee, that the whole length of submarine cable on board the Tweed (373 miles) had been paid out from that vessel in the most perfect order. Since the 23rd March passenger trains have commenced running direct from Bombay to Poona and Sholapore over the Bhore Ghaut incline. The transit from Bombay to Poona now occupies eight hours. The through line from Bombay to Ahmedabad will not be opened for public traffic until after the next monsoon. The entire line of railway, from Mooltan to Umritsir, will be open for traffic in November. The preliminary examination by Captain Tighe, Deputy Commissioner, into the charges brought against the Umballah and Patna conspirators, for aiding Sittana and Mulka fanatics with men and money, commenced on the 14th March. Cholera has made its appearance in the Bombay Presidency, and is committing fearful ravages in several districts. It has been ordered by the Governor-General that any persons who may have committed crimes on foreign territory, and who have sought refuge in the dominions of British India, shall be returned to their own Government, and that an agreement be made with the native governments for this rule to be reciprocal. The Governor-General has appointed a committee, of which Mr. H. H. Roberts, C.B., is president, for the purpose of reporting on the present state of gaol discipline in India, and on the management and treatment of prisoners. The government of Bombay has appointed a commission, of which Sir Alexander Grant, Bart., is President, to inquire into the healthful education of the children of European soldiers and others, with a view to the removal of the children from the schools at Byculiah to Poona or Poorundhur. Fresh difficulties have occurred in Cabul between the Ameer, Shere Ali Khan, and his brothers Auzim Khan and Afzul Khan, who are in arms against him.

UNITED STATES.—General Grant has issued orders to revoke all furloughs, to direct baggage to the rear, and sutlers to leave the army, in view of the resumption of active operations. The roads in Virginia are rapidly drying after the late heavy rains, and an immediate advance is expected. Letters from Washington state that a threefold advance on Richmond—namely, by Grant across the Rapidan, Smith up the Peninsula, and Burnside viâ Goldsborough, North Carolina—has been determined upon. The Confederates under Generals Forrest and Buford attacked Fort Halleck, near Columbus, Kentucky, and Fort Pillow, near Memphis, Tennessee, simultaneously, on the 12th. On the following day General Buford carried Fort Pillow by storm. Out of the garrison of 600 men, 400 are said to have been killed, and the telegrams assert that the Confederates bayoneted all the negroes, and many of the white survivors after the capture. They then removed all the ordnance from the fort, and set out to attack Memphis. On the same day they occupied the town of Paducah in Kentucky, but were subsequently shelled out of their position. On the 15th they demanded the surrender of the fort, which was refused, the Federals marching out to attack them. The Confederates ultimately left Paducah, after removing large numbers of horses and other spoils. The reoccupation of Pillow by the Confederates again closes the Mississippi. It is believed that Memphis has no adequate force to defend itself. Unfavourable rumours are current in New Orleans concerning the Federal situation on the Red River. A Federal reconnoitring force encountered the Confederates under Imboden, near Winchester, Virginia, on the 8th, and were defeated, with the loss of upwards of 100 men. After the main body of the Federals had left Alexandria, Louisiana, a slight engagement, lasting three hours, occurred on the 28th ult., 35 miles above Alexandria, Louisiana, between 8000 Federals and the Confederates, who were estimated at 12,000 strong. The Federals are reported to have captured 500 prisoners and then continued advancing, endeavouring to bring on a general engagement. The Confederates on the other hand are said to have captured 200 Federals. The Federal cavalry have occupied Eagle Pass, Texas, 400 miles above Brownsville. General Johnstone is being largely reinforced from Polk's and Beauregard's armies. The Confederates have made an unsuccessful attempt to blow up the flag ship Minnesota off Newport. The Minnesota was seriously damaged. The Federal transport steamer Maple Leaf was sunk by a torpedo in St. John's River, Florida, on the 30th ult. Four of her crew were lost. The sinking of the Confederate ram Tennessee off Mobile is denied. The Senate Committee on Foreign Affairs, with the approval of the President and the Cabinet, have decided not to support the recent resolution of the House of Representatives relative to French operations in Mexico. The Senate has passed a resolution amending the Constitution so as to abolish slavery. The resolution has yet to pass the House of Representatives and the State Legislatures. An exciting debate has taken place in the House of Representatives on a resolution for expelling Mr. Long, of Ohio, and Mr. Harris, of Maryland—the former for expressing a disbelief in the practicability of quelling the rebellion, and urging the recognition of the South; the latter for expressing a hope that the Federal armies would be unsuccessful in their efforts to conquer the South; 81 votes were in favour of the expulsion and 58 against, but there not being a majority of two-thirds the motion was lost. A vote of censure on Mr. Harris was immediately afterwards carried. The motion for Mr. Long's expulsion has since been withdrawn, and a vote of censure passed by 80 against 70. The draught has been again postponed until further orders. An enormous mass meeting of working men has been held at New York, protesting against Legislative interference with strikes. In Louisiana the election for delegates to the State Constitutional Convention has resulted in the success of the Free State party. The steamers Sumter and Hatterbrook have been captured.

MEXICO.—It is reported from New Orleans that the French were marching to attack Matamoras. A preliminary encounter with the Mexicans had resulted favourably to the French. Three French frigates were about to ascend the Rio Grande to co-operate with the land forces. The Mexican Governor Cortinas had ordered all his troops to concentrate at Matamoras. The Imperial cause is rapidly gaining in popularity. Rumours of the occupation of Matamoras reached New Orleans on the 5th inst.

Parliament.

HOUSE OF LORDS.

FRIDAY.—In reply to the Marquis of CLANRICARDE, Earl GRANVILLE stated that a Bill had been prepared, founded on the recommendations in the report of the Commission on English and Irish Courts of Chancery and Common Law, and would be shortly introduced in the House of Commons. Naval Promotion.—Lord CHELMSFORD called attention to the unjust effect of the Order in Council of the 1st of August, 1860, on those naval officers who did not apply for their retirement under the conditions offered by the previous orders of 1846 and 1851. Those officers who preferred to remain on the active list had been deprived of a vested right by the order of 1860, which made retirement compulsory.—The Duke of SOMERSET contended that no injustice had been done by the new regulations. The condition of the Navy List must be taken into account. Fifty years had passed without a naval war, and there were no less than 337 Admirals in the list, though 20 would be enough for the efficiency of the service. The number could not be constantly increased, even in the interest of the navy itself, as it might produce a reaction against the whole system.—The Earl of HARDWICKE said that the uncertainty created by these successive orders was the great hardship of the Navy, and that the officers had had gross injustice done them.—The Earls of DERBY and HARROWBY concurred in this opinion.

MONDAY.—Earl STANHOPE gave notice that on Monday, the 23d of May, he should call attention to the report of the Public School Commissioners. The Warehousing of British Spirits Bill) was read a second time. The Consolidated Fund Bill (15,000,000*l.* was read a third time and passed.

TUESDAY.—The Vagrancy (Scotland) Bill, on the motion of the Duke of ARGYLL, was read a first time. The Mortgage Debentures Bill was read a second time and referred to a select committee; the Joint Stock Companies (Foreign Countries Bill) passed through committee; and the Warehousing of British Spirits Bill was read a third time and passed. American Prizes.—Lord CHELMSFORD brought under notice the manner in which the Government proposed to deal with prizes brought by the belligerent States of America into ports within her Majesty's dominions, as declared in the correspondence presented to Parliament with respect to the Tuscaloosa. The course of procedure contemplated was so objectionable, so opposed to the comity of nations, and so dangerous, that he felt bound to bring it under their lordships' notice. After stating the facts connected with the seizure of the Tuscaloosa, he said that, in eventually releasing her, the Government were perfectly right, but that at least they might have admitted their error and offered some apology. He also condemned the instructions issued to the governors of colonies in November last, as inconsistent with international law, and demanded an explanation of the reasons for issuing them and of the manner in which the remonstrances of the Confederate officer in charge of the vessel had been met, and which was so different from that in which the menaces and threats of the Federal agents had been received and acceded to.—Earl RUSSELL said that the law of nations required that prizes captured at sea should be legally condemned in the prize courts of the captors; but the Confederates had no power to take prizes into their own ports on account of the Federal blockade—a circumstance which rendered the present war altogether anomalous. He contended that the captain of a belligerent cruiser had no right to put guns on board her, and claim to have her treated as a commissioned ship of war. If that could be done, the Confederate cruisers might dispose of every one of their prizes in her Majesty's ports, and this would have the effect of at once violating the royal proclamation and the neutrality of the country. In his opinion the Government were bound to regard the Tuscaloosa as an uncondemned prize: but the law officers of the Crown felt that under all the circumstances of the case it would have been sufficient to have warned her off. He indignantly denied that the Government had truckled to Federal menaces and threats, and asserted that whatever demands Ministers had made upon the Federal Government had been promptly and fairly attended to.—Lord KINGSDOWN argued that a captor was not bound to take a prize before a prize court, but according to the law of nations might burn and destroy her. In fact, he was bound to do so in justice to his own Government if he were unable to take her into port. With regard to the Tuscaloosa the Government had no right to seize her, although she had come into port in violation of the Queen's proclamation. All they ought to have done was to have warned her off, and it was absurd to say that they were in any way bound to restore her to her original owners.—The LORD CHANCELLOR objected to these discussions, on the ground that he and his noble friends might have to deal with the questions to which they referred in their judicial capacity. By the universal usage of nations a captor was bound to have a prize adjudicated before a court to ascertain whether she was enemy's property, and to prevent mistakes being made in the too eager pursuit of booty. This was no doubt a qualification of the old rule, but it was now perfectly established by the general consent of nations. After a few words from the Earl of HARDWICKE the subject dropped.

THURSDAY.—The Royal Assent was given by commission to several Bills. Seat of Government in India.—In answer to the Earl of ELLENBOROUGH, Lord WODEHOUSE said the Secretary for India had come to no decision as to the removal of the seat of the Indian Government from Calcutta to the Upper Provinces, but the subject was still under consideration. Burning of the Dead in India.—The Earl of ELLENBOROUGH asked if the order issued by the Governor of Bengal as to the native mode of disposing of the dead in Calcutta had been communicated to the Governor-General before it was promulgated.—Lord WODEHOUSE believed the prohibition of the native practice of throwing dead bodies into the river was communicated to the Governor-General before it was issued; but that the order as to the removal of the customary burning places was given without his previous sanction.—The Earl of ELLENBOROUGH regretted that a subordinate authority should have given an order that might endanger the peace of the country, without previous reference to the Governor General, residing in the same city. On the order for the third reading of the Punishment of Rape Bill, Lord WODEHOUSE moved an amendment, making the addition of flogging to the sentence discretionary on the part of the judges, instead of compulsory.—Lord WENSLEYDALE thought the increased severity of the punishment, if enacted at all, ought not to be left to the discretion of the judges.—The LORD CHANCELLOR read a letter from the Lord Chief Justice of the Queen's Bench, containing the opinion of the judges that the addition to the punishment would tend to increase the reluctance of juries to convict, but that, if adopted, the infliction ought certainly to be left discretionary.—The Earl of WESTMEATH assented to the amendment.—Earl GREY objected to any alteration of the Bill; he believed the objection made by the Judges was founded chiefly on their unwillingness to give up any of their power. Their Lordships then divided on the amendment; which was carried by 55 to 20. The Bill was then read a third time and passed.—On the order for the second reading of the Regius Professorship of Greek (Oxford) Bill, the Earl of DERBY said he did not intend to oppose the Bill, as he understood the university desired that it should pass. At the same time, he entertained considerable objections to some of its provisions, especially to that which required the professorship to be held by a clergyman. If such a limitation had existed in bygone times, Professor Porson could never have held the appointment, and he thought that the professorship of Greek was not one that could at all times be advantageously held by a clergyman.—The Earl of ELLENBOROUGH opposed the Bill on the ground that it took away from the hard working clergy one of the few rewards which had hitherto been allotted to them, and applied it to a purely secular object.—The LORD CHANCELLOR said that the measure was regarded as satisfactory by the university, which had accepted it as the best remedy for the painful scenes that had recently occurred. He had, however, no objection to insert a proviso to the effect that, in the event of the university endowing the Greek professorship to the amount of 600*l.* a year, the canonry he proposed to attach to the chair should be placed at the disposal of the university.—The Earl of HARROWBY thought this endowment a very graceful act on the part of the Government.—Earl GREY concurred with the Earl of Ellenborough that it was unwise to withdraw a valuable piece of Church preferment from the position it had hitherto occupied of being a reward for purely clerical services.—After a few words from the Earl of CARNARVON, the Bishop of LONDON remarked that he had no doubt that the clerical body would be always able to supply a gentleman fit to undertake the duties of the professorship, and he could only express a hope that all the canonries might be as well disposed of as in being conferred upon a man who must necessarily be one of the most eminent Greek scholars of the day. The Bill was read a second time. The Joint Stock Companies (Foreign Countries) Bill was read a third time and passed. The Registration of County Voters (Ireland) Bill was read a second time.

FRIDAY.—The Steam Rams in the Mersey.—The Earl of DERBY called attention to the correspondence between her Majesty's Government and Mr. Laird respecting the steam rams. The question as to whether the papers should be produced had been ably discussed in the House of Commons, and had been negatived in favour of the Government by a majority of 34. In reviewing the circumstances under which the correspondence had arisen, he characterised the conduct of the Messrs. Laird as everything that was commendable, seeing that they had withheld nothing from the Government; and the conduct of the Government, on the other hand, he considered highly censurable, seeing that it had been most unfair, ungenerous, and he feared illegal.

HOUSE OF COMMONS.

FRIDAY.—On the Order for going into Supply, Mr. LIDDELL moved "That in the opinion of the House further interference on the part of this country in the civil war in China is impolitic and unnecessary." He reviewed the policy adopted of late years with reference to China, urging that our attempts to uphold the Mantchu dynasty as against the Taepings were most baneful in their effect, and tended to injure our character in the East. He also commented upon the employment of Captain Sherard Osborn, Major Gordon, and other British officers, who did not, he said, hold commissions under the Emperor of China direct, but only under Futai, a provincial governor, in whose hands they were powerless to prevent the most deplorable cruelties and excesses, such as those perpetrated at the capture of Soochow. He attributed the failure of Captain Osborn, who had, he said, behaved as a man of honour, to the amateur diplomacy of Mr. Lay. He contended that there was no ground for this interference in the internal affairs of China, as our trade with the country had not fallen off, but had rather increased. He did not ask the House to censure the Government, although he considered their policy had been erroneous in many respects, but he asked them simply to join with him in dissuading the administration from continuing in a course of policy which he believed was unprecedented in the past, and which he hoped would find no favour in the future.—Mr. LAYARD defended the policy of the Government, urging that, had it not been for their exertions to support law and order in China, our trade with that country, amounting to 60 millions sterling per annum, would have been sacrificed, the treaty ports destroyed, and British interests irreparably injured. So far from a reversal of that policy being desirable, he contended that the tidings of such a course would be received with horror and indignation by every British merchant in China.—Mr. W. E. FORSTER said that Mr. Layard had not answered the question on which the House wanted information—namely, whether we were to go on interfering in the civil war for the purpose of putting down the rebellion? He condemned our policy in China as an open and flagrant violation of the laws of neutrality.—Mr. FERRAND declared that, horrible as were the atrocities committed by the Russians in Poland, and by the Prussians in Denmark, they were thrown into the shade by the iniquities committed by British troops in China, acting under the instructions of Whig Governments in England. While he was enlarging upon this topic, the House was counted out.

MONDAY.—Mr. H. LEWIS inquired whether the Garibaldi Meeting on Primrose Hill had been suppressed by the police with the authority of the Home Office.—Sir G. GREY replied that neither he himself, nor any member of the Government, nor the Commissioners of Police, had issued any instructions to the police to interfere. The facts were that the Chief Commissioner of Works had given his sanction to the planting of a tree on Primrose Hill, in commemoration of Shakspere, and for the purpose of preserving order had secured the attendance of a certain number of police. After the proceedings connected with this ceremonial had terminated, another meeting was held, over which a chairman was appointed, to discuss the cause of the departure of General Garibaldi, when the inspector of police intimated to the parties that the meeting came within the category of those which had been prohibited by a notice issued by the Commissioners of Works during the Hyde Park riots. The meeting was not accompanied by any tumult, and perhaps, under the circumstances, the police might have exercised a discretion, and allowed the proceedings to go on. The report of the Committee of Ways and Means on the Fire Insurance Duty was brought up and agreed to. On the order for the second reading of the Customs and Inland Revenue Bill, a short discussion took place on some of the details of the Bill, which was ultimately read a second time. The House then went into committee on the Civil Bill Courts (Ireland) Bill, on its recommittal, and the clauses underwent a long discussion.—On the order for the second reading of the Thames Conservancy Bill, Mr. LOCKE suggested that, as the Bill affected the rights of the Watermen's Company and the privileges of the Thames watermen, it should be referred to a Select Committee.—Mr. HUTT said, this being a hybrid Bill, the usual course was, after the second reading, to refer it to a Select Committee, where all parties aggrieved might be heard by counsel and produce witnesses.—After a few remarks by Alderman ROSE, the Bill was read a second time. The House then went into committee on the Court of Chancery (Despatch of Business) Bill, the clauses of which were agreed to. The Penal Servitude Acts Consolidation Bill was withdrawn.—Mr. SCHOLEFIELD moved the second reading of the Partnership Law Amendment Bill, explaining the objects and nature of the measure.—Mr. HUBBARD moved as an amendment that the Bill be read a second time that day six months. He condemned the Bill as inconsistent with commercial morality, and as a mischievous interference with our mercantile legislation.—Mr. MALINS said that the principle of limited liability was now largely and beneficially acted upon, and that it was the object of the Bill to extend it.—Mr. K. HODGSON likewise defended the Bill, which would give freedom to contracts, and so far from causing commercial immorality, it would, in his opinion, raise the tone of commercial morality.—Sir G. BOWYER, Mr. GREGSON, Alderman SALOMONS, and Mr. BUCHANAN, also supported the Bill, the latter expressing a hope that it would be extended to Scotland. The amendment was negatived without a division, and the Bill was read a second time. The Charitable Assurances Enrolments Bill passed through committee. The remaining members of the select committee on the Bankruptcy Act were nominated, notice being given that Mr. Roebuck and Mr. Verner should be added.—The ATTORNEY GENERAL for IRELAND moved for leave to bring in a Bill to alter the constitution and amend the practice and course of proceeding in the High Court of Chancery in Ireland. He explained the principal provisions of the measure, which included the abolition of the present offices of taxing masters and the creation in their stead of a vice-chancellor, who, with the Lord Chancellor and the Master of the Rolls, would be sufficient to do the whole work. The Chancery Regulation Act of 1854 would also be repealed, and the practice of procedure of the Court of Chancery would in all respects be assimilated to that in operation in England. A large annual saving would be the result of these arrangements.—Mr. WHITESIDE contended that the work was now well done for 12,000*l.* a year, but that it would cost 27,000*l.* if the proposed reforms were carried out. He complained that many of the recommendations of the Commissioners had been altogether overlooked by the framers of the Bill. In his opinion all the improvements contemplated by the Bill might be effected by a new code of rules adapted to the existing machinery of the Court of Chancery.—After some discussion, in which Sir P. O'BRIEN, Mr. SCULLY, Mr. VANCE, Colonel DUNNE, and others took part, leave was given to bring in the Bill. Under Secretaryships of State.—Mr. MASSEY moved that the Marquis of Hartington be at liberty to appear, by his counsel and agents, before the Select Committee appointed to inquire whether the Under Secretary of State who was last appointed to that office thereby vacated his seat. The motion was agreed to.

TUESDAY.—The War in New Zealand.—Mr. A. MILLS called attention to the war now going in New Zealand, and moved for all correspondence between the Governor and the Colonial Office relating to the policy of confiscation which had been adopted by the New Zealand Legislature. Besides the enormous cost of this war, there were other considerations which called for the interference of the Imperial Parliament. By the last news it appeared that the Legislature of New Zealand had passed certain laws, one of which confiscated 9,000,000 acres of native lands: and another invested the Colonial Government with arbitrary power, to an extent almost unparalleled, of suspending the law and of imprisonment. These Acts were now in operation in the colony, and he thought the subject called for the attention of Parliament. He discussed the transactions between the Colonial Government and the natives of New Zealand in relation to the title to land, and the grounds which the natives had for believing they had not experienced just treatment; and he expressed his conviction that the policy of the Colonial Government towards the Maori race had been inconsistent, fluctuating, and imbecile, affording extenuating circumstances in favour of the natives.—Mr. BUXTON seconded the motion.—Mr. CARDWELL said he had no objection to the motion. The question was one of great difficulty. The natives were a most remarkable people. We had established a colony among them with a local Government, in which the natives had no voice, and hence the problem to be solved. The war had not been caused by the King movement, nor was it commenced in order to put down that movement. The cause of the war, as distinctly stated by Sir G. Grey, was the existence of a combination among the natives in the northern island for the total expulsion of the white race. It was necessary, then, to consider what were the measures to be adopted on the conclusion of the war, in order to secure permanent peace: and Sir G. Grey had proposed to locate bodies of European settlers upon lands taken from the tribes guilty of the outrages which occasioned the war. He was not going to defend the laws referred to by Mr. Mills, or to justify their language; but he asked what course was it incumbent upon the Imperial Government to take on receiving these Acts? To disallow them would lead to serious evils; but it was within the power of the Crown, by its instructions, to limit and restrain the operation of the Acts; and that course had been taken. No confiscation would take place without the knowledge and approval of the Governor, and other instructions had been sent out for the guidance of the Colonial Government in the arrangements for the pacification and settlement of the colony.—Lord R. CECIL considered the speech of Mr Cardwell satisfactory, and hoped the New Zealand Assembly would accept the rebuke he had administered.—Sir J. TRELAWNY accepted Mr. Cardwell's policy as an earnest of good intentions for the future.—Lord A. CHURCHILL vindicated the colonists from the charge of having brought on the war by rapacious dealings with the natives in the purchase of lands.—Mr. C. FORTESCUE said that the question in the present war was totally different from that in the old quarrel about Wirimu Kingi and the Treaty of Waitangi. The present war had been wantonly provoked by the natives. He defended the New Zealand Government, and said that there was nothing in the acts referred to to show that the Government meant to make an unjust and tyrannical use of the powers they conferred.—Sir J. PAKINGTON remarked that the recent state of affairs in New Zealand, which had caused great anxiety, were the first fruits of that policy by which the Legislature of the colony was enabled to deal with native affairs. He considered the statement of Mr. Cardwell to be most satisfactory.—Mr. SELWYN observed that his satisfaction at that statement had been much lessened by the speech of Mr. Fortescue. He reviewed and censured the policy of the Government in reference to the colony, to which he traced the origin of the present war.—Mr. MILLS having replied, the motion was agreed to. Harbour of Refuge.—Mr. LINDSAY moved a resolution that her Majesty's Government should now adopt measures for the construction of harbours of refuge on the coasts of Great Britain and Ireland, recommended by a committee of this House in 1858, by a Royal Commission in 1859, and by a resolution of this House in 1860. The necessity of the works had been demonstrated by the facts proved in the inquiries referred to. With regard to the cost, he was of opinion that the harbours might be constructed by convict labour at less than the estimate of the Royal Commissioners, and they would be available not only as harbours of refuge, but as rendezvous for ships of war. On the last point he showed the prodigious annual loss of lives and of property on the coasts of this country, observing that if one-half or even one-sixth of these losses could have been prevented by having harbours of refuge, the object was one of great national importance.—Mr. CAVE seconded the motion.—Sir S. NORTHCOTE moved as an amendment, the addition of the following words at the end of the resolution :—"And make provision for wholly or in part defraying the expense of such harbours as it may be thought right to construct by means of tolls upon shipping, as recommended by the Committee of this House." He proposed this amendment on behalf of the tax-payer; but he also suggested whether a constitutional principle was not involved in the matter. The Committee of 1858, upon the main question, as to the policy of a further grant of public money for this purpose, came to the conclusion that any such advance should be repaid by a charge upon shipping, and they left the adjustment of the charge to her Majesty's Government.—Mr. BLAKE, Mr. PEASE, and Sir J. PAKINGTON supported the motion; Mr. BAXTER opposed it.—Mr. M. GIBSON opposed both the motion and the amendment, contending that the House would not be justified in passing a resolution which would pledge it to an indefinite and enormous expenditure without indicating the means by which that expenditure was to be met. The shipping interest was decidedly opposed to the payment of passing tolls for the support of harbours which they never used. The idea of getting large pecuniary assistance from the districts to be served by those harbours was perfectly fallacious, and therefore the only alternative was to vote four millions of money for the purpose. Moreover, he contended that it would be unwise to tax the public or the shipping interest to build harbours of refuge to receive unseaworthy ships. He explained the steps taken towards saving life on the coasts of the United Kingdom, and urged that it was the wish of the Government to do all that was right in policy and just to the ratepayers in that respect. They could not, however, recommend that beneficent legislation should be carried too far.—Mr. HENLEY said he would support the amendment of Sir S. Northcote, as it would make that clear which was not now apparent, namely, the source from which the money was to come.—After some remarks by Sir F. SMITH, Sir J. ELPHINSTONE, Mr. MAGUIRE, and Mr. SOMES, Mr. LINDSAY replied, when the amendment was negatived on a division, by 191 to 39 On a further division, the original motion was also negatived by 142 to 84.—Lord R. MONTAGU moved for a Select Committee to inquire into any plans for dealing with the Sewage of the Metropolis and other large towns, with a view to its utilisation for agricultural purposes —Sir J. PAXTON was of opinion that the inquiry would be of no use.—After a few remarks by Mr. J. MILLER and Mr. CAIRD, the motion was agreed to.

WEDNESDAY.—Church Rates.—On the order for the second reading of the Church Rates Commutation Bill, Mr. HADFIELD raised an objection to the Bill upon a point of order with reference to the rules of the House.—The SPEAKER overrruled the objection.—Mr. NEWDEGATE then moved the second reading of the Bill, and stated that its object was to remove all personal liability in respect to Church-rates, and make them a charge upon real property, to be paid by the owner through the occupier. After explaining the machinery he proposed for the collection and administration of the fund, he entered very fully into the reasons which had induced him, notwithstanding the present position of the Church-rate question, to persevere in this measure. If the Bill was read a second time, he proposed to refer it to a Select Committee, in order that its provisions, to which he was not wedded, mightbe carefully examined and adapted to carry out the settlement of the question.—Sir C. DOUGLAS moved as an amendment that the Bill be read a second time that day six months. He declined to discuss the Bill. The only course to be taken by the opponents of Church-rates was to accept the position in which they stood with reference to this question, and leave it to be discussed on the hustings at a general election.—Mr. SALT said he should vote for the second reading, though he objected to certain parts of the Bill.—Alderman ROSE and Mr. R. LONG supported the Bill, which was opposed by Lord FERMOY and Mr. LOCKE.—Lord J. MANNERS, giving full credit to Mr. NEWDEGATE for the great pains he had taken in the preparation of the Bill, suggested to him whether he had the least hope of its settling the question, and counselling him to rest satisfied with having directed the attention of the country to its principle and main provisions, and to withdraw the Bill.—Sir C. WOOD concurred in this advice; but, after a few remarks by Sir J. FERGUSSON, the House divided, when the original motion was negatived by 169 to 60. The amendment was then agreed to. The Bill was therefore lost —Sir J. HAY, in moving the second reading of the Bank Notes (Scotland) Bill, explained that its object was to enable all persons carrying on the business of bankers in Scotland to issue their own notes against the bullion in their coffers.—Mr. BLACK moved that the Bill be read a second time that day six months. He said that the measure was uncalled for, that it would disturb the existing system, and that the change, if made, should extend to the whole kingdom.—Mr. FINLAY supported the Bill, approving its principle, though not all its details.—The CHANCELLOR of the EXCHEQUER, in supporting the amendment, said he did so not from an inveterate hostility to its principle, namely, the extension of the issue of paper against gold, in which there was nothing dangerous or unsound. But the Bill would involve a very extensive question. The system of banking and currency in Scotland could not be considered apart from that in England, and he thought the matter was not yet ripe for general legislation.—After some remarks by Mr DUNLOP, Sir T. COLEBROOKE, Mr. K. HODGSON, Mr. C. EWING, Mr. BUCHANAN, and other members, the Bill was withdrawn. The House then went into Committee upon the Trespass (Ireland) Bill; but the first clause was still under discussion when the time arrived for closing debate. The Court of Chancery Despatch of Business Bill, and the Fish Trends (Scotland) Bill were read a third time and passed.—Mr. DUNLOP obtained leave to bring in a Bill to amend the Act for the Valuation of Lands and Heritages in Scotland.—Mr. MASSEY brought up the report from the Select Committee on privileges, stating that the seat of the Under-Secretary of State last appointed (Lord Wartington) was not vacated.

THURSDAY.—American Affairs.—Sir G. GREY, in answer to Mr. HOPWOOD, said that it was not the intention of the Government to propose a Conference of European Powers on American affairs, as they felt persuaded that the Government of the Federal States would not listen to such a proposal. In reply to Mr. HEYGATE, Mr. COWPER said that the Government had determined upon the erection of a new National Gallery at the rear of Burlington House, and that the plans and estimates would shortly be laid on the table. Seizure of the Tuscaloosa.—On the order for going into committee of supply, Mr. PEACOCKE called attention to the case of the Confederate vessel Tuscaloosa, and to the instruction to seize her contained in the despatch of the Colonial Office to the Governor of the Cape of Good Hope, dated the 4th of November last, and which he held was a weak and illegal concession to the menaces and demands of the Federal Government. He argued, on the authority of Lord Stowell, Wheaton and other authorities on questions of international law, that the Tuscaloosa was sufficiently clothed with the character of a vessel of war to exempt her from seizure under the Queen's proclamation of neutrality, and that the commander of the Alabama, who had captured her and converted her into a Confederate cruiser, had as much right to commission her in that capacity as a commodore. In conclusion, he moved that the instructions contained in the despatch of the Duke of Newcastle to Sir P. WODEHOUSE, dated the 4th of Nov., 1863, and which remains still unrevoked, are at variance with the principles of international law.—The SOLICITOR-GENERAL, in opposing the motion, admitted that the instructions sent to the Cape were not as full and explicit as they might have been, but still that they were not opposed to international law. He held that a neutral Power had the right to exhibit its neutrality by detaining a vessel with the view of restoring her to her original owners, and that as the Tuscaloosa had clearly entered Simon's Bay in violation of the Queen's proclamation, the colonial authorities were justified in detaining her. The question at issue was whether the Tuscaloosa was a prize of war when she entered the Bay, or whether she had lost that character and assumed the new character of a vessel of war. There was, in his opinion, no doubt that she was a prize of war, and that her supposed conversion into a Confederate cruisor was a mere plan and pretence.—Mr. WHITESIDE argued that we had shamefully violated our alleged neutrality, as there could be no doubt whatever that the Tuscaloosa was lawfully converted into a tender to the Alabama, that her commander had a legal commission, and that we had no right whatever to detain her. If the Tuscaloosa had been a prize of the Alabama, instead of her tender, she ought to have been warned off, but under no circumstance was her seizure to be justified.—Mr. J. J. POWELL argued that all the evidence went to show that the Tuscaloosa was a prize of war, and not a tender to the Alabama, as represented by the commander of the latter vessel.—Sir J. ELPHINSTONE held a contrary opinion, while Mr. LEFEVRE contended that the Tuscaloosa came into Simon's Bay as a prize of war, and not as a vessel of war.—Mr. NEATE and Mr. DENMAN opposed the motion, which was supported by Sir J. HAY, Mr. M. SMITH, and Mr. BOVILL.—The ATTORNEY-GENERAL said he was prepared to maintain that the despatch to Governor Wodehouse contained no principle at variance with international law. At the same time he was ready to admit that the Acting Attorney-General at the Cape had put an erroneous interpretation upon the meaning of the Duke of Newcastle. He asked the House not to affirm a resolution which would be derogatory to the supremacy of the Sovereign and the honour and dignity of the country.—Sir H. CAIRNS contended that a mistake had been made, and that the Government, in returning the Tuscaloosa to the Confederates without a word of apology or any offer of reparation or indemnity, had acted as they would not have dared to do towards a strong Power. On a division the motion was negatived by 219 to 185. The House then went into Committee of Supply pro formâ on the Customs and Inland Revenue Bill.

FRIDAY.—Agricultural Statistics.—Mr. CAIRD gave notice that on that day week he should propose a motion on the subject of agricultural statistics. The Conference.—In answer to Mr. DISRAELI, Sir G. GREY said he was not able to say on what day the Conference would re-assemble. He did not believe any particular day was fixed, but it had not been adjourned sine die.—Mr. HORSMAN inquired what was the cause of the adjournment.—Sir G. GREY was not prepared to state. Case of Mr. Bewicke.—Mr. H. BERKELEY moved that the House should on Monday resolve itself into a Committee, to consider an address to her Majesty, praying that compensation might be made to Mr. William Bewicke, of Threepwood Hall, Northumberland, for the degradation and loss he had suffered in being imprisoned for 12 months as a felon, on a charge since proved to be false; and for the heavy expenses he had incurred in prosecuting the persons who had conspired against him.—Sir G. GREY opposed the motion, but said that he would not object to refer the question of Mr. Bewicke's loss of property to a select committee.

Metropolis and its Vicinity.

GENERAL GARIBALDI'S VISIT.—On Saturday General Garibaldi was up with the dawn, strolling about the beautiful grounds of Cliefden. At 11 o'clock he left the house in a carriage and four, accompanied by the Duchess Dowager of Sutherland and the Duchess of Argyll, and proceeded by way of Slough to inspect the Royal model farm at Windsor. In the course of his drive he was everywhere enthusiastically received. Upon reaching the farm he was received by Mr. Tait, the bailiff of the Home Farm, who showed the visitors over the buildings. He then visited the Royal dairy and the Royal gardens at Frogmore, where they were received by Mr. Ingram, who explained the arrangements as the General was driven slowly through the grounds. Garibaldi then paid a visit to the Flemish Farm, where Mr. Brebner was in attendance and showed him among the cattle a young bull two years old, which was named "Garibaldi" two years ago. Before the visit had concluded a number of farmers and others arrived on the field, and if the General had prolonged his stay for an hour or more the whole town of Windsor and the adjacent villages would have flocked to the scene. A number of the farmers offered to present him with a steel plough as a token of their recognition of his great merit. The General, while thanking them for their offer, said that his farm only consisted of about 25 acres, and that the rest of the island of Caprera was nothing better than barren rock and unproductive mountain, so that a steam-plough, much as he admired its operations, would be of little or no value to him. He, therefore, courteously refused the donation, and expressed his thanks with the warmest feeling of gratitude. He reached Cliefden on his return about half-past 2 o'clock. A luncheon was then served, at which 30 visitors were present. In the afternoon Garibaldi and a party of gentlemen went out in boats on the Thames, where they spent a considerable time. The General expressed himself delighted with the surrounding scenery, and especially with the picturesque appearance of Cliefden from the river. In the evening the visitors were entertained at dinner by the Duchess Dowager. On Monday morning at an early hour the General, accompanied by the Duke and Duchess of Sutherland, and the Dowager Duchess, left Cliefden in a carriage and four, and drove over to Eton College. He arrived at Eton shortly before nine o'clock, and on driving into the quadrangle, was received by the Provost, the head and other masters, and the scholars, many of whom wore the costume of the College Rifle Corps, and who received him with enthusiastic cheers. On leaving Eton, he drove to the Slough station, where the Marchioness of Kildare, the Earl of Shaftesbury, Lord and Lady Taunton, the Earl of Harrowby, and other distinguished persons were waiting to take leave of him. On the arrival of the 9.15 express from Paddington, the General, accompanied by his two sons, his suite, and the Duke of Sutherland, took their places in the saloon carriage prepared for the occasion, and left Slough amid the cheers of the spectators. The train stopped a few minutes at Didcot Junction, at which a large number of persons received the General with loud cheers. At Reading the Mayor was introduced to General Garibaldi, and presented an address from the working men of that town. The General shook hands with them, and begged them to give his thanks to the people of Reading. The train then started for Swindon, and as it approached the station a salute of detonating signals was fired by the train, and announced his approach. When the train stopped the people cheered loudly, and at the request of the committee the General alighted and proceeded to the refreshment room. When he reached the entrance the Rev. Mr. Campbell, the incumbent of St. Mark's, held up a daughter of Mr. Benskin's, of the Queen's Hotel, who presented Garibaldi with a beautiful bouquet from the Conservatory of the Goddard Arms, Old Swindon. The General kissed the child. Whilst partaking of refreshment, many of the crowd took up positions behind his chair, and interrupted him whilst eating. When the bell rung for the train to start, the General, escorted by the committee, Mr. Gooch, of the Great Western, and Superintendent Haynes of the constabulary, went towards his carriage, situated at the further end of the platform. The crush was tremendous, and in spite of the exertions of the committee there was the greatest difficulty in reaching the carriage. The cheering was most enthusiastic, and the working men rushed forward to shake hands. When the crush was at its height a girl nearly fainted, when Garibaldi put forward his arm to save her, and gave her a kiss. He repeatedly expressed his thanks and acknowledgments, and after a stay of nearly 20 minutes, the train once more moved forward amid the cheers of the assembled multitude. On arriving at Bristol, a deputation of citizens, headed by the Mayor, and accompanied by Mr. Gore Langton, M.P., were in attendance, to present two addresses to the General; but as soon as the train arrived the mob broke down the barricades, thronged the platform, and overpowered the police, and at last the carriage which conveyed Garibaldi and his party was detached and sent off as a special train. On arriving at Durston the train left the Bristol and Exeter line and proceeded through Yeovil to Weymouth, greatly to the disappointment of the Exeter people, who had been waiting his arrival at the station for two hours before they heard of the change of route. At Weymouth, where he received quite an ovation, he embarked and paid a visit to the Channel fleet. He dined with Admiral Dacres on board the Edgar, and afterwards witnessed quarter firing on board the Warrior. He then relanded at Weymouth and proceeded to Taunton, where he arrived at 9.40 P.M. The railway station was illuminated, and an immense crowd received the General with great cheers. He passed through Exeter about 11 o'clock, and reached Plymouth shortly before 1 A.M. on Tuesday morning. Great preparations had been made at Plymouth, and it was calculated that on the Devon and Cornwall lines at least 100,000 spectators were in attendance on the previous afternoon before the detour to Weymouth was announced. As it was, crowds of people remained about the station during the afternoon and evening, and when he at length arrived he was received by the mayor and a deputation in the presence of upwards of 3000 persons. From the crowd and the lateness of the hour no attempt was made to present the address which had been prepared, nor could the General make a speech to the multitude present on account of the noise and confusion. He left at 1.5 A.M. for Cornwall on a visit to Colonel Peard, "Garibaldi's Englishman," at Penquite, where he arrived at 3 o'clock on Tuesday morning. In the afternoon the Mayors of Plymouth, Devonport, and Bodmin, and the Plymouth branch of the Polish league, arrived at Penquite, and presented addresses to the General, who received them most cordially, warmly shaking their hands. In his replies he said all the nationalities of Europe were friendly to England because she had no wish to take the property of other nations, as shown in the cession of the Ionian Islands. He also intimated the possibility of his paying another visit to England shortly. On Wednesday morning at an early hour he left Penquite for Fowey, a distance of 3½ miles, and arrived there about 9 o'clock. He was received by Mr. Treffry, and on descending from the carriage walked to the Albert quay, his path being strewn with flowers by several young ladies selected for the purpose. The General embarked under a salute of 15 guns from the battery, given by the Volunteer artillerymen. He was received on board the Ondine, in Fowey harbour, by the Duke of Sutherland and the Earl of Sefton, who with young Ricciotti, Dr. Basile, Signors Basso and Pietro, have gone with him to Caprera. On reaching the deck the General was affected to tears, and earnestly begged Colonel Peard to assure the British nation how deeply he felt his reception in England. He said that the impression made by the visit could never be effaced from his memory; and he hoped to return and see his friends again. The yacht left under steam and staysails, and shaped a course for Ushant, but her lower rigging having become loose, she bore up for St. Mawes, in Falmouth Harbour, where she remained until Thursday morning, when she started with a fair wind and fine weather for Caprera. Before leaving London General Garibaldi issued the following farewell address to the English nation:—

"I offer my heartfelt gratitude and thanks to the English nation and their Government for the reception I have met with in this free land. I came here with the primitive object of thanking them for their sympathy for me and for my country, and this my first object is accomplished. I have desired to be altogether at the disposition of my English friends, and to go to every place where I might be wished to go, but I find that I cannot now fulfil all these engagements of my heart. If I have caused some trouble and disappointment to many friends, I ask their pardon, but I cannot draw the line between where I could and where I could not go, and therefore for the present these are my thanks and my farewell. Still, I hope, perhaps at no distant time, to return to see my friends in the domestic life of England, and to redeem some of my engagements with the generous people of this country, which, with deep regret, I feel that I cannot now fulfil. G. Garibaldi.

"26, Prince's Gate, London, April 22."

Before leaving Penquite the General addressed the following communication "to the English Newspapers," with the accompanying address to the nation at large: "I cannot leave England without offering a public homage to the power of the British press, and a special tribute of gratitude to all those journals which were the sincere and faithful organs of public opinion towards me, and the benevolent interpreters of my admiration and feelings towards the nation who gave me hospitality. I send, therefore, a hearty greeting to all the representatives of the press. G. Garibaldi.

"Illustrious cities, highly reputed corporations, representative bodies from every class of citizens, have honoured me with countless addresses, to which my heart would have desired, but time is wanting me to answer worthily. I hope, nevertheless, to be allowed to fulfil in part my debt, by this special farewell of affection and gratitude to all. On this occasion I cannot, however, speak of myself alone, because I must not interpret the many eloquent and generous words that have been addressed to me as a mere personal honour—which is of little importance beside the greatness of the cause for which in these days the heart of the English people and mine have throbbed in unison—but as a fresh proof of that sympathising solicitude that the richest, the most prosperous, and the freest nation in the world nourishes towards another nation, which has been twice recognised as the mother of civilisation, and has through martyrdom, through persevering struggles, carried on with daring and with wisdom, become worthy of reassuming her place in the world, and proclaiming, I am risen. For this reason I believe I can reveal the thought of Italy to England, as I believe I may hold up England as an example and a hope to Italy. The two nations are already sisters: they may speak together in sincerity and confidence. In England, the institutions of the country, the respect for the laws, all that prodigious contexture of autonomous and yet organised forces, of order true and lawful, not vulgar or violent, combined with absolute individual freedom, freedom of conscience, freedom of domicile, freedom of the press, of speech, and of association; the right of national defence, not the privilege of a special body, but recognized to all; an army bright in glory, yet untainted with that disease of modern times known under the sinister name of militarism; the Rifle Volunteers, England's pride and my dream, the strength, the decorum, the activity, the perseverance—the perseverance, above all, by which when once a position or an institution is conquered retreat is never known,—all these things, which form the admiration of civilised peoples from afar and excite an intense desire to emulate, I would almost say to envy on a nearer view, may and should be proposed as an example to Italy. For myself it was impossible to spend a few days in this land without doing homage to these many truths, and still more without freely recording them to my fellow countrymen, not so much in testimony of the deep impression England has left on my own mind as for a lesson and incitement to them. To the English people I have nothing to recall which they do not know. They know what Italy desires. Italy has made up her mind to exist; she has the right to do so, and, if any should doubt it, I would add that she already exists in fact, and that nothing will prevent her completing herself. Italy desires but to break the yoke of the two adverse Powers that oppress her, and—let the world hear it—she can never rest until she shall have accomplished this aim, which is for her a question of life or death. The English people,—who would rather disappear under their ocean than allow the sacred soil of their country to be violated by the foreigner—will comprehend how legitimate are the aspirations and how immovable the resolves of my country. England knows that in disinterestedly co-operating in favour of the destinies of Italy in 1859 she contributed to further order and peace in Europe,—that peace and that order which alone are durable and beneficent, because founded on justice and on progress. England will, I am convinced, be ever more and more confirmed in this view—that if it is for Italy to show herself strong and really to be strong and independent of servile alliances, in order to induce confidence from her true friends (among whom the first place is due to England), England herself will see in how much the alliance of a young, civilised, and free nation like Italy is preferable to the heterogeneous and insecure connubium with despotic Powers. Yet I cannot hope, I say it with grief, that Italy will be able to accomplish her destiny without again encountering the direful proof of arms. England's voice is listened to and respected; she is in a great degree arbitress of the fate of Europe, but let her be fully pursuaded that she can never solve the Italian question, or that of the other nationalities, by any contrivance of compensation and diplomatic exchanges. But, in face of the great principle of the solidarity of peoples, proclaimed and sanctioned by universal conscience, I cannot speak of Italy alone, still less at a time when the omen and promise of this true holy alliance has been irrevocably confirmed, when lately I pressed the hands of proscribed men from every part of Europe. On quitting this hospitable shore, I can no longer conceal the secret wish of my heart in recommending the cause of oppressed peoples to the most generous and sagacious of nations. Sure that their aims are certain and their triumph fated, England will know how to spread over them the powerful shield of her name, and to sustain them, if need be, with her strong arm. England knows that she will not be alone in this great mission. Across the Straits there lives another gigantic people that has been oft times impelled by the arts of despotism to be the rival and the enemy of this country, but which freedom will be the means of turning into peaceful competitor and friend. Freedom! this is the sun that would fructify the sincere and formidable alliance of the two peoples—of civilisation against savagery—and by which, without unsheathing the sword, the great work of the peace of the world would be installed. "G. Garibaldi."

Garibaldi Meeting.—After the conclusion of the Shakspeare ceremony on Saturday an indignation meeting was attempted to be held on Primrose Hill, to protest against the suspected action of the Government in inducing Garibaldi to leave the country; Mr. Beales, who had been appointed to take the chair, had hardly commenced his speech when Inspector Stokes, at the head of a strong body of police, interfered and stopped the proceedings. The prohibition occasioned some surprise and a good deal of irritation, and at one time there was some apprehension of a riot. The meeting however peaceably dispersed, after appointing a deputation to wait upon Sir G. Grey, and ask whether this interference was by his orders. On Wednesday the deputation had an interview with Sir G. Grey, who told them, as he had already stated in the House of Commons, that neither he nor Sir R. Mayne had given orders to interfere with the demonstration, but the police themselves had done so under an old order issued at the time of the Hyde Park riots. The Working Men's Committee met on the same evening and resolved to hold another meeting on the 7th of May, and to raise a subscription for the purpose of testing the legality of the order referred to, in the event of the meeting being again interfered with.

The Shakspeare Celebration. — Saturday being the tercentenary of Shakspeare's birth was observed as a memorial day all over England. In the metropolis the actors commenced the celebration with a midnight supper on the previous night, Mr. Webster, of the Adelphi, in the chair, at which the most noticeable incidents were the graces said on the occasion; that before the meal being, "May good digestion wait on appetite and health on both," and that after the meal being, "For what we have received may the Spirit of Shakspeare bless the meeting." In the course of the morning a large crowd, chiefly of working people, assembled on Primrose Hill, where Mr. Phelps, the tragedian, at the request of the committee, planted a young oak, the gift of her Majesty, which was watered by water brought from the river Avon. Mr. Phelps delivered a short address on the occasion, but the other part of the ceremonial, including the procession of working men, was a failure. In the evening there was a musical and dramatic fête at the Agricultural Hall, Islington. — The Lord Mayor presided last week at a meeting at the Mansion House, when Mr. Cowper and Mr. Tite, M.P., appeared as a deputation from the Shakspeare Committee to urge upon the citizens the proposition of erecting a monument to Shakspeare in the Green Park, Piccadilly, which should be worthy of the great dramatist as well as of the metropolis, and the art of the 19th century. Nearly 3000*l.* has already been subscribed for the work, and a committee of citizens was appointed to assist in raising the remainder of the sum required for the purpose.

Revision of the Liturgy.—The annual meeting of the Association for the Revision of the Liturgy was held on Thursday at Willis's Rooms, when the chairman, Lord Ebury, who is also a member of the Royal Commission recently appointed on this subject, made the important statement that, though he was not at liberty to divulge what was doing in that Commission, he might state that the days, and even the hours, of the Act of Uniformity were numbered. This statement was received by the meeting with loud cheers.

The Fire Brigade.—The Metropolitan Board of Works met on Wednesday in committee, to consider a proposal of Sir George Grey, that the London Fire Establishment should be put under their management. The terms were, that the present supply of fire engines should be handed over to them free of charge, that the Government would contribute a certain sum, and that the fire insurance companies had offered to bear 30 per cent. of the expense, provided that the aggregate sum demanded from them did not exceed 10,000*l.* An amendment was proposed and carried, that the contributions of the insurance companies should not be limited by any maximum sum, and with this modification the proposal of the Home Office was unanimously agreed to.

The Convict Devine.—The Sheriffs have received a communication from the Home Office, acquainting them that there does not appear any sufficient cause for interference with the execution of the capital sentence, the death of the murdered man having been the direct result of deadly violence committed in cold blood for the purpose of robbery. He has made a full confession of his guilt.

THE PUBLIC HEALTH.—The Registrar-General's Weekly Return states that the deaths registered in London in the week that ended Saturday, April 23, were 1384. The average number in the corresponding weeks of 10 years, 1854-63, corrected for increase of population, was 1311. The present return is therefore 73 above the average. During the week the births of 1033 boys and 967 girls, in all 2000 children, were registered in London. In the ten corresponding weeks of the years 1854-63 the average number was 2032.

LIVERPOOL.—On Monday Messrs. Fletcher, Hull, & Stone, the solicitors for the defendants in the celebrated Alexandra case, formally received the Alexandra from her Majesty's collector of Customs at Liverpool, who received orders on Friday last to restore the ship to her owners. —An adjourned inquest was held in this town a few days since, on Mr. John Lingard, a Liverpool tradesman who had been poisoned by a mistake in making up a prescription. It appeared that on the 11th inst., having a cold in the eye, he obtained a prescription from Dr. Nottingham, which was made up at the shop of Messrs. Clay and Abraham, Bold Street. The medicine was a lotion and powder, and half-an-hour after taking the latter, Mr. Lingard expired in great agony, displaying all the symptoms of poisoning by strychnine. By the direction of the coroner, the contents of the stomach were analysed by Dr. Edwards, analytical chemist, who deposed that he found sufficient strychnine in the stomach to cause the death of a healthy adult. Mr. Whitton, assistant to Messrs. Clay and Abraham, stated that the prescription was made up by a young man named Poole. The greatest possible care was exercised in this branch of the business, the medicines which were poisonous and dangerous being kept in coloured bottles, and on different shelves. Mr. Poole had been two years in the employ, and had made up in that time between 50,000 and 60,000 prescriptions. The evidence, however, showed that the strychnine bottle was kept on the same shelf as the James's Powder, the medicine prescribed by Dr. Nottingham. The Jury returned a verdict that Mr. Lingard came to his death through the culpable negligence of Richard Poole in making up the medicine. In answer to the Coroner, the Foreman stated that they intended the verdict to be one of Manslaughter. They also made a presentment that there might be a better arrangement of the bottles than that at present adopted by Clay and Abraham. A few days afterwards the Coroner again sat for the purpose of accepting bail for Mr. Poole. He exhibited to the jury a number of Thouger's patent bottles, which had been constructed with the object of preventing accidental poisoning, and had been approved by Dr. Lankester. The ordinary dispensing label is surrounded by sandpaper, and a portion of the bottle is covered by the same material, which being felt by the dispenser or patient in handling the bottle at once shows that it contains some dangerous preparation. Mr. Bird, a chemist in this town, also exhibited his safety poison bottles and stoppers, which would seem to be still more effective than that of Mr. Thouger. The stopper has sharp, angular points, which cannot be removed without inflicting considerable pain upon the hand, unless the dispenser puts down both the dispensing glass and the medicine bottle. By this contrivance any one using the bottle would be so distinctly reminded that it contained poison that a mistake could not occur even in the dark.

STRATFORD ON AVON.—At the Shakspeare dinner on Saturday evening about 700 persons were present, and speeches were delivered by the Earl of Carlisle, who presided, the Archbishop of Dublin, the Earl of Shrewsbury, Lord Leigh, Lord Houghton, Lord Wrottesley, and other gentlemen. Addresses were presented to the Mayor from the German Hochstift, and telegrams of sympathy were received from Moscow, Kharkov, and other places. One peculiarity of the banquet was that the bill of fare was printed with Shakspearian mottos for the bread, the potatos, the ducks, the eels, the beer, and the champagne. On Sunday morning the Archbishop of Dublin preached a sermon on Shakspeare in the parish church to a congregation larger, perhaps, than was ever before assembled within its walls. The archbishop took as his text the first verse of the Epistle of the day—"Every good gift and every perfect gift is from above, and cometh down from the Father of Light." In the afternoon Dr. Wordsworth, the Bishop of St. Andrews, preached also on Shakspeare, taking for his text the 145th Psalm, 10th verse, "All Thy works praise Thee, O Lord, and Thy saints give thanks unto Thee." On Monday the musical performance, as arranged in the programme we published last week, took place with complete success, and on Tuesday the company paid a visit to Charlecote, the scene of the deer stealing, and the seat of Mr. Spencer Lucy, the descendant of Sir Thomas whom the dramatist has immortalised as Justice Shallow in "The Merry Wives of Windsor." On the subsequent days the entertainments were carried out in accordance with the programme already published.

WESTERHAM.—A woman, named Goodsall, was found dead in a lane near this town on Sunday fortnight under circumstances which leave no doubt that she had been criminally assaulted and then murdered. Two labourers, with whom she had been drinking late on the previous night, were apprehended on suspicion of being concerned in the murder, and on Tuesday they were fully committed by the magistrates for trial at the Assizes. The woman was a widow, and since her husband's death, which occurred a few months ago, she is said to have lead a dissipated life.

WINDSOR.—In the course of last summer, Herne's Oak, understood to be the tree referred to by Shakespeare in the "Merry Wives of Windsor," was still one of the chief objects of interest in Windsor Park. It had ceased to put out leaves for more than half a century, and its sapless trunk was hollowed out by gradual decay to a height of 10 or 12 feet from the ground. On a quiet evening in August last the crumbling support gave way, and the heavy upper branches fell with a crash to the ground. Her Majesty gave directions that all the solid timber they contained should be preserved, and of it various articles have since been made as relics of the venerable tree, famous even in the time of Queen Elizabeth for its age and size. Among the most interesting of the objects formed of the wood are two busts of Shakespeare, recently carved by Mr. Perry, of North Audley Street; one for the Queen and the other for the Prince of Wales. The artist has adopted the costume of the Stratford bust, but has also made use of the portraits, so as to represent what Shakespeare might have been when from 40 to 45 years of age.

YORK.—A fatal gun accident occurred at the village of Acomb, near this city, on Friday week. Charles Ireland, an assistant at the private lunatic asylum of Mr. S. Nelson, had left a loaded gun in one of the passages of the house, and Harriet Suter, a young woman, the cook at the establishment, took up the gun, and as she was carrying it into the kitchen let it fall with the butt-end on the floor. The gun immediately went off and shot Nelson in the face, causing almost immediate death. The girl was not aware that the gun was loaded.

EXECUTION AT WATERFORD.—The execution of Thomas Walsh for the murder of Thomas Conolly took place on the 14th inst. at Waterford, in the presence of a great crowd of persons, consisting mostly of women, girls, and boys, few men being present. There was little sympathy for the prisoner, whose crime was of a revolting character. He had chopped the body of his victim into small pieces and thrown them into a bog, and the circumstances were rendered more shocking by the fact that the only direct evidence against the culprit was that of his own daughter, who had been an unwilling witness of the whole proceeding, and believing herself to be in danger, saw no means of escape except by giving evidence against her father. The condemned man on being led to the scaffold looked pale and worn, trembled violently, and could scarcely stand. The executioner did his business expeditiously, and was evidently no young hand, but his face was blackened, so that it was impossible to recognise him.

TRIALS FOR MURDER AT GLASGOW.—On Saturday, at the Glasgow Circuit Court, Lord Deas presiding, an Irishman, named John Riley, was charged with murder. It appeared that on the night of the 17th December, on the Biggar Road, in the parish of Bothwell, the prisoner assaulted Nancy Stevens, or Laffy, wife of Thomas Laffy, collier, residing at Legbrannock, in the parish of Bothwell, and with a stake or stone struck her on the head, &c., threw her to the ground, and kicked her with his feet. He then thrust a piece of wood several times into her person. She died in consequence of her injuries. The prisoner in a firm voice pleaded Not Guilty. After a trial which lasted from 10 in the forenoon till about 10 minutes past 1 on Sunday morning, the jury by a majority returned a verdict of Guilty. Lord Deas sentenced him to Death, the execution to take place on the 16th May.—At the same court on Saturday, Lord Neaves presiding, a joiner named Peter Blair was charged with murder. On the 23d February, in Maitland Street, Cowcaddens, he assaulted Jessie Noble, or Gordon, or Blair, then residing with him in Dobbie's Loan, and with a knife stabbed her on the left side of her neck and on the right shoulder; she was mortally wounded, and soon after died. After a long trial the jury returned a verdict unanimously finding the prisoner guilty of culpable homicide, and he was sentenced to 15 years' penal servitude.

Law.

COURT OF ERROR: The Falmouth Lunacy Case.—It may be remembered that a man called Porter, of Hayle, near Falmouth, was convicted at the last assizes of cruel neglect of his lunatic brother, and put in a plea that the statute under which he was convicted applied only to those who were paid for keeping lunatics, and not to persons like him who kept their near relations without fee or reward. The case came before the Court of Error on Saturday, when the Court decided that this was exactly a case to which the statute applied, and they confirmed the judgment accordingly.

COURT OF COMMON PLEAS.—Destruction of a Slaver.—Chief Justice Erle gave judgment on a case which was argued in Hilary Term on a petition of right against the Crown for the destruction of a vessel on the African coast by Captain Scott Douglas, of her Majesty's ship Espoir, on the ground (which was denied) of the vessel being a slaver. The Court held that the Crown was not liable, because the suppression of the slave trade was not imposed by the Crown, but by Act of Parliament; because, if Captain Douglas had made a mistake, the responsibility lay with him and not with the Crown that appointed him to his ship; and because, though there were many instances of a petition of right being issued in cases of property wrongfully taken and withheld by the Crown, there was no precedent for such a proceeding in the case of a supposed wrong done by the Crown.

COURT OF PROBATE: The Oratory.—The dispute between Mr. Smee and the Fathers of the Oratory, respecting the property of the late Mr. Hutchinson, which has already engaged the attention of the House of Commons, has been brought before the Court of Probate. Mr. Hutchinson, who was Mr. Smee's brother-in-law, became a Roman Catholic some years ago, joining the Fathers of the Oratory, and passing over his family, bequeathed his property to the Rev. Mr. Knox, a trustee for the Oratory. Mr. Smee, for the family, disputes the will, as having been obtained by undue influence. On Saturday several witnesses were examined, and the case of the Fathers of the Oratory was closed. The Court defers judgment.

COURT OF QUEEN'S BENCH: Seizure of Confederate Steamer.—A few weeks ago three men, who represented themselves to be in the Confederate Service, were taken into custody at Liverpool on a charge of piratically seizing a United States ship, in which they took passage as peaceable voyagers. Their arrest was effected at the instance of the American Minister for the purpose of their being given up and sent to America for trial, under the provisions of the Extradition Treaty. On Monday Mr. Edward James moved the Court for a writ of habeas corpus to bring the men into Court. A rule nisi for a writ was granted, Mr. Justice Willes at the same time saying that, as the case appeared in the papers before the Court, it looked very like a case of piracy. The Rappahannock.—On the same day Mr. Justice Crompton charged the Middlesex Grand Jury in the case of The Queen v. Rumball, who was charged with having taken an active part in the equipment, &c. of the Vixen, otherwise the Scylla, and afterwards the Rappahannock, at Sheerness. This vessel, having been sold off by the Admiralty, is alleged to have been illegally refitted on behalf of the Confederate Government by the defendant and some others of our dockyard officials. Mr. Justice Crompton, in his charge to the grand jury, which has now to try the case, said that although he was among those members of the Exchequer Chamber who disclaimed any appellate jurisdiction, yet had he been free to review the judgment of the Court below, he should have been bound to reverse it. On the great question of equipment he sided with Mr. Baron Channell, and held that any additions to the structure of a ship which makes her more available for warlike purposes is within the provisions of the Foreign Enlistment Act. On the other hand, he directed the jury that the provisions against engaging persons to enlist in the service of a foreign Power would not be violated unless the offences were committed within the United Kingdom, and that, therefore, Mr. Rumball would not be guilty under the first section merely because he might have assisted in manning the Rappahannock at Calais. The grand jury were then conducted to their room to arrange upon what day they would sit and hear the evidence.

ACCIDENT ON THE HULL AND SCARBOROUGH.—A serious accident occurred a few days since to a train near Driffield on this line. The carriage next the engine, in which were about 40 passengers, got off the rails, and the jolting was so excessive and the apprehension of a crash so imminent, that it was difficult to restrain the passengers from jumping out. Some of them indeed did so, and were seriously injured. Fortunately the attention of the driver was called to the circumstance, and the train was stopped before worse happened.

Miscellaneous.

A NEW GUN.—The Earl of Derby referred last week in the House of Lords to a new principle of gunnery, recently invented by Mr. James Mackay, timber merchant of Liverpool, which promises to be a dangerous rival to all systems extant. The principle in all rifled cannon appears to have been to allow as little windage as possible, and to make the shot fit the grooves of the piece, taking from them a rotation in its flight. Mr. Mackay, on the other hand, has conceived the plan of having the grooves so arranged that, while the shot fits closely to their outer edge, the grooves are left open for windage. By this arrangement the gas has to travel some feet further than the shot, and in doing this imparts a rapid and perfect "spin" to it. The shots are of cylindrical form, perfectly smooth, with conical heads, and cupped at the other end in proportion, so that each shot is perfectly balanced from the centre of its length. Mr. Mackay in his patent also claims a peculiarity in the wadding, which is of sawdust, by which at the movement of the first ignition of the powder the elasticity of the wadding moves forward the shot slightly; the effect is that the whole of the powder is burnt, and the shock on the breech of the gun considerably lessened. Mr. Mackay has had a gun made upon this principle by the Mersey Steel and Iron Works Company. It is of wrought iron, weighs 9 tons, has a bore of 8.12 inches, and in other respects corresponds with the general features of the ordinary 68-pounder. There are 12 grooves, and as the shot do not enter these groves, it allows of a much sharper twist than in ordinary rifled guns. The velocity has been found to be 1610 feet a second; the utmost range has not yet been tested. Messrs. Laird & Company, of Birkenhead, are now building an armour-plated vessel called the Agincourt, for the Government, and it was agreed to test the gun against a section of the side of that vessel. It was intended to make the trial last Saturday, but unfavourable weather prevented its being proceeded with. On Tuesday morning, however, the weather was fine and clear, and the gun was fired against the target, resulting in a complete triumph of the gun. The target consisted of an outer plate, 7 feet square and 5½ inches thick, of rolled iron; next came 9 inches of teak, then an inner plate or skin three-fourths of an inch thick, then angle iron and ribbing, and finally a backing up with timber balks and supports 18 inches thick. The plates were stated on competent authority to be the best that can be made of rolled iron. Messrs. Laird supplied the whole, and expressed confidence in the strength of the target. The gun was fired in the presence of Mr. James Mackay, Mr. D. Mackay, Mr. Bouck, and other gentlemen, shortly after 8 o'clock in the morning. The gun was charged with 30lb. of powder and a cast steel shot weighing 167 lb., made by Messrs. Thomas Firth and Son, of Sheffield. The range was 200 yards. The shot struck the target with a dull thud a little below the bull's eye on the right, and in the very strongest part, where it was backed up by the rib of the ship's side, the angle iron and the timber balk. At the point of impact a perfectly circular hole was cut. The shot then powdered the teak, passed through the inner skin and the angle-iron, shattered the timber balk into fragments, and was picked up 82 yards beyond the target, together with a circular piece of the iron armour, about 80 lb. weight, it had carried with it through the back supports. The sand showed that it had spun to the last. About 70 fragments of iron, bolts, and fragments of the inner skin and angle-iron were picked up 100 yards from the target. The shot when found was reduced from 13 inches to 11 inches in length, and increased about an inch and a half in diameter at the end which struck the target. The other end was uninjured. The whole target was forced back about six inches, and so much deranged that more shots were not fired. Sir John Jones, Captain Fisher, R.N.; Captain White, R.N.; Mr. Nicholson (civil engineer), Captain Inman, and many other gentlemen, inspected the gun and targets during the morning; and all expressed the greatest astonishment at the performances of the gun. The shot fired and the portions of the target torn away have since been exhibited at the Liverpool Exchange.

Obituary.

LIEUT.-COLONEL BURRE died a few days since at Lymington, in his 85th year. In early life he had seen some hard service. He was employed in 1800 with an Austrian corps d'armée, and was frequently engaged before the enemy, especially at Kloster Eberach. In 1801 he served in the Egyptian campaign, and was engaged on the 17th and 21st August in driving the enemy into Alexandria. In 1807 he was appointed aide-de-camp to General Sir Harry Burrard, whom he accompanied on the expedition to the Baltic, and was frequently engaged before Copenhagen on outpost duties, and was present at its siege and capture. In the following year he served in Portugal, and was present with the 71st Regiment at the battles of Roleia and Vimiera. In 1809 he was employed as Deputy-Assistant Adjutant-General with the Walcheren expedition, and was present at the siege and taking of Flushing and Ter Vere. In 1811 he embarked with the 71st for Portugal, and remained with the regiment in the Peninsula until 1813. During this period he was with the covering division before Badajoz in 1811 and 1812; at Arroyo de Moline and Almaraz. He received the war medal with three clasps for Egypt, Roleia, and Vimiera.

MR. KERSHAW, M.P. for Stockport, died on Wednesday at Streatham, in his 60th year. He was the head of the firm of Kershaw, Sidebottom, and Co., cotton spinners, manufacturers, and calico printers in Portland Street, Manchester. He was born in 1795, and was one of the successful men of the day. He started in life as a warehouse lad, but showed such eminent business qualities that at an early age he was made a partner in the mercantile firm of Lees, Millington, and Cullender, of which ultimately he became the leading partner. It was not till some years after that he became a spinner and manufacturer. As a Liberal politician he took part in most of the stirring events in Manchester since 1830, including the Reform and the Anti-Corn Law League agitations, and was elected Mayor of that city in 1843, holding the office for two years. He became a candidate for Stockport with Mr. Cobden in July, 1847, but was defeated. In December of the same year, however, on Mr. Cobden vacating his seat for that of the West Riding, he stood a second contest, and was elected. He continued to hold the seat till his death. He was held in high respect both in Stockport and Manchester. He lost his only son some years ago, but several daughters survive him.

MR. FREDERICK DOVETON ORME, C.B., Chargé d'Affaires and Consul-General to the Republic of Venezuela, died on Sunday last at his lodgings in town. He had been in the diplomatic service upwards of 20 years, his first appointment as attaché at Munich taking place in 1841. He was subsequently attaché at Frankfort, and acted there several times as Chargé d'Affaires in the temporary absence of the Minister; was afterwards appointed Secretary of Legation at Copenhagen in 1852, and was Chargé d'Affaires at the Danish Court for several months in 1855 and 1856. In 1858 he was appointed Chargé d'Affaires and Consul-General to the Republic of Bolivia, and in the following year was accredited as such to the Republic of Venezuela in place of the Hon. Richard Bingham. In recognition of his civil services he was made a Companion of the Order of the Bath in 1859.

MR. THOMAS MAUDSLAY, head of the well-known firm of Maudslay, Sons, and Field, engineers, died a few days since, in his 72d year. Like many other eminent men, he was the architect of his own fortune; beginning life in an humble capacity, he died the wealthy owner of Banstead Park, the head of a firm almost as much identified with the banks of the Neva as with the banks of the Thames, a firm employing more than 1000 hands. Mr. Maudslay was chiefly, though not exclusively, a naval engineer. For the last quarter of a century and more he has constructed the engines for some of the largest and some of the smallest vessels in her Majesty's navy—from line-of-battle ships to gun-boats. His firm supplied the iron-cased Royal Oak (800 horse-power), the Marlborough (800), the Revenge (800), the Gibraltar (800), the Edgar (600), the Trafalgar (500), the Majestic (400), the screw-frigate Ariadne (800), the Immortalité and Topaz (600 each), the Aurora (400), &c.; besides corvettes, screw-sloops, gun boats, paddle-sloops, gun-vessels, and troop-ships innumerable.

Markets.

COVENT GARDEN, April 30.

Outdoor produce continues to be well supplied. English Grapes of this year's growth and forced Strawberries are sufficient for the demand. Of Pine Apples there is also a better supply. Apples, though scarce, may still be obtained; Oranges are getting scarce. Continental arrivals continue heavy; among them are Lettuces, Endive, Carrots, Artichokes, Radishes, Asparagus, Kidney Potatos, and Peas. Out-door grown Asparagus realises from 3s. to 6s. a bundle. BRITISH WOOLS.—LONDON, April 28.

Our demand is becoming more general than it has been for some time, and nearly all descriptions of long and short wool have been in request at full quotations; long wool, however, still keeping its proud pre-eminence over all other qualities.

METROPOLITAN CATTLE MARKET.

MONDAY, April 25.

We have a few more Beasts than on Monday last. The demand is scarcely as good, and there is difficulty in realising that day's quotations throughout. Sheep are more plentiful, but there is an active trade for them; late prices are fully maintained, and in some instances exceeded. Trade is rather better for choicest Calves. Lambs are selling about the same as on Thursday. From Germany and Holland there are 880 Beasts, 2650 Sheep, and 142 Calves; from Scotland, 400 Beasts; from Ireland, 80; and 2710 from Norfolk and Suffolk.

The number of sheep is about the same, for which the trade is much more cheerful at higher prices. Trade for Veal and Lambs remains about the same. From Germany and Holland there are 360 Beasts, 530 Sheep, and 352 Calves; Milch Cows, 80.

MARK LANE.—MONDAY, April 25.

The supply of Wheat from Essex to this morning's market was small, from Kent fair, and the greater part was cleared at the prices of this day se'nnight. The attendance was better than of late; nevertheless business in foreign Wheat was quite of a retail character at our quotations. Barley was a slow sale. Beans were firm, and Peas unaltered in value

The Oat trade was steady at last week's rates. For Flour there was scarcely any demand, and prices were unaltered.

FRIDAY, April 29

The weather on the 23d was very fine and warm, but has since been cold, the last few days dull. Holders both of English and Foreign Wheat having refused to submit to any further concession in prices, the trade has been firmer during the week, and although business, particularly in foreign Wheat, is still limited, fully former rates have been generally realised. The continuance of cold dry weather is beginning to affect the value of Spring Corn, and previous prices have been fully supported. Flour continues to be neglected, excepting some particular brands which are inquired after for exportation. Since Friday last 17 vessels have been reported off the coast. The floating trade has continued very quiet; prices of all descriptions of grain must be quoted nominally unaltered; Linseed is firm, and Cottonseed and Rapeseed are in good demand at extreme rates. Paris, April 28.—Flour: Holders ask extreme rates, but business has been restricted. The six marks for delivery this month are quoted equal to 34s. per 280 lbs. The present stock of Flour is estimated at 16,270 cwt. Wheat is a slow sale, and prices unaltered. The arrivals of English grain and foreign Barley during the week have been small, of foreign Wheat moderate, of Oats fair. The market was but thinly attended, and very little business transacted; quotations of all descriptions of grain remain nominally the same as on Monday.

LIVERPOOL, April 26.—Notwithstanding there was only a small attendance of millers and dealers at this day's market, Wheat has exhibited great firmness on the part of holders, but we cannot notice any improvement in demand as yet. Flour is still very unsaleable, and prices irregular. Indian Corn in fair consumptive request at steady rates. Oats have advanced ½d. to 1d. per bushel, and Oatmeal is also the turn dearer. Beans are held for 6d. per qr. more money. Peas and Barley unchanged. Market on the whole firm, but lacking activity.

FRIDAY, April 29.—The market was moderately attended. Wheat a slow sale, and nominally unaltered. Nothing doing in Flour. Indian Corn dull; mixed, 28s. Egyptian Beans steady. Oats and Oatmeal dull.

BARNARD'S

NOISELESS LAWN MOWER.

This MACHINE differs from all other Lawn Mowers, in being constructed without either Gear-wheels, Chains, or Levers, the power being transmitted to the Cutters by a loose intermediate wheel, with an India-rubber tyre, which is placed between a plain-faced driving wheel and pinion; it is very certain in action, and at the same time so simple that it cannot be deranged.

When the MACHINE is drawn back, the intermediate wheel throws itself out of work, and the Cutters cease to rotate. The Cutters have steel on both sides, and when blunt can be reversed, bringing the sharp edges forward. It is perfectly noiseless, both in its forward and backward action, and works with considerably less power than any other Machine for the purpose yet introduced.

BY HER MAJESTY'S ROYAL LETTERS PATENT.

The India-rubber tyre will last from one to two seasons, and can be replaced at a cost of a few pence. An extra tyre is sent with each Machine.

The iron work of Grass-box is Galvanized, which prevents its being destroyed by rust, to which this part is so liable from its contact with damp Grass.

In again submitting their LAWN MOWERS to the notice of purchasers, Messrs. Samuelson & Co. wish to state that they do not make annual changes in the principle of their LAWN MOWERS. Experience has fully proved that the general design on which their MACHINES have been built for many years past is the best, and their attention has been given therefore rather to substantial improvements in manufacture, reduction of the draught, and increase of durability by the use of malleable iron in place of cast metal, than to the production of ephemeral novelties. Their MACHINES are superior to all others for lightness of draught, elegance, and efficiency under all circumstances of ground and weather, being self-cleaning, and not liable to derangement in the gearing. The Furnishing of Bed Rooms.

HEAL AND SON have observed for some time that it would be advantageous to their Customers to see a much larger selection of BED-ROOM FURNITURE than is usually displayed, and that to judge properly of the style and effect of the different descriptions of Furniture, it is necessary that each description should be placed in separate rooms. They have therefore erected large and additional Show Rooms, by which they are enabled not only to extend their show of Iron, Brass and Wood Bedsteads, and Bed Room Furniture, beyond what they believe has ever been attempted, but also to provide several small rooms for the purpose of keeping complete suites of Bed Room Furniture in the different styles.

Japanned Deal Goods may be seen in complete suites of five or six different colours, some of them light and ornamental, and others of a plainer description. Suites of Stained Deal, Gothic Furniture, Polished Deal, Oak, and Walnut, are also set apart in separate rooms, so that customers are able to see the effect as it would appear in their own rooms. A Suite of very superior Gothic Oak Furniture will generally be kept in stock, and from time to time new and select Furniture in various woods will be added.

Bed Furnitures are fitted to the Bedsteads in large numbers, so that a complete assortment may be seen, and the effect of any particular pattern ascertained as it would appear on the Bedstead.

A very large stock of Bedding (HEAL & SON'S original trade) is placed on the Bedsteads.

The stock of Mahogany Goods for the better Bed Rooms, and Japanned Goods for plain and Servants use, is very great and increased. The entire Stock is arranged in eight rooms, six galleries (each 120 feet long), and two large ground floors, the whole forming as complete an assortment of Bed Room Furniture as they think can possibly be desired.

Every attention is paid to the manufacture of the Cabinet work, and they have just erected large Workshops on the premises for this purpose, that the manufacture may be under their own immediate care.

Their Bedding trade receives their constant and personal attention, every article being made on the premises.

They particularly call attention to their Patent Spring Mattress, the Sommier Elastique Portatif. It is portable, durable, and elastic, and lower in price than the old Spring Mattress.

News of the Week.

In the House of Lords on Friday the Earl of Derby moved for the official correspondence between the Government and Messrs. Laird in reference to the steam rams, contending that Messrs. Laird had behaved throughout with the utmost candour and frankness, whilst the conduct of the Government had been arbitrary, vexatious, and illegal. Earl Russell said that it was his belief that Messrs. Laird had done all in their power to embroil this country in war with the Federal States; and that, but for the vigilance of the Government, they would have succeeded. He justified the seizure of the rams upon this ground, and said that after the information he had received he could not hesitate to assume the responsibility of taking steps to have the case legally investigated; for if vessels were to go forth to raise the blockade, or destroy Federal commerce, no one would deny that the object of the Foreign Enlistment Act would be defeated, and the neutrality of England altogether forfeited. After some remarks by Lord Chelmsford the motion was withdrawn. On Monday the High Court of Bombay Bill passed through Committee. On Tuesday the House met for a few minutes only, but no business of public interest was transacted. On Thursday, being Ascension Day, the House did not sit.

In the Commons on Friday, on the order for going into Committee of Supply, Mr. H. Berkeley moved a resolution that the House should on Monday resolve itself into a committee to consider an address to the Queen, praying that adequate compensation might be made to Mr. William Bewicke, of Threepwood Hall, Northumberland, for the sufferings he had undergone during an imprisonment for 12 months as a felon on a charge afterwards proved to be false, for the confiscation of his property, and for the loss he had incurred in prosecuting the persons who had conspired against him. Sir G. Grey opposed the resolution. On a division the motion for going into Committee of Supply was negatived by 120 to 118. The resolution of Mr. Berkeley having thus become the original motion, Sir G. Grey moved, as an amendment, that a Select Committee be appointed to consider the petition of Mr. Bewicke, and to report whether he was entitled to compensation. On a division the amendment was carried by 148 to 100. The Penal Servitude Acts Amendment Bill and the Civil Bill Courts (Ireland) Bill, as amended in committee, were considered and agreed to, with some further amendments. On Monday, in answer to Sir J. Pakington, Lord C. Paget said that the Channel squadron was in the Downs, and perfectly ready to proceed to any part of the world in 24 hours. On the report of the Customs and Inland Revenue Bill, as amended, Mr. Malins moved an amendment to exempt life assurance policies passing under settlement from the duty levied upon them by the Bill. After some discussion the amendment was negatived by 161 to 124. Mr. J. B. Smith moved, as an amendment, that the duties on sugar be continued in force for one year only. After some discussion the amendment was negatived by 97 to 14. The House then went into Committee of Supply on the Navy Estimates, and agreed to several of the votes. The Penal Servitude Acts Amendment Bill, and the Civil Bill Courts (Ireland) Bill were read a third time and passed. On Tuesday Mr. Ewart moved the appointment of a select committee to inquire into the expediency of maintaining the punishment of death. Lord H. Lennox moved, as an amendment, that a select committee be appointed to inquire into the operations of the law relating to capital punishments. Sir G. Grey objected both to the motion and amendment, but intimated his readiness to assent to the appointment of a commission to consider the whole subject. After a long debate, the motion and amendment were both withdrawn; and on the motion of Mr. Neate a resolution for an address to Her Majesty, praying her to issue a Royal commission, was agreed to. Mr. Bass obtained leave to bring in a Bill for the better regulation of street music within the Metropolitan Police District. The Insolvent Debtors' Bill, the object of which is to relieve insolvent debtors owing under 20*l*., was read a second time. The House went into committee upon the Partnership Law Amendment Bill, and agreed to some of the clauses. On Wednesday the House went into Committee on the Weights and Measures (Metric System) Bill. On the second clause, Mr. M. Gibson suggested that as there was at present no knowledge of what the standard of weights and measures was, it would be well to appoint a Royal commission to inquire into and settle that point before proceeding further with the Bill. After some discussion it was agreed that Mr. Gibson, as President of the Board of Trade, should take charge of the Bill in its future stages. Further progress was therefore postponed. The House then went into Committee on the Chief Rents (Ireland) Bill, the clauses of which underwent amendments, and the Chairman was ultimately ordered to report progress. The Admiralty Lands and Works Bill was read a second time, and the Promissory Notes and Bills of Exchange (Ireland) Bill was read a third time and passed.

On Thursday, in answer to Colonel FRENCH, Sir G. GREY said that there was no truth in the report that the Aurora frigate had been ordered to the Baltic. Mr. DISRAELI said he should be sorry to embarrass the Government in the present critical position of affairs, but it appeared to him that the House ought to be kept supplied with some general knowledge of the progress of the Conference. He wished to know, therefore, whether it was true that the Conference had been adjourned, why it had been adjourned, and when it would re-assemble. Sir G. GREY replied that the Conference met on the previous day and adjourned to Monday next, when it would re-assemble. But it was the opinion of the members of the Conference that it was essential to the success of the Conference itself that its proceedings should be private. It was not in his power, therefore, to state why it had adjourned to Monday. The House them went into Committee of Supply on the army estimates, and agreed to several votes. The Under-Secretaries' Indemnity Bill, the Union Assessment Committee Act Amendment Bill, and the Joint-Stock Companies Bill were read a second time. The Local Government Supplemental Bill passed through Committee.

The Conference met again on Wednesday, and again adjourned for a week without agreeing to an armistice. A despatch from Copenhagen dated yesterday says that the Danish Government has declined to accept the armistice on the condition of raising the blockade as proposed by the German Powers. In consequence of the movements of the Austrian fleet, the Channel squadron is now assembled in the Downs, and ready to sail on the shortest notice.

The latest news from the seat of war states that the Danish garrison of Fredericia has been withdrawn to the Island of Funen, leaving the whole of Jutland in the possession of the Prussians. It was reported yesterday that the Austrians are about to cross into Fünen. Marshal WRANGEL has sent 11 citizens to Prussia as hostages for the payment of the war contribution he has demanded.

A telegram from Calcutta informs us that Sir CHARLES TREVELYAN has introduced the Indian Budget in the Legislative Council. It exhibits a surplus for the present year of 30,000*l*., and an estimated surplus for next year of 820,000*l*. In consequence of this favourable state of the revenue, the 10 per cent. import duties are reduced to 7½ per cent., and the tobacco duty to 10 per cent.

From New Zealand we have the important intelligence that General CAMERON has completely defeated the rebellious Maories. By a flank march he first succeeded in turning their strongholds at Piko Piko and Paterargi, and then advanced to a strong position to which the rebels had fallen back, in front of Rangiawahia, which he gallantly carried by assault. The result is that General CAMERON is now in possession of all the country between the Waipa and Waikato Rivers, from which the natives have retired.

Accounts from the United States inform us that the advance of General BANKS's army having moved from Natchitochis, Louisiana, towards Pleasant Hill, the Confederates, who had been retreating, suddenly turned round and assaulted the Federals with superior forces, and after a severe conflict routed them with great loss of men and artillery. It is said, however, that the engagement was renewed on the following day, and that the Confederates sustained a serious defeat. The Confederates have made an unsuccessful land attack on Fort Gray, Plymouth, North Carolina, but they subsequently sunk three of the Federal gunboats at Plymouth, and obtained such complete possession of the river below the town, that they have cut off communication with the garrison. The Confederates have also defeated the Federals and driven them from Big Black River in Mississippi. The capture and destruction of Fort Pillow, on the Mississippi, is confirmed, and General FORREST's head-quarters are at Jackson, Tennessee. General LEE has crossed the Rapidan, and it is supposed that he will at once open the spring campaign by an offensive movement. General GRANT has left for the Federal front, and there is so much alarm in New York, that the Governor has tendered the services of the State militia for the defence of the forts.

THE CONFERENCE.—On Saturday evening, shortly after the breaking up of the Cabinet Council, Earl Russell had circulars sent to all the Plenipotentiaries attending the Conference, announcing that the next meeting would be held on Wednesday afternoon at the First Lord of the Treasury's official residence in Downing Street. Dacres, has received orders to proceed to the Downs, and officers on leave of absence have been requested by telegram to join their ships with as little delay as possible. The fleet consists of one screw ship, four iron screw ships, one iron-case screw ship, one screw frigate, and one screw steam gunboat. The French fleet are expected to join in the Downs, and the probable destination of the combined fleets is reported to be the Baltic.

Foreign.

FRANCE.—The Emperor received the Japanese Ambassadors on Tuesday, and in reply to their speech, said:—

"I am grateful to the Tycoon for having felt the necessity of giving explanations as to the difficulties attending the execution of the treaty, and also as regards the attack upon a French officer. I sincerely desire to see an extension of our relations. For this end the Japanese Government must, before all, cause international laws to be respected, and be convinced of the understanding between the European Powers to defend their honour and interests in distant countries."

The Moniteur of Monday evening says:—

"The English Cabinet having requested an explanation of the Austrian Government respecting the despatch of ships to the Baltic, the latter replied that no such intention existed. Her Majesty's Government in consequence renounced its plan of sending an English fleet to the Baltic. Austria and Prussia insist on the cessation of the blockade as one of the conditions for an armistice. Prussia is said to offer as an equivalent the renunciation of the war contribution in Jutland, and is also reported to propose to evacuate Jutland should the Danes retire from Alsen, suspend the blockade, and restore the captured ships."

All the Paris papers of yesterday treat of a war between Germany and England as by no means an improbable event. The Débats says:—

"Prussia evidently contemplates breaking up the Conference if the English fleet enters the Baltic, and the English fleet only waits for a signal which Lord Palmerston can now give without English commerce accusing him of precipitation and foolish impatience. The English Cabinet has certainly shown throughout this unhappy affair as much prudence, moderation, and impartiality as can be expected of a great Power in such a case. It has astonished the world by its forbearance. We will not attempt to give advice to the Prussian nation. We see by reading the journals of Berlin that Prussia, altogether infatuated by the victories in Schleswig, and by the long and irritating repose in which it has been kept by its situation, while other peoples of Europe have from time to time encountered warlike adventures and occasions of glory—we see Prussia persuading herself that the English fleet will find the end of its renown in the Baltic, and that it will receive a terrible lesson from the invincible walnut shells with which the grace of God has deigned to provide King Frederick William. When a great people is a prey to such illusions it is useless to attempt to influence it by judicious counsels; it must become wise at its own expense. But let Austria, which during 15 years, has gone over too many fields of battle to allow the fumes of powder to ascend to its brain and intoxicate it, calmly consider whether it can lose or over the English alliance, and if she will gain much by establishing the Prussians in Kiel at the risk of bringing before Venice the flag which has just floated over the triumphs of Garibaldi. Let the Cabinets of the secondary States remember the annexationist doctrines upon which M. de Bismark piqued himself two years ago, and let them ask themselves if it is not the keys of Dresden, Hanover, Cassel, and Darmstadt that Prussia has sought at Rendsburg, Duppel and Fredericia. Let the German people themselves—a people healthy in heart and mind;—who must not be judged by the sickly metaphysicians of the National Verein—reflect in what a situation they would be placed by a war with England; Russia being able to bring only an alliance virtually useless, and France not having yet told her secret. The war of Germany with England! it is to the German coasts ravaged without possible reprisals, or it is general war, that is to say, a war which may have in reserve infinite evils for the whole world, but which would have for its certain and inevitable result, whatever might happen elsewhere, the dismemberment of Germany."

The Moniteur, in its edition of Sunday evening, says:—

"No official confirmation has been received of the despatch of a French squadron to the Baltic. In any case this measure, should it be taken, could have no other character than that of a demonstration destined to support the request made by the belligerents for a suspension of hostilities."

The Moniteur also contains the following:—

"The Government of the Emperor has received from that of the United States satisfactory explanations relative to the sense and bearing of the resolution passed by the House of Representatives at Washington with regard to Mexico. It is known that the Washington Senate has indefinitely adjourned the examination of the resolution, which, in any case, could not have been sanctioned by the Executive power."

A despatch of Gen. Deligny of the 29th ult. announces that General Martineau on the 26th ult. encountered the enemy at Ain-Legta, on the road to Saida and Geryville. The defile which the Arab forces intended to defend was cleared by the French troops, and the Arabs were in full retreat along their whole line. General Martineau was expected to arrive at Geryville on the 27th. News from the province of Constantine continues to be satisfactory. In the sitting of the Corps Législatif on Monday, the Bill on working men's coalitions was passed by 222 to 36. Prince Napoleon has addressed a letter to the Venetian Committee, congratulating them upon the publication of the pamphlet under the title of "Urgency." The Prince believes that the Venetian question demands a speedy solution, and expresses an ardent wish that Italy should be free from the Alps to the Adriatic, in accordance with the words of the Emperor. The France says:—

"We have reason to believe that at the next elections of the third of the members of the General Councils the Government will not maintain absolutely the principle of official candidates. The Prefects will, it is stated, be invited to remain neutral when the contest is between men equally honourable and devoted to the principle of which the Empire is the expression."

The Marquis de Boissy has delivered another speech against England in the Senate, in the present instance directing his attack against the Prince of Wales for his visit to Garibaldi, and asserting that the Prince has now "shaken hands with the revolution." The President subsequently erased from the official report some of the most offensive expressions in the Marquis's speech, and on a discussion arising at the next sitting in reference to these omissions, the Senate unanimously expressed their disapprobation of the language used by the Marquis, by agreeing to the President's proposal that it should be inserted on the minutes of the day that the Marquis de Boissy had been called to order. The death of M. Clapeyron having left a vacancy in the Academy of Sciences, in the section of mechanics, it is said that the present members, viz., Baron Dupin, Generals Poncelet, Piobert, and Morin, and M. Combes, Director of the School of Mines, intend to offer the candidateship to the Emperor, on the ground of his works and discoveries connected with artillery. One of the members of the Japanese embassy has just died at Marseilles. The ambassadors, on receiving information of this incident, sent instructions that the hair of deceased should be cut off and brought to Paris; that no priest should accompany the funeral, and an ordinary coffin should be used, and be enveloped in white linen before inhumation. They also ordered the ground for the tomb to be purchased in perpetuity, and announce their intention of shortly forwarding the model of a mausoleum to be erected. The Bengal has spoken the Messageries Impériales steamship Impératrice, 760 miles from Aden. Her shaft had broken down, but had been repaired. She was making six knots per hour, and expected to arrive at Aden on the 30th of April. Her mails have been transhipped in the Bengal. The Impératrice brings 214 passengers.

SPAIN.—The great banquet of the Progressist party took place on Tuesday. The Provincial Committees were represented at the banquet in great numbers. There was no crowd nor any police force outside the banqueting hall, and everything passed off quietly. The Epoca says:—

"The Government has no wish to put down political banquets, but it will energetically suppress all excesses contrary to the laws."

PORTUGAL.—The Bill abolishing the tobacco contract has been passed by the Chamber of Peers, with few modifications. The Cortes closes on the 27th inst. Prince de Joinville has placed his son in the Portuguese navy. An ironclad gunboat is being built at the Arsenal. The old scheme of the Cintra Docks and Railway is said to have been taken up by an English company. The repairs of Lisbon Cathedral, for several years closed, are now completed. An accident has occurred at the Lisbon Railway station, causing the loss of several lives. An Austrian screw liner, two steam frigates, and one iron-clad frigate have arrived at Lisbon, and were to sail for Brest to meet the screw frigates Schwartzenburg and Radetsky.

SWITZERLAND.—The Société Politique Helvetio-Genevoise has addressed a protest to the Federal Council against the decree expelling Mazzini from Switzerland. The Federal Council, on this protest being brought forward, passed to the order of the day. The Federal Council has ordered the immediate establishment of a depôt for the concentration of war material, in order to increase the means of defence at the disposal of the Confederation.

DENMARK.—The Dagbladet of Saturday says:—

"The negotiations at the Conference on the question of an armistice furnish us with a measure by which to judge of the results of the Conference itself. England, under Earl Russell, has shown how far she has lost all feeling of honour, and, consequently, it can scarcely be expected that she will protect international rights. [illegible] that other Powers act in a similar spirit. Denmark has not entered into direct negotiations with the enemy, as more favourable results may be obtained in Berlin than from London. The principal thing is to preserve a small but independent Danish country, and a free Danish people."

A despatch from Copenhagen of yesterday says that the conditions proposed by the great German Powers as indispensable to their acceptance of an armistice have been declined by the Danish Government, which refuses to raise the blockade of the German ports.

THE DANISH DUCHIES.—In pursuance of orders issued by the Government, Fredericia has been entirely evacuated by the Danish troops, who withdrew to the island of Fuuen, taking away with them the most valuable material of war and the stores of gunpowder. The guns left behind were spiked. General von Gablenz has announced to his troops that the fortifications of Fredericia will be blown up. The Dagbladet of Wednesday however says that the Prussians are placing Fredericia in a state of defence, and that the town is being strongly garrisoned. The Prussians occupy Kalö and Abeltoft. The division of Major-General Münster has advanced to Lym Fiord. The whole of Jutland, except that part north of Lym Fiord, is now in the possession of the allies. It is reported that the Austrians purpose crossing into Funen. In addition to their requisitions in kind, the Prussians have imposed a war contribution upon Jutland to the amount of 96,000*l.* sterling, to be paid within 48 hours. Marshal von Wrangel has designated this contribution as a first instalment. The municipality of Horsens having refused to pay the war contribution imposed upon the town by Marshal von Wrangel, have been taken to Rendsburg. The Marshal has also dispatched 11 citizens to Berlin, to be detained as hostages until the payment of the war contribution of 100,000 Prussian thalers. This the inhabitants refuse to pay, preferring rather to be plundered. The arrival of Austrian men-of-war in the Elbe has been telegraphed from Neuwerk. A squadron of five vessels, supposed to be that of the German great Powers, has been sighted off Helgoland. A Danish despatch boat is lying in the roads of that port, but there is no news of any other Danish vessels in that part. A despatch from Hamburg of Wednesday says that the Austrian squadron has appeared at the mouth of the Elbe. It has joined the Prussian ships. The Danish vessels have withdrawn without giving battle.

PRUSSIA.—Prince Alfred arrived at Berlin on Friday, on a visit to the Crown Princess. His Royal Highness was received by the King of Prussia on Saturday at 1 o'clock. A State dinner was given in the evening. The Prince remained in Berlin until Wednesday morning, when he left for Weimar, on his way to Cobourg and Darmstadt. The proposal of an armistice without a cessation of the blockade has caused great excitement in Berlin. The semi-official Nord-Deutsche Allgemeine Zeitung of Tuesday, in answer to the statements of the Moniteur of Monday evening, says:—

"The German great Powers have hitherto not offered to relinquish the possession of Jutland, either on the suspension of the blockade or the evacuation of Alsen. They have declared themselves ready to make concessions respecting the possession of Jutland should an armistice, comprising the suspension of the blockade, the surrender of the captured vessels, and the evacuation of the Schleswig Islands, be concluded."

The semi-official Nord-Deutsche Allgemeine Zeitung of Wednesday evening says:—"The signal for the departure of the English fleet, with a hostile intent, would also be the signal for the departure from London of our representatives at the Conference.

AUSTRIA.—The Vienna papers express great indignation at the proposals of the Western Powers at the Conference for an armistice without the cessation of the blockade, and describe it as an unexampled humiliation to Germany. The semi-official General Correspondenz of Monday says:—

"The mission of the Austrian and Prussian representatives at the Conference is to obtain from Denmark a satisfactory indemnity for the damage done to German shipping and commerce, and likewise a full guarantee against any future recurrence of the same."

The Austrian Gazette and the Botschafter profess to believe that there is no agreement between England and France. "The attitude of France," says the former journal, "has been so full of reserve, that we do not think it is likely to depart from it, now that Denmark is at the end of its resources." It is stated that there is no intention to despatch the Austrian fleet to the Baltic, and that no resolution to that effect has been adopted by the Cabinet Council. The evening edition of the official Zeitung of Tuesday says:—

"Prussia and Austria have made the cessation of hostilities conditional on the complete suspension of the blockade. They would then desist from the further occupation of Jutland. Both Powers also propose to evacuate Jutland during the armistice should Denmark surrender to them Alsen, and give up all the captured vessels."

The Minister of Finance has issued a Five per Cent. Loan for 70,000,000 florins, payable in silver and redeemable within 35 years.

ITALY.—An allocution was delivered by the Pope in the Consistory recently held at the Vatican. His Holiness spoke of the grievances of the Church and its trials in the great Northern Empire. He brought forward accusations against the Emperor of Russia, who he said, after having driven his subjects to insurrection, now endeavours, under the pretext of suppressing the rebellion, to extirpate the Roman Catholic religion, and transports whole populations into frozen countries, exiles bishops, and deprives them of their functions. His Holiness thus continued:—

"Nobody will venture to say that I wish to maintain revolution by these necessary protests. I protest in order to satisfy my conscience, and that I may not one day hear the Sovereign Judge ask—'Why didst thou remain silent?'"

The allocution of the Pope has made a great impression in Rome, and the Russian Chargé d'Affaires has asked the Government for an explanation. In reply, Cardinal Antonelli defended the right and necessity of speaking as the Pope had done. The Chargé d'Affaires acknowledged the virtue of Monsignor Felinski, but said that he was a rebellious subject, having invited the Czar to renounce his possession of Poland. Prince Ladislas Czartoriski has arrived in Rome to see his wife, who is dangerously ill. Cardinal Morichini, Bishop of Iesi, near Ancona, has been arrested on a charge of having, under the pretext of confession, instigated the cantonal judge of that town to retract his oath of fidelity to the King, and swear allegiance to the Pope, while retaining his post, in order to administer justice in the interest of the Court of Rome. One of his canons, named Pianetti, was arrested with him. Cardinal Antonelli has since demanded from the Italian Government, through the mediation of a neutral Power, the liberation of Cardinal Morichini. In the Chamber of Deputies on Tuesday the Home Budget came on for discussion. Signor Bargoni put a question respecting the seizure of the money at Signor Lemmi's, and of arms destined for the national cause. He spoke of General Garibaldi's journey and of his patriotism, and asked whether and how the Government intended to avail itself of the services of General Garibaldi and his party. In the sitting of Wednesday the Minister of the Interior, in reply to speeches from several members of the Opposition, stated that it was not for the Government to declare its intentions respecting General Garibaldi and his party, but that it was above all necessary to know how the General and his party intended to act. The Minister defended the policy of the Government, and proved the necessity of seizing the arms and money in order to prevent painful occurrences. After the journey of Garibaldi to London, after the eulogy bestowed by Garibaldi on English institutions, and the respect paid by the English nation to the Queen and the laws, the Minister hoped that nobody, appreciating the King and the Government, would speak in the name of the country, or pursue a policy different from that of the Government, and in opposition to the Statute. He then explained that the policy of the Government was based upon an alliance with the Western Powers. He demanded a vote of confidence in the Ministry—a vote confirming their policy, and reserving the initiative in accomplishing the Italian empire at Rome and Venice to the King and the Parliament.

RUSSIA.—Several of the continental journals state that the visit to Copenhagen of the Grand Duke Nicholas of Russia, eldest son of the Emperor Alexander, is generally considered in Denmark as connected with a project of marriage between the Prince and Princess Dagmar, one of the daughters of King Christian IX.

GREECE.—Advices from Athens state that the Canaris Ministry had resigned. A new Ministry has been formed by M. Balbi, who belongs to the Moderate Party. Public opinion is generally opposed to the National Assembly; and great opposition is manifested against Count Sponneck. The question of the Ionian elections has been settled satisfactorily by the Assembly. The Budget has been adopted. A subsequent telegram from Corfu asserts that fresh disturbances have broken out at Athens. It was expected that the English and French men-of-war would land troops to protect the National Bank.

TURKEY.—Advices from Constantinople to the 28th ult., announce that 60,000 Russians, under command of General Kotzebue, are said to have encamped at the mouth of the Danube, and that another body of 20,000 men was expected to follow. Austria has stationed a force of 25,000 men on the Servian frontier. The Porte has resolved that the army in Roumelia should be increased to 150,000 men. A special commission has left Constantinople to superintend the completion of the armaments of the fortresses on the Black Sea and Dardanelles. A portion of the Circassian immigrants are to be incorporated with the army under General Kotzebue.

TUNIS.—The tribes are all in a state of insurrection and refuse to pay the taxes. The insurgent army has encamped at a distance of one day's march from Tunis, and the latest advices state that the insurrection is becoming general. Twenty thousand Bedouins have interrupted the communication between Tunis and the provinces, occupied Kirvan, and are threatening Susa and Monastir. The Bey has conceded a reduction of the taxes and the abolition of the constitution, but hesitates to dismiss two of his Ministers, the objects of public animadversion. A popular conspiracy, organised for the purpose of pillage, has been discovered at Tunis and vigorously repressed. The Portuguese and Turkish Governments have sent ships to Tunis, to cooperate with the English, French and Italian squadrons.

INDIA.—A telegram from Calcutta of the 14th April states that Sir Charles Trevelyan has introduced his Budget in the Legislative Council. The surplus for the year 1863-64 amounted to 30,000*l.* The surplus for the year 1864-65 is estimated at 820,000*l.* The 10 per cent. import duties are reduced to 7½ per cent. The valuation of piece goods and yarns is adjusted to the market rates, thus doubling the duty. The tobacco duty is reduced to 10 per cent. The following telegram was received at the India Office on Monday:—

"Colonel Stewart requests me to inform Sir Charles Wood that the cable was landed at Fao on the 29th of March. Its junction with the Turkish line was effected on the 8th of April. Telegraphic line between Bussorah and India is now complete; works nicely. Communication between Bussorah and Kurrachee takes place in five minutes. Two English steamers ply on the Tigris, a third one expected from Kurrachee to convey correspondence till completion of the Irak line. Persian line will be completed in July."

CHINA.—The rebel cause is losing ground. Major

Gordon has captured Eshing, and is marching on Nankin. Two other cities have surrendered.

JAPAN.—Advices from Japan state that another Englishman has been nearly assassinated at Nagasaki. Sir Rutherford Alcock has arrived at Yokohama.

NEW ZEALAND.—The following telegram, addressed to the Secretary of State for War, was received early on Thursday morning from her Majesty's Consul at Alexandria:—"The following despatch has this day been received from Lieutenant-General Cameron, dated Headquarters, Te Awamuta, Feb. 25. A force under command of Lieutenant-General Cameron, made a flank march on the night of the 20th of February, by which the whole of the native strongholds, constructed with immense labour to oppose his advance, were successfully turned; they were immediately evacuated by the natives, who fell back on a strong position in front of Rangiawahia, their principal source of supply. On the 22d General Cameron attacked this position, which was most gallantly assaulted and carried by the 50th Regiment. We are now in possession of the rich country between the Waipa and Waikato Rivers, as far as Rangiawahia, from which the natives have retired. There were three officers severely wounded—viz., Lieutenant-Colonel Nixon, Colonial Defence Force; Lieutenant Pagan, 65th Regiment; and Ensign Doveton, 50th Regiment; and four men killed and 24 wounded.'"

UNITED STATES.—The Government has stopped the transmission of news from Virginia. It is rumoured in Washington that the armies of both Lee and Grant were in motion and manœuvring for advantageous positions preparatory to a general engagement. Deserters from Longstreet to be moving down the Shenandoah again, and state that Lee's army has received 10 days' rations, for a forward movement. General Grant has left for the front, and Burnside has gone to Fort Monroe. General Forrest has completely destroyed Fort Pillow, and his head quarters are now at Jackson, Tennessee. It is said that he is retiring into Mississippi. On the 8th ult. the advance of General Banks's Federal army, under Generals Stone and Ransom, advanced from Natchitoches, Louisiana, to Shreveport. The Confederates fell back, skirmishing, for five miles, when they suddenly assaulted the Federals with superior forces, and after a desperate conflict routed their cavalry, and compelled a demoralised retreat, with the loss of 2000 men, their artillery, and nearly all their train. Confederate despatches state the Federal loss at 14,000. The engagement was renewed the following day, when the Confederates were routed with heavy loss. The Confederate Generals Morton, Pearson, and Green were reported killed. General Banks has countermanded the order to retreat to Alexandria. The Federal fleet, which had advanced to within 80 miles of Shreveport, has been ordered to return. While on its way down the Red River, it was fiercely assailed, and the transports barely escaped capture. The Confederate General Wirt Adams is reported to have defeated the Federals on Big Black River, in Mississippi, capturing several hundred prisoners on the 11th. On the 17th the Confederates, under General Ransom, attacked Fort Gray, near Plymouth, North Carolina, and were repulsed. The attack was renewed on the following day with the co-operation of a Confederate ram, which sank three out of five of the Federal gunboats in the river. On the 22d the Confederates had surrounded Plymouth, and their ram had complete possession of Roanoake River. General Butler has despatched a fleet of gunboats to the assistance of the Federals. It was expected that they would be compelled to evacuate Plymouth, but would be able to hold Newbern. The Federals have evacuated Pilatka, Florida. Another Federal transport has been sunk by torpedoes in St. John's River, Florida. Guerillas have burnt the greater portion of Hickman, Kentucky. The Governor of New York has tendered the services of the State militia for the defence of the forts around New York and the frontier, and has urged the Legislature to reconsider its resolution to pay the interest of the State Debt in currency. The Governors of Ohio, Wisconsin, Indiana, Illinois, and Pennsylvania urge Mr. Lincoln to call out 200,000 additional troops for the exclusive defence of their States. Mr. Lincoln has declared, in a speech made at Baltimore, that if negro troops had been murdered at Fort Pillow, as reported, he would inflict retribution. General Kilpatrick has been relieved from his command in the Army of the Potomac, and ordered to report to Sherman at Nashville. It is reported that General Grant will give General M'Clellan an active command. The New York Herald asserts that Grant has relieved General Butler from military duty, and appointed him to the civil supervision of the Peninsular department. A naval court-martial is in session in New York for the trial of Lieutenant Donohoo, who shot the mate of the barque Saxon. Both Houses of the New York State Legislature have passed a resolution to pay the interest of the state debts to all creditors in greenbacks.

HOUSE OF LORDS.

FRIDAY.—The Steam Rams in the Mersey.—The Earl of DERBY called attention to the correspondence between her Majesty's Government and Mr. Laird respecting the steam rams. The question as to whether the papers should be produced had been ably discussed in the House of Commons, and had been negatived in favour of the Government by a majority of 34. In reviewing the circumstances under which the correspondence had arisen, he characterised the conduct of the Messrs. Laird as everything that was commendable, seeing that they had withheld nothing from the Government; and the conduct of the Government, on the other hand, he considered highly censurable, seeing that it had been most unfair, ungenerous, and he feared illegal. He contended that the final step of seizing the vessels was illegal, and the precautions taken by the Government, on hearing some rumour that an attempt would be made to capture the rams in the port of Liverpool, he described as at once unnecessary and ridiculous. The rumour itself was absurd, and was originated by the Consul of the United States; but it had the desired effect of frightening the Government. It took possession of the rams, took them out of Messrs. Laird's dock, and removed them into the estuary of the Mersey, where they were in much more danger of capture than in their original position. To justify the conduct of the Government it had, he contended, relied too implicitly on what proved afterwards to have been a forgery of a report of the Secretary of the Navy of the Confederate States. He did not wish to screen any one who had violated the law of England. Those who were guilty of such violation ought to be punished. He wished to preserve a strict neutrality between this country and the United States, and maintain peace; but at the same time he did not wish to see British subjects deprived of that protection from the law to which they were justly entitled. In conclusion he moved for the production of the whole correspondence.—Earl RUSSELL said the Government had been guided in all these transactions by one principle. It was their duty to this country to maintain peace with the United States, with which they had lived in amity for nearly 80 years. The proceedings of Messrs. Laird, he asserted, tended to involve this country in war, and this the interposition of the Government had prevented. There could be no doubt the Confederate States had agents in this country and France provided with the means of building vessels of war. That this should be the case, considering the struggle in which they were engaged, gave him no surprise; but he was surprised that British subjects, in defiance of her Majesty's proclamation, should do anything calculated to plunge this country into war. He admitted he had felt some apprehension of such proceedings giving the United States just cause for hostilities. It was evident from the very construction of these vessels that they were to be used as war ships. It required no legal acuteness to define their character, and he felt no regret that they had been detained. Indeed, he was convinced that the course taken was necessary to the preservation of peace. In that course he felt quite justified, as he had good reason to believe that had not the Government interfered the vessels would have passed into the possession of the Southern States, and been employed against the commerce of the Federation.—Lord CHELMSFORD reviewed various points of the correspondence, and argued, from the facts and dates, that the Government had seized and detained the vessels without sufficient evidence, and therefore illegally.—The Duke of ARGYLL regretted that Lord Chelmsford should have prejudged a case that might yet come before the House in another form, and which he might have to decide in a judicial capacity. The question was not one of mere administration, but of international policy, in which the Government had to defend the neutrality of the country. After a few words in explanation, the Earl of DERBY said he would not press for the production of the papers.

MONDAY.—The High Court of Bombay Bill passed through committee.

TUESDAY.—The House sat for a few minutes, but no public business of any importance was transacted.

THURSDAY.—To-day being Ascension Day, the House did not meet.

FRIDAY.—The Dano-German War.—The Earl of CARNARVON gave notice that on Monday next he would call attention to the present position of the Danish question. County Court Debtors.—The LORD CHANCELLOR brought in a Bill to limit actions and process for small debts, to amend the Acts relating to the County Courts, and to confer on such courts a limited jurisdiction in equity. He stated that 17,979 persons had been committed to prison by the county court judges, same for the non-payment of such sums as 1*s.* 1*d.*, 3*s.* 10*d.*, and 2*s.* 9*d.*, while one person was actually committed for 9*d.* The total sum for which these committals had been made did not amount to more than 62,438*l.*, and most of the debts had been contracted with tallymen. The present Bill would give power to the judge to take into consideration all the circumstances of the debt. For fraud, false pretences, and breach of trust, the debtor was to be liable to criminal punishment, but the imprisonment would not be a farce, but a reality.

HOUSE OF COMMONS.

FRIDAY.—Case of Mr. Bewicke.—Mr. H. BERKELEY moved that the House should on Monday resolve itself into a Committee, to consider an address to her Majesty, praying that compensation might be made to Mr. William Bewicke, of Threepwood Hall, Northumberland, for the degradation and loss he had suffered in being imprisoned for 12 months as a felon, on a charge since proved to be false; and for the heavy expenses he had incurred in prosecuting the persons who had conspired against him.—Sir G. GREY opposed the motion, but said that he would not object to refer the question of Mr. Bewicke's loss of property to a select committee.—Lord J. MANNERS supported the motion.—The ATTORNEY-GENERAL opposed it, on the ground that it would create a very inconvenient precedent.—Mr. G. HARDY was in favour of a committee of inquiry.—Mr. DISRAELI recommended the House to affirm the resolution rather than refer the subject to a select committee. After some discussion the House divided, and the motion that the Speaker leave the chair was negatived by 120 to 118. Mr. BERKELEY'S resolution having then been put as a substantive motion, Sir GEORGE GREY moved as an amendment that a select committee be appointed to consider the petition of Mr. Bewicke, and report whether he was entitled to any and what compensation.—Mr. DISRAELI, Mr. HORSMAN, and Mr. WHITESIDE protested against this course as unusual and unparliamentary, but on a division the amendment was carried by 148 to 100.—Mr. D. SEYMOUR called attention to the extensive employment of Climbing Boys in sweeping chimneys, and to the systematic violation of the Act for the regulation of chimney sweepers and chimneys, and asked the Home Secretary if it was the intention of the Government to introduce any Bill during the present session founded on the recommendations of the Children's Employment Commission.—Sir G. GREY admitted that the Act was violated in many instances, but the Government were about to deal with the subject by an amendment Bill, which he hoped would do away with the evil complained of. Pensions to Colonial Governors.—Mr. B. COCHRANE called attention to the subject of granting retiring pensions to those Governors who at present are not entitled to pensions under the Superannuation Act, and strongly urged the policy as well as justice of granting such pensions.—Mr. CARDWELL said the question had already received the careful consideration of the Colonial Department and the Treasury, and, though he was not prepared to announce the decision of the Government, he hoped to be able shortly to do so.—Sir J. PAKINGTON, Mr. MALINS, and Lord J. MANNERS pressed upon the Government the inexpediency on public grounds of allowing a person in the important position of Governor of a colony to retire into private life unrewarded for past services.—Mr. DILLWYN called attention to the insufficiency and inconvenience of the temporary Museum for Inventions at South Kensington, and the Patent Library in Southampton Buildings, and to the expediency of uniting the Museum for Inventions and the Patent Library under one building, and at a convenient distance from the law courts.—Mr. COWPER admitted the importance of the subject, and said that it was under the consideration of the Government.—After some remarks by Colonel BARTTELOT, Mr. AUGUSTUS SMITH, and Mr. AYRTON the SPEAKER put the question that he do leave the chair, declaring that the "ayes" had it, and while Sir H. VERNEY, who had risen to ask a question, was on his legs, he left the chair.—Mr. OSBORNE protested against the Chairman taking the chair under these circumstances, and moved that he report progress. This motion having been agreed to, on the SPEAKER having resumed the chair, Mr. OSBORNE renewed his protest, and a discussion arose upon the point of order whether Sir H. VERNEY had risen before the SPEAKER declared the question carried.—The SPEAKER maintained that the course he had pursued was in strict conformity with order, and after a short conversation the House acquiesced in this view, and proceeded to the next order of the day, the consideration of the Penal Servitude Acts Amendment Bill, as amended in the Committee. Various amendments, verbal and otherwise, of which notice had been given, underwent much discussion, some being adopted and others rejected. The Civil Bill Court (Ireland) Bill likewise received certain amendments on the report.

MONDAY.—Landlord and Tenant in Ireland.—Sir R. PEEL stated, in reply to Mr. Maguire, that it was not the intention of the Government to introduce any Bill in the present session to establish more equitable relations between landlord and tenant in Ireland.—The CHANCELLOR of the EXCHEQUER announced that, after the opinion expressed on Wednesday last by the Scotch members on Sir John Hay's Bank Notes (Scotland) Bill, he did not intend to proceed with the Bank Acts Bill for Scotland. The Channel Fleet.—In reply to Sir J. PAKINGTON, Lord C. PAGET stated, amid the cheers of the House, that the Channel squadron was in the Downs, that the stores were nearly completed, and that the ships would be ready to proceed to any part of the world at 24 hours' notice. His lordship added that none of the iron ships had been docked since their winter cruise, but that the Warrior was docked on the 12th November, the Black Prince on the 22d October, the Prince Consort on the 11th November, the Hector on the 14th January, and the Defence on the 16th January. Under Secretaries of State.—Sir G. GREY stated, in answer to Mr. WALPOLE, that as great doubt existed with regard to the construction of the Act of 1858 relating to the sitting and voting of Under Secretaries of State in the House of Commons, it was the intention of Government to bring in a Bill to amend it. On the consideration of the Inland Revenue Bill as amended, Mr. MALINS moved an amendment, to exempt life assurance policies contained in settlements from the duty proposed to be levied upon them by the Bill.—After some discussion the House divided, and the amendment was negatived by 161 to 124, Mr. DISRAELI voting in the majority, and Sir J. PAKINGTON and Mr. HENLEY in the minority.—On the question that the schedule be agreed to, Mr. J. B. SMITH moved that the Duties on Sugar be continued in force for one year only. He contended that the Chancellor of the Exchequer, in adopting an ad valorem scale of duties, had thrown over the great principle of free trade, and was endeavouring to legislate in the interests of the sugar refiner as against the sugar consumer.—Mr. LEATHAM seconded the motion.—Mr. CAVE opposed, and Mr. LINDSAY supported the motion, the latter contending that the tendency of the measure was to legislate for a class only.—Mr. CRAWFORD supported the motion, and said that the Chancellor of the Exchequer appeared to have more regard for the refiner than the consumer.—Mr. C. EWING, as a large producer of sugar, said he would most consult his own interest; but he were to vote for a uniform duty; but as such system, if unaccompanied with the privilege of refining in bond, would be to raise the price on the consumer, he felt himself bound to support the proposition of the Chancellor of the Exchequer.—Mr. MOFFATT recommended a return of the old plan of allowing the sugar duties to be imposed for a year only.—Mr. AYRTON denounced the proposition of Mr. Smith as impracticable, and unfair to the producer and refiner of sugar.—Mr. BATHURST supported the motion.—Mr. BUCHANAN opposed it.—The CHANCELLOR of the EXCHEQUER denied that the question at issue was one between the refiner and the consumer. It was true the refiner said he could not compete if there was a uniform rate of duty; but so far from asking for protection, he complained bitterly of the ad valorem scale as now proposed. The refiner complained that the duty between refined and unrefined sugar was too small to enable him to compete with the foreigner; but he did not ask for protection—all he wanted was equality. With regard to the charge that he had become an apostate to the great principle of free trade, he repudiated it with indignation; and he contended that if the House were to agree to the motion it would indeed reverse that enlightened and progressive policy. On a division, the motion was negatived by 91 to 71. The report was then agreed to.—On the motion for going into Committee of Supply, Mr. PEEL, in reply to a question from Mr. Cox, stated to that gentleman that 50 acres of land would be reserved under the Inclosure Act of last Session as a recreation ground in the parish of Chigwell, in Essex.—The House then went into Committee of Supply on the Navy Estimates. On the question that 449,298*l.* be voted for new works in various dockyards at home and abroad, Mr. P. W. MARTIN moved to reduce the vote by 1549*l.* for additional accommodation for spinning machinery at Chatham. After some discussion, the motion was withdrawn.—Lord C. PAGET moved that the item of 15,900*l.* for deepening the north-west basin and constructing a first-class dock at Malta be reduced by the sum of 5000*l.*, with a view to submitting the question of the dock to a Select Committee.—Captain TALBOT moved as an amendment the omission of the whole item, on the ground that the most preferable site for the new dock was at Pembroke Creek, instead of Marsa, as proposed by the Admiralty.—Mr. WHITBREAD said that the responsibility rested altogether with the late Government.—Sir J. PAKINGTON argued that it was of the greatest importance to British naval power that a proper dock should be constructed at French Creek as soon as possible.—Sir J. ELPHINSTONE said it would be impossible to imagine a more unseamanlike proposition than to construct a dock at the Marsa. After some discussion the committee divided, and the amendment was rejected by 111 to 41. The vote as amended by the Government was then agreed to. The Penal Servitude Acts Amendment Bill, and the Civil Bill Court (Ireland) Bill were read a third time, and passed.

TUESDAY.—The Channel Fleet.—Mr. D. GRIFFITH asked whether an Austrian squadron had not arrived in the Downs and other of our harbours; and whether the Channel fleet had not been ordered round to the Downs; and, if so, wherefore was the intention of her Majesty's Government to allow the Austrian ships of war to proceed to the Baltic or the North Sea without being accompanied by the Channel fleet.—Sir G. GREY replied that three or four Austrian ships had arrived in the Downs, and there was reason to believe that a few more were on their way from the Mediterranean; but that the Austrian Government had explicitly stated that the only instructions which they had given their admiral was, that he was to protect German commerce in the North Sea, and prevent the blockade of the Elbe and Weser. The admiral in command of the Channel fleet was fully aware of the Austrian movements; but her Majesty's Government declined to state what instructions they had given to him in the event of instructions of a different nature being sent to the Austrian squadron—especially as they had reason to believe that the Austrian squadron would not enter the Baltic. Punishment of Death.—MR. EWART moved the appointment of a Select Committee to inquire into the expediency of maintaining the punishment of death. As the great object of punishment was to deter, that object could not be realised when, as under our present system, a large proportion of the persons condemned to death had their sentences commuted.—Mr. DENMAN seconded the motion. He commented on the inconsistency of maintaining one punishment for all descriptions of murder, and contending that in many instances the guilty escaped punishment altogether, from the reluctance of juries to convict in cases where, in their opinion, the crime, although a heinous one, was still short of murder.—Lord H. LENNOX moved, as an amendment, that a Select Committee be appointed to inquire into the operation of the laws relating to capital punishment. He referred to the cases of Jessie M'Lachlan, Wright, and Hall, to show that while one of the most flagrant criminals of the day had escaped the full punishment of her offence, Wright had been executed for taking the life of a woman in a drunken brawl, and Hall had very properly been respited.—Mr. MITFORD seconded the amendment. He denied that public executions had a salutary effect upon the spectators, as it had been proved that they often improved the occasion to pick pockets and indulge in ribald jests.—Alderman ROSE said that from his experience as one of the commissioners of the Central Criminal Court, he could state that juries for the most part discharged their functions conscientiously, and that public executions were useful in a moral point of view. In his opinion the man who, with his senses about him, took away the life of another, ought, in justice to society, to be hanged.—Mr. NEATE was in favour of a commission to inquire into the provisions and operation of the laws under which capital punishments are now inflicted, although he feared that the first effect of abolishing capital punishment would be to increase the number of murders.—Sir G. GREY reminded the House that since the measure of 1861 for the amendment and consolidation of the law, capital punishment was restricted to cases of wilful murder only. Believing that it was necessary for the preservation of human life that this exception should be maintained, he could not consent to refer the subject to a select committee. If, however, Mr. Ewart would withdraw his motion, and Lord H. Lennox his amendment, he would have no objection to an address to the Crown for a commission to consider the law under which the penalty of death was now exacted, and to report whether it was desirable to make any alteration in it.—Mr. BRIGHT was willing to accept the compromise offered by the Home Secretary as the first step to a great and beneficial change in our criminal code. He reminded the House that every amelioration of that code had been carried against the opinion of the judges of the land, and that, if their recommendations had not been overruled, men would still be executed for sheep stealing and highway robbery. In his opinion, the security of human life depended upon inculcating in the minds of the people a veneration for that which God alone could give, and not on the barbarous contrivance of putting ten or a dozen men to a violent death every year.—Mr. NEWDEGATE replied at some length to the arguments of Mr. Bright, and vindicated the character of the judges for sagacity and humanity.—Mr. GILPIN expressed himself in unqualified terms in favour of the abolition of capital punishment.—Mr. ROEBUCK would minimise the punishment as much as possible, but could not consent to spare the life of the deliberate murderer.—Sir J. WALSH warned the House how it abolished the most deterrent of all punishments. He feared that life would not be safe if the extreme penalty of the law were not carried out in the case of wilful murder.—Mr. HIBBERT and Mr. MAGUIRE spoke in favour of the original motion. The motion and the amendment having been withdrawn, Mr. NEATE moved an address to her Majesty, praying her to issue a royal commission to inquire into the provisions and operation of the laws under which the punishment of death is now inflicted in the United Kingdom, and the manner in which it is inflicted, and to report whether it is desirable to make any alteration therein. The motion was agreed to.—Sir G. GREY obtained leave to bring in a Bill for further regulating the closing of Public Houses and Refreshment Houses within the metropolitan police district.—Mr. BASS obtained leave to bring in a Bill to abate the nuisance of Street Music. The Customs and Inland Revenue Bill was read a third time and passed. The Insolvent Debtors (Ireland) Bill, after a short debate, was read a second time. The Partnership Law Amendment Bill was considered in committee. On a division on the third clause it was ascertained that there were only 32 members present; the Chairman therefore left the chair, and the House adjourned.

WEDNESDAY.—The Austrian Fleet.—Mr. D. GRIFFITH gave notice that on the 13th inst., on the motion for the adjournment of the House for the Whitsuntide holidays, he should call attention to the permission which has been given to the Austrian squadron to leave these shores and take up a position favourable for the further prosecution of the war against Denmark, without any practical check or supervision by means of the presence of a British naval force. The House then went into Committee on the Weights and Measures (Metric System) Bill.—On the second clause, Mr. M. GIBSON suggested that as there was at present no knowledge of what the standard of weights and measures was, it would be well to appoint a royal commission to inquire into and settle that point before proceeding further with the Bill.—Mr. AYRTON was of opinion that steps ought to be taken for defining the metrical system and distributing the exact standards throughout the country, the understanding of which was necessary to the ultimate compulsory adoption of the system. Some discussion ensued, in the course of which Mr. M. GIBSON proposed the introduction of a clause legalising contracts made under the metric system; and finally it was agreed that the right hon. gentleman should take charge of the Bill in its future stages. Further progress was therefore postponed. The Chief Rents (Ireland) Bill was considered in committee, and some progress was made. The Admiralty Lands and Works Bill was read a second time. The Promissory Notes and Bills of Exchange (Ireland) Bill was read a third time and passed.—Mr. M. GIBSON obtained leave to bring in a Bill for confirming certain provisional Orders made by the Board of Trade under the General Pier and Harbour Act (1861).

THURSDAY.—The Brazilian Question.—MR LAYARD stated, in reply to Mr. MACAULAY, that no official communication had yet been received announcing the acceptance by the Brazilian Government of the proffered mediation of the King of Portugal in reference to the questions at issue between Brazil and this country. The Case of Mr. Bewicke.—Sir G. GREY said, in reply to Mr. H. BERKELEY, that the convict Hutchinson, sentenced to four years' penal servitude for perjury in the case of Mr. Bewicke, of Threepwood Hall, Northumberland, had been released on a ticket of leave after 18 months' imprisonment upon the recommendation of the judge who had tried him. The Channel Fleet.—In answer to Colonel FRENCH, Sir G. GREY said it was not true that the Aurora frigate had been ordered to the Baltic. The Conference.—Mr. DISRAELI invited the Government to give some information to the House with reference to the Conference.—Sir G. GREY replied that the Conference met on the previous day, and adjourned to Monday, when it would reassemble. He added that as it was the opinion of the members of the Conference that it was essential to the success of the Conference itself that its proceedings should be private, it was not in his power to inform the House why it had adjourned to Monday. The Army.—On the motion for going into committee of supply, Mr. ANGERSTEIN called attention to the difference between the number of soldiers' wives now permitted to embark with a regiment for foreign service and the number permitted to reside in barracks at home.—Lord LOVAINE called attention to the undue advantage given to civilians over officers of the army by the scale of travelling expenses allowed by the War Office.—Colonel NORTH brought under notice the hardship imposed upon the officers of Chelsea Hospital by having to pay rates and taxes for houses occupied by them in that establishment in the performance of their duties.—The Marquis of HARTINGTON offered some explanations in relation to these subjects. The House then went into committee of supply on the Army Estimates. Votes of 264,216*l.* for medical establishments, services, and supplies; 783,783*l.* for the disembodied militia, and 47,886*l.* for yeomanry cavalry, were agreed to. On the question that 39,200*l.* be granted for training and exercising the Yeomanry Cavalry during the present year, Mr. LAWSON moved the rejection of the vote, on the ground that a sufficient sum had already been provided for the defence of the country without expending a large amount on the yeomanry.—Mr. NEATE, Mr. W. WILLIAMS, and Mr. H. BERKELEY opposed the vote, which was defended by Colonel KNOX, the Marquis of HARTINGTON, and Colonel EDWARDS. On a division, the motion was rejected by 119 to 29. The vote was then agreed to.—The vote of 328,260*l.* for the Volunteers led to some discussion, in the course of which Mr. D. GRIFFITH inquired what the Government proposed doing for giving assistance or facilities for the clothing of the volunteers.—Lord ELCHO expressed his satisfaction at the liberal manner in which the Government had treated the volunteers, and said that with good management the capitation allowance was sufficient to maintain the corps in an efficient state.—The Marquis of HARTINGTON stated that it was not the intention of the Government to take any further steps to assist the volunteer force either by an increased capitation allowance or by supplying them with clothing. The vote was agreed to, as also a vote for 40,580*l.* for enrolled pensioners and army reserve force. On the vote of 973,631*l.* for stores in the manufacturing department, Lord ELCHO called attention to the arming of the troops, and advocated the adoption of a breech-loading arm, on the ground that as a small army like ours was likely to contend with a superior force, it was absolutely necessary that it should be furnished with the most efficient weapon. He was informed that the breech-loading principle might be applied to the Enfield rifle at a cost of 10*s.* each, and he urged upon the Government the desirability of trying the experiment.—The Marquis of HARTINGTON said that the narrow bore rifle of Mr. Whitworth had been proved to be a better weapon than any other nation possessed, but that the Government were not indisposed to try the large bore rifle, and also the breech-loader, 2000 of which had already been ordered, and would be reported upon.—Sir H. WILLOUGHBY complained that there was no means of knowing the stock in hand, or of supplying information with reference to the enormous branch of expenditure connected with stores and the manufacturing departments. He proposed to reduce the vote by 6000*l.*, which would bring the charge for the small arms department down to that at which it stood in 1862-3.—Mr. COBDEN censured the wasteful system pursued in the Government factories, and intimated that he should bring the whole question before the House in the course of the session. The motion having been withdrawn, Lord ELCHO charged the Government with having ignored the report of the small arms committee, and with the view of extracting some pledge from them, moved the reduction of the vote by the amount of the item for small arms establishments.—The Marquis of HARTINGTON defended the vote, and denied that the report of the small arms committee had been ignored. On the contrary, the War Department had acted upon several of its recommendations. In the discussion that ensued, Sir F. SMITH, Colonel BARTTELOT, Captain JERVIS, Lord C. PAGET, and others took part, and ultimately the motion to reduce the item was negatived by 80 to 35. The vote was then agreed to, as was also a vote for 572,519*l.* for warlike stores. The vote of 750,870*l.* for works and buildings was under discussion when the chairman reported progress.—The Under Secretaries Indemnity Bill was read a second time. The Local Government Supplemental Bill passed through Committee. The Union Assessment Committee Act Amendment Bill and the Joint-Stock Companies (Foreign Countries) Bill were read a second time.

FRIDAY.—Denmark and Germany.—Mr. NEWDEGATE asked whether the Government intended to adopt measures likely to be more effectual in relieving the Danes from oppression.—Sir G. GREY hoped that the result of the Conference would be the declaration of an armistice. Her Majesty's Government had been in communication with the other Powers in reference to the measures most proper to be adopted with regard to the termination of the war and a satisfactory termination of existing differences. The German Squadron.—Sir G. GREY repeated, in answer to a question from Mr. GRIFFITHS, that assurances had been received that the object of the Austrian squadron was merely to protect German trade in the Elbe and the Weser. Public Schools Commission.—On the order for going into Committee of Supply, Mr. G. DUFF called attention to the Public Schools Commission. [Left sitting.]

Metropolis and its Vicinity.

GENERAL GARIBALDI.—A telegram was received at Stafford House from the Duke of Sutherland on Wednesday morning, stating that the yacht Undine arrived safely at Gibraltar on Tuesday with General Garibaldi on board, and would leave again last night for Caprera. All were well on board. The Lord Mayor continues to receive letters and telegrams from various parts of Italy expressive of profound gratitude for the enthusiastic reception of General Garibaldi by the English people. The latest are from the municipalities of Avellino, Chiavari and Santa Maria di Capua, and the Society of Operatives and Artists in the city of Varese.

THE ROOF OF GUILDHALL.—At a special Court of Common Council on Monday a report from the improvement committee was read in reference to the new roof for Guildhall now in course of construction. It appeared that the Court, on the recommendation of the committee some time ago, authorised the construction of a new roof, after a design by their late architect, and at a cost of upwards of 17,000*l.*, and that the contract was undertaken by Messrs. Myers. The work was unavoidably interrupted by the entertainment given by the corporation last year in honour of the marriage of the Prince and Princess of Wales, and has since been resumed. The Committee have recently discovered, since the resumption of the work, that the roof in course of construction is neither an oak nor an open one, as they had been led to suppose it would be; nor is it in harmony with the character of the building itself. They therefore, on the advice of Mr. Digby Wyatt and Mr. Roberts, brought up a report recommending the adoption of a design for a roof wholly of oak, and open, and similar to the original roof, which, with the building itself, dated from the 15th century. They also recommended the opening of 16 Gothic windows as they originally stood, but which have for many years been filled up and thereby rendered unsightly. The contemplated alterations in the design and material of the roof, would increase the existing contract by about 2500*l.*, and the windows might be opened as proposed at a cost of from 75*l.* to 250*l.* each. Mr. Kelday moved the adoption of the Report. Mr. Rowe argued that the wiser course would again for the Corporation to build a new hall altogether rather than expend 18,000*l.* or 20,000*l.* in patching up the old one. The report of the committee was unanimously adopted and referred back to them for execution. It was stated, in the course of the discussion, that the new roof would be completed by Lord Mayor's Day.

PROPOSED GALLERIES AT SOUTH KENSINGTON.—The Commissioners appointed to award the premiums for the designs submitted in competition for the Galleries, comprising Lord Elcho, in the chair, Mr. Tite, Mr. Roberts, Mr. Fergusson, and Mr. Pennethorne, on Friday awarded the first premium to the design distinguished by the motto, "Ad ogni uccello"; the second to that marked "To build well"; and the third to that inscribed "Pro Rege et Lege." This report having been forwarded to the Right Hon. W. Cowper, Chief Commissioner of Works, and the letters opened, it was ascertained that the first premium of 400*l.* had been awarded to Captain Fowke; the second, of 250*l.*, to Professor Kerr; and the third, 150*l.*, to Mr. Borthwick. The decisions are said to have been unanimous.

BLACKFRIARS BRIDGE.—The temporary bridge at Blackfriars is now nearly completed, and is adapted by its solidity, and the mechanical principles of its construction, to last quite as long and bear as heavy a traffic as the old bridge. It is constructed of wood in two floors or stories, the necessary accommodation for carriages and foot passengers being thereby secured at the least expenditure of space and material. It is 990 feet in length, the upper story being 16 feet above that designed for carriages, and accommodating foot passengers by means of two footways, each 9 feet in width; the footways of old Blackfriars being only 7 feet wide. The lower floor is 26 feet in width, which is the same width as the roadway of the old bridge. The piles on which the bridge rests are only 18 feet apart, and are driven 10 feet into the bed of the river; and the transverse piles which carry the roadway are only 7 feet apart from centre to centre. These parts are braced together with great firmness, so that the vibration common to wooden bridges will be reduced to a minimum. The openings for the river are each 70 feet span, formed of iron girders 6 feet in depth. The incline of the old bridge was 1 in 24, but for the roadway of the wooden bridge the same gradient as that of the new Blackfriars Bridge has been adopted, namely, 1 in 40; but, as the footway for passengers is carried 16 feet above the roadway, pedestrians have to ascend gradients of 1 in 10 at the approaches, the remainder of the journey being almost a dead level. The first pile of the bridge was driven on the 11th August last, and the bridge was finished in a period of less than eight months. The number of piles which support the bridge is 300, and the depth of the timber below high water mark is 40 feet.

THE STEAM RAMS.—On Friday Messrs. Fletcher, Hull, and Stone, the solicitors of Messrs. Laird in the case of the steam rams, received a telegram stating that the commission has been executed in Egypt, and that the commissioners will reach London on the 7th of May. The trial will take place in the Exchequer Court on Friday the 27th. The trial will be "at bar," that is to say, by a special jury where all the judges will preside, and where each judge may sum up, making such observations on the law of the case as may occur to him. It is the privilege of the Crown to demand a trial in this form, but it has not been exercised for many years.

NEW FREEMASONS HALL.—The Earl of Zetland, as Grand Master of the Freemasons in England, accompanied by Earl de Grey and Ripon, Deputy Grand Master, and the Duke of Leinster, as Irish Grand Master, last week laid the foundation-stone of a new hall about to be erected, at an estimated cost of 50,000*l.* near to the old hall of the order in Great Queen Street, Lincoln's Inn Fields. The ceremony furnished occasion for a grand muster of the body generally, as well those resident in the provinces as in the metropolis, and for a display of the pomp and pageantry customary on high festivals. Among the members who took a leading part in the proceedings were the Persian Ambassador, the Minister of Hayti, Lord Sherborne, Lord De Tabley, Lord Otho Fitzgerald, the Hon. George Handcock, Admiral Sir Lucius Curtis, Sir Watkin Wynn, M.P.; Mr. Cornwall Legh, M.P.; Mr. F. Dundas, M.P.; Mr. A. Smith, M.P.; Mr. Greenall, M.P.; Sir F. Gore Ouseley, Professor of Music in the University of Oxford; the Rev. Sir J. W. Hayes, Mr. Fenwick, M.P.; Mr. Havers, chairman of the Building Committee; Mr. A. Dobie, &c. The object of the proposed building is to supply in a manner more complete and convenient in all respects than the old hall and offices were capable of providing, a great central gathering place for the body of Freemasons, and one wholly separate from the arrangements of a tavern. It will be erected after a design by Mr. F. P. Cockerell, the architect, and built of Portland Stone, with a handsome façade towards Great Queen Street, supported by polished granite columns. It will run parallel with the present hall, with which it will be connected by a handsome corridor, and it will be approached by a noble flight of stairs leading from the portico. The Masonic portion of the building will comprise a spacious coffee-room, a library, and all other suitable accommodation; and the old hall will be re-embellished in a style corresponding with the decorations of the new one, thus furnishing a suite of rooms of stately dimensions. This work has been undertaken from a regard to the constantly increasing number of the fraternity, especially of late, as many as 2000 new members having, it is said, been admitted within the three months of the present year into the Grand Lodge of England. In the whole of England there are about 1000 lodges, each averaging 40 members, or containing in all 40,000 in round numbers. The Grand Lodge possesses a large amount of funded wealth, besides freehold property of considerable value, and there are several noble charities connected with it. Of these one is a boys' school at Wood Green, Tottenham, now being rebuilt at a cost of about 18,000*l.*; a school at Wandsworth, where from 80 to 100 girls are maintained and educated; an asylum for aged and decayed masons at Croydon; and an annuity fund for aged men and widows, supported by voluntary contributions, the Grand Lodge giving 800*l.* a year. After the foundation stone had been formally laid, the Rev. A. F. Woodford, Grand Chaplain, delivered an address in the presence of the Earl of Zetland, Earl de Grey and Ripon, the Duke of Leinster, and the rest of the fraternity present. At the conclusion of the ceremony the members dined together at the Freemasons' Tavern.

DESTRUCTIVE FIRES, AND ACCIDENT TO THE BRIGADE.—Yesterday morning, at an early hour, a fire occurred at Norton-Folgate, Bishopsgate Street, which nearly proved fatal to several of the Fire Brigade, It originated on the premises, occupied as a beershop by Mr. J. Parr, a three-storey building. On the alarm being raised the fire was found to be raging at the back, and was making rapid progress up the staircase to the upper rooms. As soon as the information reached the Brigade station in Bishopsgate Street, the fact was telegraphed to Captain Shaw, who called out all the engines from half-a-dozen stations for service. By the time the earlier force reached the spot the fire had possession of the whole of the back portion of the premises, from the basement to the roof, and there seemed little probability of any part being saved. The firemen led their hose into the burning premises, and followed the fire up. Having scoured it out from the basement they went up the staircase and eventually into all the rooms in the house, and succeeded by those measures in getting the fire subdued. Captain Shaw, Mr. Bridges, and several other officers and men (about 12 in number), also some of the Duke of Sutherland's amateur firemen, were in various parts of the premises, extinguishing the burning embers, when a loud cracking was suddenly heard, and the next instant the back of the house fell with a heavy crash, burying several of the men. Some escaped from the front windows by a fire escape, which was placed against the front of the house. Captain Shaw, Mr. Bridges, and four or five others who were in the shop, were partially covered in dust, but sustained no injury. Two or three of the men who were in the upper floors fell with them to the bottom, and it was almost a miracle they were not killed. One officer named Flinn, attached to Whitecross Street, was buried underneath the ruins or nearly half an hour before he could be extricated, but was found not to be so much injured as at first feared. Some of the adjoining houses sustained a great deal of damage. About an hour after this outbreak another fire broke out in Castle Court, Lower Whitecross Street, in a house let out in tenements. Each floor was occupied by a family, and their excitement and terror when the place underneath them was found to be on fire was very painful. By the prompt attendance of the fire escapes all the people were saved, though everything they possessed was destroyed, for the flames extended throughout every room in the house, and subsequently part of the premises fell in. One young married woman, living with her husband and two young children in an adjoining house, died from fright at the outbreak of the fire. She was in bed at the time, and was awoke by the cries in the next house. Seeing the flames issuing from the window, she gave a scream, and fell back dead.

EXECUTION AT NEWGATE.—The execution of J. Devine, the Marylebone murderer, took place on Monday morning at Newgate. He had previously made a full confession of his guilt. The number assembled to witness the execution was very small, and bore no proportion to the crowds that usually collect on such occasions.

THE PUBLIC HEALTH.—The Registrar-General's Weekly Return states that the deaths in London in the week that ended on Saturday, April 30, were 1307. No deaths from small-pox were registered in the week, a circumstance which has not occurred before since the prevalence of that disease in the metropolis. The average number in the corresponding week of the ten years 1854-63, corrected for increase of population, was 1321. The present return is therefore 14 below the average. During the week the births of 1006 boys and 940 girls, in all 1946 children, were registered in London. In the ten corresponding weeks of the years 1854-63 the average number was 1971.

Provincial.

BIRKENHEAD.—The police a few days since discovered a "den of thieves" in this borough in a very singular manner. A policeman had taken a man and woman who were found begging in Oxton, and on making a descent on the house where they resided, the officers found it filled with known thieves, most of whom were helplessly drunk. They also found sets of burglars' tools, loaded pistols, bullet moulds, pistol balls and a very formidable kind of weapon, which might be used for housebreaking or defence.

BRADFORD.—Lord Palmerston has accepted the invitation to visit this town to lay the foundation stone of the new Exchange. The ceremony is to take place at the end of the present Session of Parliament, and there will, no doubt, be a general holiday in the district on the occasion. His lordship, during his visit, is to be the guest of Mr. Henry W. Ripley, of Lightcliffe, President of the Bradford Chamber of Commerce.

BRISTOL.—John Goodenough, the promoter of several very large robberies in the south of England, and whose booty it was that was recently found in Windsor Forest, has been captured by the police of this city. He has assumed various aliases from time to time, and when arrested by the detective police, acting upon information received from the Hants county constabulary at Gosport, he was known by the name of "Captain Smith," and the furniture of his house was packed up in readiness for removal to another part of the country. Although somewhat below the middle stature he is a powerful and determined man, and three of the officers who aided in capturing him were wounded. Upon him was found a six-barrelled revolver loaded with ball and capped, which there is no doubt he would have used had he not been adroitly seized when not aware that he was in the company of a detective officer. On a previous occasion, however, when an attempt was made to capture him in another part of the country, he held his assailants at bay by the production of his revolver, and managed to escape. He was removed to Gosport, and has been committed for trial at the assizes on three separate charges of burglary. It appears that some years ago he was transported for burglary, and his re-appearance created considerable surprise. It has not, however, been ascertained whether he obtained a ticket of leave or made his escape.

CAMBRIDGE.—The Council of the Senate have issued a report in which they state that they have understood that it would be more agreeable to the Prince and Princess of Wales to fix an earlier period than the 10th of June for their visit—viz., from the 2d to the 4th of June, so that they may be present in the University before the members have separated for the long vacation. The Council therefore recommend that the honorary degrees be conferred on the 3d of June, and that the Vice-Chancellor be authorised to fix the day and time for reciting the prize exercises.

CANTERBURY.—A flattened bullet has been extracted from the neck of the girl Esther Cullen, who was shot by her sweetheart, a man named Horton, at the house of Mr. Bigden, in whose service she was living as domestic servant, in this city, on the 27th March, the man afterwards committing suicide by shooting himself and cutting his throat. It will be remembered that at the inquest the superintendent of police gave evidence that, in his opinion, no ball had been discharged from either of the pistols, but that the bullets had dropped out, and that the injuries merely resulted from the discharge of the powder. This, however, turns out to be incorrect. The girl is slowly recovering from the effects of the shock.

DONCASTER.—On Saturday, at the West Riding police-court, William Wingfield was charged with attempting to murder his housekeeper, Mary Brad-shaw, on the previous night at Brodsworth, a village about six miles from this town. The prisoner is a man respectably connected, and for a number of years has carried on the business of wheelwright and joiner. At present it is not known what led to the disagreement with his housekeeper, but a quarrel arose, which resulted in her leaving his house, and she proceeded to her father's, only a short distance. The prisoner followed her, armed with a double-barrelled pistol, which he deliberately fired at her, but the woman seeing her danger fortunately struck his arm upwards, and it is supposed the ball missed her, although this at present cannot be accurately ascertained. The prisoner attempted to discharge the other barrel, but it missed fire. He then savagely attacked her with a poker, and beat her dreadfully upon the head. Her screams brought Mr. Wilson, a neighbour, to the house, and he courageously assisted her, and prevented Wingfield from discharging the pistol at her again. Wingfield then pointed the pistol at Wilson, but it missed fire. He followed his housekeeper into the house, and there again attacked her with the poker, but Wilson held him and prevented him from doing further mischief. Other assistance arriving, the prisoner was given into custody. The poor woman was found to be dreadfully bruised upon the head by the blows from the poker and on Saturday was in a very critical state. The prisoner was remanded, the magistrates refusing to accept bail. No motive is assigned for the outrage.

Dover.—While some workmen were excavating in the neighbourhood of this town a few days since, they came upon some very interesting Roman remains, buried at a depth of 10½ ft. from the surface. The articles discovered comprised a dolium 22 in. high and 18½ in. in diameter, in which was a remarkably beautiful long-necked glass ampulla, 7 in. high, in perfect preservation, marked with some letters not yet satisfactorily deciphered; another dolium of similar character, containing a broken patera, 7½ in. in diameter, of Samian ware; a roughly-glazed vessel of black ware, 14 in. high and 13 in. in diameter; a gracefully-formed vessel, 10 in. high, nearly perfect. At the bottom of the vases calcined human bones were found, which is somewhat remarkable, as they are such vessels as were used for domestic purposes, and quite unlike proper cinerary urns. These relics have been carefully preserved, and extensive excavations will shortly be made at the spot, when it is believed that further discoveries will be made of much interest to the antiquarian.

Halifax.—On Sunday afternoon a woman named Ellen Bottomley, 46 years of age, and wife of Mr. Joseph Bottomley, mason of Clifton, near this town, was accidentally shot by her daughter, under very shocking circumstances. Her husband had just loaded his gun for the purpose of shooting a rat which he had seen in his garden, but had laid the gun down again without using it. About the same time deceased had been remarking to a friend in the house how well her daughter could handle a gun with caps on. Shortly after this the daughter went into the room where the gun was placed, brought it into the kitchen where her mother was seated, and thinking it was not loaded, but had a cap on merely, said something to her mother in a jocular strain as to the way in which she used the gun, and drew the trigger. The contents of the gun entered Mrs. Bottomley's head, killing her on the spot. The horror of the unhappy girl was great, and she continued in a very depressed state of mind through the remainder of the day and the following night. An inquest on the body was held on Monday afternoon, when the jury returned a verdict of Accidentally Shot.

Hartlepool.—Another north-country brig has been fired into by the Spanish fort of Tarifa, in the Strait of Gibraltar. The Safeguard, belonging to this port, in ballast from Barcelona, in passing this port, about two miles from the shore, was fired into, when the ball, a 28-pounder, passed through the ship's side, and lodged in the ballast. None of the crew were hurt, and fortunately the vessel was struck above the water line, or she might have sunk. The Mountaineer, which was shot into a short time ago and had a man killed, had not her flag up, and did not salute the fort, and it is thought that this vessel had also neglected to do so.

Harwich.—On Thursday William Norton, aged 18, the son of a labourer, was charged before the bench of magistrates sitting at Thorpe, with an aggravated assault upon a maiden lady named Nunn. It appeared that the prosecutrix is staying at Walton-on the-Naze, with an invalid sister, for the benefit of the sea air. On the morning of the 23d ult. she was walking along the beach near Walton Low, towards this town, when she was stopped by the prisoner, who told her she could not go any further unless she paid him a toll of 2*l*. She informed him that she had no money then with her, when he took hold of her and threw her down on the beach. She struggled with him, and after great efforts recovered her feet, when he threw her again twice, and she continued to struggle with him for more than 300 yards, when she succeeded in getting away. She gave an alarm, and the prisoner was pursued and apprehended. On the part of the prosecution, the magistrates were asked to deal summarily with the case, in order that the presence of Miss Nunn, who was in a delicate state of health, might not be required. It was accordingly arranged to take this course, and the prisoner, who pleaded Guilty to the charge, was sentenced to six months' hard labour.

Hereford.—At the Guildhall on Monday, the first prosecution under the provisions of the Poisoned Grain Act was taken. Mr. Day, builder, summoned William Hardman, under the 31 section of the 26th and 27th Vict., cap. 113, known as the Poisoned Grain Act. Mr. Day deposed that he resided in White Horse Road, and kept pigeons for his amusement. Defendent was in the habit of visiting an adjoining garden belonging to his employer. The prosecutor having been informed that some of his pigeons had been destroyed, on the following morning went into his garden, and kept watch. He saw defendant come from a greenhouse, and strew something on the ground, and when he had left complainant sent one of his workmen over to pick it up, It proved to be grain, and, having since been subjected to chemical tests by the manager of the Herefordshire Manure Company's works, had been found to have been impregnated with strychnine. The solicitor for the defendant at once admitted the offence, but relied upon the fact that the Act only passed in July last year, and was therefore not generally known. As it was the first case that had been brought under the Act he hoped the bench would only inflict a slight penalty. The bench commented upon the dangerous nature of the offence, and, hoping that this would be the means of making the public acquainted with the provisions of the Act, they fined defendant in the nominal penalty of 5*s*. and costs.

Liverpool.—There appears to be good reason for anticipating that Liverpool will present a yacht to General Garibaldi. A gentleman in this town is in possession of a screw steam yacht which was built on the Clyde for a nobleman, and he is willing to sell her for 1800*l*., or somewhat less than half the original cost. She is fully equipped, and can be sent to sea within 24 hours; and gentlemen who have inspected her state that she is in every respect well suited to Garibaldi, her size and machinery being such that the General and his own family, after a few hours' instruction, would be quite competent to manage her. A large yacht, requiring six or eight men to sail her, would be beyond the requirements, and probably beyond the means of Garibaldi; and a sailing yacht, however good a craft she might be, might, owing to the frequent calms in the Mediterranean, become useless to her owner at the very time that he wished to leave or return to his island home. This screw steam yacht is therefore pronounced to be the very thing that would suit Garibaldi. The working classes of Liverpool are to have the first opportunity of purchasing this gift, and 250*l*. has been already subscribed; but if they fail to take up the matter promptly, there are 30 or 40 gentlemen in town who would readily undertake to subscribe or rafse the requisite sum for the purchase of the yacht, her owner being prepared to head the list of subscriptions.—On Monday morning the Confederate war steamer Georgia, Capt. Evans, arrived in the Mersey and anchored opposite the landing stages. She has a black hull and funnel, mounts six guns, and is manned by 60 men. She is understood to be under the actual command of Lieutenant Maury, a well-known officer in the Confederate service. She was last at Bordeaux, but has captured no prizes. During the early part of the day she was an object of considerable interest, and there was no lack of speculation as to her object in visiting Liverpool, hints being even thrown out that it had something to do with Mr. Laird's steam rams, or with the transfer of her crew to the Alexandra. Later in the day it was learnt, on satisfactory authority, that she had been brought to Liverpool to be sold, the reason being that her performances as a cruiser are not satisfactory. Her powder and shell were removed according to the harbour regulations, and in the afternoon she was taken into one of the Birkenhead docks.

Lynn.—A few weeks since the papers announced the discovery of a rich vein of iron ore on the estate of the Prince of Wales at Sandringham, which the reported discoverer, Mr. James Wright, of this town, estimated as worth at least a million of money. A few days ago Mr. Wright received an official intimation that his Royal Highness had decided not to have the iron stone worked, as its working would entirely destroy the retirement afforded by the estate, and for which the amount of money that might be realised would not be an equivalent, that being one of the principal objects sought in purchasing Sandringham.

Maresfield.—On Saturday night last two slight shocks of earthquake were experienced in different parts of this parish. The first shock was distinctly felt between 11 and 12 o'clock, after most of the inhabitants had gone to bed, and it lasted for fully 12 or 15 seconds. The shock, which was accompanied by a peculiar kind of vibratory motion, and by the violent shaking of doors, windows, &c., was distinctly experienced in several houses in different parts of the parish. It appears to have been most perceptible at Forest Lodge, the residence of Captain Noble, where the inmates were thrown into a state of great alarm by the occurrence. At Sheffield Park, the seat of the Earl of Sheffield, the earthquake was felt by all the members of the family and household. The time recorded here is 6 minutes past 11. Among other indications the butler heard the mortar fall behind the wainscot, and a loose bar attached to the window shutter oscillated and struck the shutter. Lord Pevensey and Mr. Douglas Holroyd, who were at Lord Sheffield's, experienced the phenomenon. At Scaynes Hill the bells at the public-house distinctly vibrated, while at Fletching the family of Mr. Jones were disturbed by a rumbling noise. Similar sensations were experienced at Buckham Hill and at Chailey—more especially at two cottages at the latter place, where the shock seems to have been more severely felt. In the town of Lewes the shock was also distinctly felt. One lady while speaking to her servant in the kitchen, a few minutes after 11 o'clock, heard a sudden shaking of the front door and windows, the unusual violence of which greatly alarmed the servant girl. Thinking the shaking noise was occasioned by the return of her husband, who had been out upon some business, the servant went to look, and was surprised to find that no one had entered. As the house stands in close proximity to the railway, and is frequently shaken by the motion of passing trains, this violent agitation of the door and windows was at the time attributed to this cause. Shortly after midnight, when this lady had retired to rest, she states that she heard a peculiar and rushing sound, as if of hail or rain being forcibly driven against the windows, and was quite astonished the next morning to find that there was no appearance whatever of rain or hail having fallen during the night. In the parish of Fletching the shock was so distinctly felt that many persons supposed there must have been a serious explosion of gunpowder somewhere, and one gentleman says, "I was sitting reading on the ground-floor at the time, and my chair quite shook under me." The second shock, which was not so marked as the first, took place shortly after midnight. Neither of the shocks appears to have been attended with serious consequences of any kind.

Northampton.—This town was last week the scene of a Roman Catholic ceremony of considerable interest. Cardinal Wiseman and seven other bishops, assisted by a large number of priests from different parts of England, officiated at the opening of the new church erected from the designs of Mr. Pugin, in the Gothic style. Mass was celebrated by Bishop Amherst, and the sermon was preached by Cardinal Wiseman. There was a large attendance of the laity. In the procession in the church many members of the Dominican, Benedictine, and Franciscan orders, in their robes, took part. There was a déjeûner afterwards at the George Hotel, which was well attended. At the evening service the sermon was preached by Bishop Ullathorne, of Birmingham.

Norwich.—The following motion was submitted to the Board of Guardians of this city on the 14th inst.:—"That the Rev. E. A. Hillyard having identified himself with certain persons calling themselves monks, whom he has allowed to participate in the services of his church, no longer holds the confidence of this Board, and is called upon to resign his situation as chaplain to the Norwich Workhouse." It was stated by the Chairman of the Board that the Bishop of Norwich, as soon as he learnt what had been going on in the church of St. Lawrence, in which Mr. Hillyard officiates, had required from him an explanation of his conduct. Mr. Hillyard had asked for time to give an explanation. On the motion of Canon Heaviside, the further consideration of the question was, under the circumstances, adjourned. In the meantime the pauper children attending St. Lawrence schools are no longer to be permitted to attend the services conducted by Mr. Hillyard.

Radnor.—A discovery of considerable interest to antiquarians has been made in digging for the foundation of the memorial to the late Sir George Lewis, which is to be erected in this town. Soon after the workmen had commenced operations, solid walls of great thickness were discovered, and on going down to the depth of 12 feet the floors of rooms, dungeons, court-yards, and dark passages of various kinds were seen. In fact, much of the remains of Radnor Castle was thus unexpectedly brought to light, many of the moulded windows and arched doorways being apparently but little injured. Some of the windows, indeed, contain their original iron gratings. The moulded details of the remains date back as far as the 13th century, and are good specimens of the style of that period. On these discoveries being made, the Committee consulted the architect of the memorial, Mr. John Gibbs, of Oxford, and the unanimous opinion was that the remains should be preserved and a fresh site selected. The memorial will now therefore be erected near the foot of the Castle Hill, and at a point where the road diverges from the Kington Road, a spot similar to that on which stands the Martyrs' Memorial at Oxford. Altogether the change may be considered advantageous, as the traveller on either road will now be able to examine the details of the memorial without the trouble of ascending the hill. It is expected that the memorial will be inaugurated in October next.

Worcester.—The young man Walter Jones, who, as already stated in our Provincial news, had been apprehended on the charge of shooting a policeman named Drew and a young girl named Bull, was taken before the mayor and a full bench of magistrates a few days since, and examined on the charge of shooting with intent, and also of stealing the pistol with which he made the murderous attack. It appeared from the evidence that as early as half-past 8 o'clock on the morning of the outrage the prisoner entered the shop of Mr. Perrins, gunsmith, and stole a case containing a six-barrelled revolver, with which he got clear off, without being seen by any of the people in the house. He then repaired to the racecourse, where he met the girl Bull, and asked her to walk with him, which she refused to do, when he pointed the pistol at her side and fired. The girl escaped instant death by a miracle. It seems she had just stolen a piece of an iron ploughshare, and was resting it against her side, when the ball from the pistol passed through her hand, struck the iron, and then glanced off without doing further injury. An alarm was given, as already reported, and Policeman Drew, of the Worcester force, having captured the prisoner, was conveying him to the station, when he suddenly presented the pistol at the officer's head, and, pulling the trigger, the charge passed through his cheek. For several days he was in a precarious condition, but is now progressing favourably. The inquiry lasted a long time, and the court was crowded to the doors during the hearing. The magistrates committed him for trial. He was heavily handcuffed, having made more than one attempt to escape. Great sympathy is felt for the prisoner's family, who are highly respected in this city, where his father is one of the oldest medical practitioners.

YARMOUTH.—On the morning of the 27th inst., the bodies of a married woman named Elizabeth Grudgefield, aged 29, and her daughter, aged six years, were found in the Yare, near the icehouses of Messrs. Hewett, the fish merchants of this town. The bodies were lashed together by a rope, and it was evident that the woman had first tied the child to herself and had then jumped into the river. Her husband is a painter, and deceased led a very unhappy life through his neglect and cruelty. Her body was much bruised, and it was stated that on the previous evening she was beaten by women of bad character with whom her husband associated. At the inquest the evidence proved who the parties were that assaulted her, and proceedings were at once instituted against them. The jury found "That the deceased had destroyed her own life and that of her child while in an unsound state of mind;" and the Coroner addressed the husband in strong terms upon his cruel conduct. He was then taken into custody with two women and a man, all of whom were charged before the magistrates with assaulting the deceased. It was shown that the husband and the man held her clothes while the assault was committed. The magistrates sentenced one of the women to four months' imprisonment, with hard labour, the other to two months', the husband to three months and the man to one month.

YORK.—On the 31st of March a small farmer, named Bryan Terry, residing near Keighley, was tried at the Assizes, before Mr. Justice Byles, on the charge of having murdered his wife, by cutting her throat. He was found not guilty on the ground of insanity, and ordered to be confined during her Majesty's pleasure. He has since been in York Castle, the governor of which selected two other prisoners to be constantly with him. On Thursday forenoon Terry had seen some of his friends relative to signing a deed for the purpose of securing his property for the benefit of his children. Those friends were to see him again at 2 o'clock, but when they arrived at that hour he was dead. It appears that shortly before 12 o'clock, the deceased went into the day-room, where the cook brought the three men their dinners. The prisoner's companions lost sight of him for about a minute, and then found him hanging by the neck to the iron bar of the window, suspended by a pair of leather garters, which were buckled together. On being cut down he groaned once, and expired. The jury at the inquest found that deceased hung himself while in an unsound state of mind.

Ireland.

ARCHBISHOP CULLEN ON GARIBALDI AND IRELAND.—The month of May was ushered in by a pastoral from Dr. Cullen, which was read from all the altars in the diocess on Sunday morning. The reception given to Garibaldi in England was the first thing that occupied his attention, as a manifestation of the intense hatred which heresy and infidelity bear to the Pope. The Archbishop said:—

"An Italian adventurer, a man of no military genius, a man who was successful only when his opponents were bribed to submit to him, and whose career of rapine, perfidy, violence, and revolution was put an end to as soon as he encountered a handful of men faithful to their trust. Yet because this adventurer had proclaimed himself an enemy of the Pope, and had assailed the Catholic priesthood, and blasphemed the doctrines of the Catholic Church, and had apostatised from the faith of his baptism, hundreds of thousands of men and women went out to greet him as a hero, and the nobles and rulers of the land disgraced themselves by paying him honours almost divine. When the man who is the personification of every evil principle, and of everything dangerous to the Church and society, is thus treated in the empire under which we live, we have reason to apprehend great calamities and scourges, which can be averted only by prayer."

The Archbishop then proceeded to describe the oppressions and miseries endured by the Irish Roman Catholics. Nearly 3,000,000 have been forced to leave the land of their birth; trade and commerce are at the lowest ebb; great poverty prevails. "The Church Establishment, the greatest nuisance that ever afflicted or disgraced any nation, is still upheld." The tenants have no security for their improvements. The poor suffer greater hardships in the workhouse than convicts do in prison, so that poverty is punished as a crime. But as Moses defeated the Amalekites by prayer, so will the enemies of the Irish Roman Catholics be defeated by the same means—not by seditious societies or revolution. He concluded with a strong censure on the Fenians and other brotherhoods of that kind.

LOSS OF THE CITY OF NEW YORK.—The official inquiry into the loss of this vessel on Daunt's Rock, commenced in Cork on Friday and terminated on Monday. It resulted in the suspension of Captain Kennedy's certificate for eight months. Notice of appeal has been given.

LOSS OF THE GUNBOAT MAGPIE.—A court-martial was held last week on board the Hastings at Queenstown upon Lieut. Bell, the officer in command of the gunboat Magpie, when she went ashore on the coast of Clare. It appeared that the Magpie was going under steam and sail at about 11 knots an hour. Lieut. Bell left her in charge of the Quartermaster, with orders to call him if it came on thick, or if he did not feel confident of himself in sighting the Innisheen light. It afterwards did come on thick, but the Lieutenant was not called up until the boat struck. His defence was that the Quartermaster had disobeyed his orders. The Quartermaster on the other hand stated that he did not remember having received the orders in question. The highest testimony as to Lieut. Bell's character as a careful and skilful officer was adduced. The Court, after considerable deliberation, sentenced Lieut. Bell to be severely reprimanded; Quartermaster Harris to be reprimanded and deprived of his good conduct badges, and acquitted the other officers and men from all blame.

SUICIDE OF SIR THOMAS FITZGERALD.—On Wednesday last Sir Thomas Fitzgerald, Bart., of Golden Hills Tipperary, committed suicide by drowning in the river, Suir. He held a high position in the county, and was in the prime of life. He has left a widow and several children. At the inquest on Friday, the evidence showed that deceased had been in Dublin the greater part of the previous week, it is supposed with the object of making an arrangement with his creditors. He made a last effort to raise the amount of 300*l.*, for which an execution was in his house, but his solicitor failed to accomplish it, owing to the heavy liabilities under which he laboured. He went home by the train on Tuesday afternoon, having left a letter with his solicitor stating that he should shortly be no more, and indicating where his body would be found. He sent similar letters to other friends, requesting one of them to get his wife to break the sad news of his death to Lady Fitzgerald, and stating that his body would be found in the Suir at Pig Hole, where all the salmon are taken, near the whitethorn stump that was lately cut, concluding by saying, "The Lord have mercy on me and my poor family." His coachman said he drove the car himself on Tuesday from the station to his house. He drove carefully, but seemed angry, as if disappointed about something. The butler said his master reached his house at about half-past 12, and went up to Lady Fitzgerald's room. Ten minutes afterwards he returned and took some tea. When he had finished, and while the butler was removing the tea things, he went into his study, and afterwards went upstairs again. Shortly afterwards he unbarred the hall door and went out. He had taken no wine or spirits, and used never to take any. The servant, taking no notice of his going out, as he sometimes had occasion to do so, went to bed. After about an hour Lady Fitzgerald tapped at his door, and begged him to get up, as Sir Thomas had gone out and had not returned. The butler then went to the shrubbery, and not finding his master, Lady Fitzgerald became alarmed, and a second search with a lantern was made about the grounds in vain. At daylight the coachman was called, and when the search was about to be renewed, Lady Fitzgerald found a letter on a stand at the side of the bed from which it was evident that it was all over. The butler and coachman then went again to make a search, and found their master's hat and coat on the bank of the river, and 200 yards further down his body was found. The jury returned a verdict that deceased wilfully committed suicide by drowning, while labouring under temporary insanity. As a mark of respect and sympathy towards the family, all the shop windows in Golden have been closed since the sad occurrence. Sir Thomas Judkin Fitzgerald, Bart., was born in 1820; succeeded his father, who was lost on board the Nimrod steamer from Liverpool to Cork, in 1860; and married in 1845 Emma Maunsell, youngest daughter of the late Henry White, Esq., of Golden Hills, and New Ross, Tipperary.

MURDER IN LIMERICK.—Another murder has been perpetrated in the county of Limerick, the victim being John Bradshaw, a special bailiff. It appears that John Burke, of Kildaff, a man belonging to a very unpopular class of dealers in Ireland, retails flour and meal, giving credit to his customers, and charging very high prices. Among his debtors was a farmer, named Edward Dwyer, who owed 10*l.* for goods, and for this sum his brother Lawrence Dwyer was security. Burke proceeded against the latter for the recovery of the money, and obtained a decree for the amount at the Limerick Quarter Sessions. Bradshaw went on Monday to execute this decree, and seized a cow, which he was prevented from taking away. He returned again at 5 o'clock P.M., accompanied by the creditor and six other men. Believing that the cow was shut up in an out office, Bradshaw attempted to open the door, and while in the act he was shot through the keyhole, and fell dead without uttering a word. Information was immediately conveyed to the police, whose barrack was at New Pallas, about a quarter of a mile distant, whither the body of the murdered man was removed. A man named Patrick Dwyer, who was discovered on the premises, and another named Patrick Sexton, who was seen coming out of the house in which the shot was fired, and where a gun recently discharged was found, were both arrested on suspicion. They belong to the class of farm servants.

ATTEMPTED MURDER IN WESTMEATH.—An attempt was made on Saturday night to assassinate Mr. Torrens of Crooked Wood, within a few miles of Mullingar, county Westmeath. He was entering his house at 9 o'clock, when two shots were fired at him, but both missed. A pistol newly discharged was found behind a hedge near the door.

Law.

COURT OF COMMON PLEAS: The Yelverton Case.—Thelwall v. the Hon. Major Yelverton.—This was an appeal on behalf of the Hon. Major Yelverton for a rule to set aside the writ, summons and subsequent proceedings in this case. The plaintiff was a gentleman living at Hull, who sued to recover a sum of money for necessaries supplied to Mrs. Longworth-Yelverton. It had been decided in the Court of Probate, where the lady sued for a restitution of conjugal rights, that the major was not a domiciled Englishman, and upon this point it has been held that the Court had no jurisdiction. The writ in the action now before the Court was issued under the 18th section of the Common Law Procedure Act, 1852, a section which allowed a writ to be issued against a British subject residing out of the jurisdiction of the Court. There was an affidavit by a clerk to a firm of solicitors in Paris, that Major Yelverton was served with the writ of summons in Paris on the 2d January; but the present motion was made upon the grounds—that no cause of action arose within the jurisdiction of this Court, and that the affidavit of service of the writ was untrue. The Court granted the application for a rule.

COURT OF PROBATE.—The Oratory.—Sir J. Wilde on Saturday gave judgment in the suit brought by Mr. Smee to try the validity of a will made by his brother-in-law, Mr. Hutchins, who, having become a Roman Catholic, left his property to the Brompton Oratory. The judgment affirmed the validity of the will, and condemned Mr. Smee in the costs of the suit.

Miscellaneous.

DOCTORS AND PATIENTS.—Among the curious calculations that may be founded upon the Census returns there is one made by Dr. Farr. It is reckoned that for every day in a year there are constantly two persons ill in the year; and, so reckoning, the Census returns of 1851 and 1861 and the mortality returns of the intervening years give the following results:—In all England and Wales 47 persons constantly sick to one medical man, including under this last term not only physicians and general practitioners, but also their assistants and medical students as are above 20 years of age. In London the proportion is only 24 resident sick to one doctor; in the South-eastern counties 37, South-western 45, South-midland 49, West midland 54, Eastern 57, Northern 58, North-midland 59, Yorkshire, Monmouthshire and Wales 75, and in the North-western counties (Lancashire and Cheshire) as many as 80. The calculation shows one medical man to every 1,071 persons in England and Wales; but the numbers differ greatly in different parts of the kingdom that in London the medical men are one to every 514 persons, and in Monmouthshire and Wales only one to every 1,769. The profession does not appear to be increasing in number. The number in England under 40 years of age was 11,1[illegible] in 1851, and only 9,910 in 1861. With regard to the fortunes of this profession, the calendar of wills and administrations for 1858, which has been analysed, shows that 300 medical men died, leaving personal property in that year to the amount to survivors; and therefore the number who left [illegible] personal property cannot have been considerable. The average amount left by these 300 gentlemen was 8[illegible] 35 left less than 100*l.*; 127 left above 1000*l.*; [illegible] these left above 10,000*l.*—namely, 15 between 10,000 and 20,000*l.*, two between 20,000*l.* and 30,000*l.*, three between 50,000*l.* and 100,000*l.*

THE FOSSIL ELEPHANT OF MALTA.—More remains of this animal have been discovered by Dr. Leith Adams, F.G.S., in extensive excavations lately made by that gentleman among the cavern deposits and breccias near Crendi. One of the chief points of reference to the fossil elephant found in Malta is the small size of its teeth, which, coupled with other characteristics, leaves no doubt that it was not only distinct from any living or extinct species, but was, as regards dimensions, a pigmy compared with them. It is supposed not to have been larger than a lion. Such remains together with the bones and teeth of hippopotami, which of late years have been met with in great abundance in different parts of Malta and Gozo, seem to show that these islands are but fragments of what may at one time have been an extensive continent in all probability connected with either Europe or Africa or both. At all events, the physical geography of this portion of the Mediterranean must have changed much since the above-mentioned animals wandered over our islands. To those who take an interest in the wonderful discoveries made by geologists of late years, it is worthy of notice that teeth and bones of a living elephant of Africa, and another larger fossil species together with the hippopotamus, have been discovered by Baron Anca in the Palermo caves, thus showing that in all probability no less than three distinct descriptions of elephants and two species of hippopotami frequented an area embraced within the southern point of Sicily and Malta, and during the post-pliocene period, when we find the earliest traces of man's existence. None of the latter have yet been met with in Malta. But there is every probability that flint implements and such will turn up, as they have done in the Sicilian caves, more especially now that the attention of scientific inquirers has been earnestly directed to this interesting subject. Without the invaluable testimony afforded by the remains of the quadrupeds above mentioned, there are downcast fragments of the strata and faults along the shores of Malta, which testify to submergence of the land. Besides the subaqueous plateau, named Adventure Bank, uniting Sicily to Africa by a succession of ridges not more than 40 to 50 fathoms under water, point to the former contiguity of that island and the continent of Africa. So marked is the latter that Sir C. Lyell has asserted that Sicily might be re-united to Africa by movements of upheaval not greater than those which are already known to have taken place within the human period in Sardinia, where the bed of the sea has been elevated 300 feet since man inhabited that sland. Malta Times.

Obituary.

THE COUNTESS OF FALMOUTH died at her residence in Whitehall Gardens, on Sunday morning. She was the daughter of Mr. Henry Bankes, of Kingston Lacy, Dorset. She married, in 1810, the first Earl of Falmouth, by whom she had an only son, George Henry, who died in 1852.

THE DOWAGER LADY DUNSANY died on Saturday at her residence, 6, Chester Square, in her 84th year. She was eldest daughter of the 7th Lord Kinnaird by the daughter and heir of the late Mr. Griffin Ransom, the banker, and married, in 182?, the 14th Lord Dunsany, who died in 1848.

LIEUT.-GENERAL GEDDES, K.H., Colonel of the 27th Regiment, died on the 28th ult., at Edinburgh. He had been 60 years in the army, and for nearly 20 years had seen much active service. He served with the 27th Regiment in Calabria in 1806, at the capture of the Island of Procida in 1809, and in Sicily in 1810. He subsequently proceeded with his regiment to the Peninsula, and was present at the battles of the Nivelle, the Nive, Orthes, and Toulouse, where he received a severe wound, which broke the left thighbone near the hip joint. He afterwards served with the army of occupation in France. He received the war medal and four clasps for his services in the Peninsula, and in 1836 was made a knight of the Hanoverian Order. He went on half-pay in November, 1831, and was appointed colonel of the 27th (Inniskilling) Regiment of Foot in 1860.

CAPTAIN J. E. GORDON, R.N., died a few days since. He was one of the most determined of Mr. O'Connell's opponents in the House of Commons. He travelled through Ireland on the missionary principle of evangelising that country by aggressive movements; and during that tour attacked with great vigour O'Connell and the priests. His exertions in this direction attracted the notice of the Government, and Lord Liverpool, shortly before his death, sent for Captain Gordon for the purpose of consulting him as to the best mode of dealing with the Irish difficulty. In 1830, through the instrumentality of the Earl of Roden, he was returned to the House of Commons for the borough of Dundalk, and during the whole of that Parliament he devoted himself to the expos ures of O'Connell and his Roman Catholic supporters. He was a prominent speaker at polemical meetings, and was the originator of the Reformation Society and the Protestant Association. He was married to a daughter of the late Mr. Abel Smith, M.P. for Hertfordshire, and has left two sons, one an officer in the Artillery, now serving in Canada, the other a clergyman in the Church of England, now curate of Dr. Marsh, rector of Beddington.

M. MEYERBERR, the great composer, died in Paris on Sunday last, in his 70th year. His death was caused by a malady of the intestines, the first symptoms of which did not give rise to anticipations of a fatal result. Only a week since he was in sufficiently good health to make arrangements for a journey which he proposed to undertake. During nearly the whole period of his illness he preserved consciousness, but towards the end he became very weak, though free from pain. His daughters arrived from Baden in time to be with him at his death. In pursuance of the detailed instructions left by him as to the arrangements for his funeral, the body will remain exposed three days at Paris, and then will be conveyed to Berlin, his native city, by a route which he has prescribed. As a child M. Meyerbeer was extremely precocious, and his musical talent came to him so early, that when only seven years old he was celebrated; and at nine a German critic spoke of him as one of the best pianists of Berlin. Under less favourable circumstances he would doubtless have been prematurely brought before the public as a prodigy, to contradict, perhaps, in manhood the promises of his youth. But his father, James Beer, a Jewish banker, was very wealthy, and Giacomo Meyerbeer, as the composer afterwards called himself, Italianising his name, only appeared occasionally, principally at amateur concerts, and had plenty of opportunities afforded him for study. With what result he availed himself of them is known throughout the world. He did not, however, at once obtain a high position in music. His first opera, "Jephtha's Daughter," was represented at Munich in 1812, with but indifferent success, but the numerous works he afterwards produced, and which extended over nearly the whole range of musical composition, secured for him a wide reputation, and proved that his talents were of no common order. Of these productions the "Crociato in Egitto," produced in Venice in 1825, may be said to have laid the foundation of his European fame. In 1831 he produced his grand work, "Robert the Devil," and henceforth Meyerbeer was recognised as a master. The "Huguenots" followed in 1836, and the "Prophète," in 1849, both operas at once taking that commanding position on the lyric stage which they have ever since maintained. "L'Etoile du Nord," a work in a different style, but distinguished by the same charm of genius, followed in 1854, and the "Pardon de Ploermel" still more recently. It has long been known that the deceased composer had finished another work, "L'Africaine," and that his scrupulous, and perhaps fastidious anxiety to secure for it a satisfactory interpretation has alone kept it from the public. Its production may now, it is to be presumed, be looked for at no distant date.

MR. FRANK E. SMEDLEY died on Sunday afternoon at Grove Lodge, Regent's Park. He was the author of three novels—"Frank Fairleigh, or the Adventures of a Private Pupil," "Lewis Arundel," and "Harry Coverdale's Courtship," all of which had a wide popularity. His last work was a volume of humorous poetry, called "Mirth and Metre," written in conjunction with Mr. Edmund Yates. Mr. Smedley was in his 50th year, and died of apoplexy.

METROPOLITAN CATTLE MARKET.

MONDAY, May 2.

The number of Beasts is considerably larger than on Monday last, there is however a demand for them. The choicest descriptions realise late prices, but it is difficult to effect a clearance of second-rate qualities. Sheep are also more plentiful. Prices are not quite equal to those of Thursday, but about as on Monday last. Choice Lambs and Calves are selling about the same as of late. From Germany and Holland there are 1210 Beasts, 1980 Sheep, 208 Calves, and 70 Pigs; from Spain, 98 Beasts; from Scotland, 410; from Ireland, 90; and 3130 from Norfolk and Suffolk.

THURSDAY, May 5.

The supply of Beasts is large, and the demand by no means good. Monday's quotations are with difficulty realised, and a clearance cannot be effected. Sheep are also rather more plentiful, and trade very dull. Several remain unsold, although there is a disposition to take lower prices. Calves and Lambs are not selling quite so well as of late. From Germany and Holland there are 610 Beasts, 1590 Sheep, and 345 Calves; Milch Cows, 85.

MARK LANE.—MONDAY, May 2.

The supply of Wheat from Essex and Kent to this morning's market was small, and the greater part of the white Wheat was disposed of at an advance of 1s per qr. on the prices of this day se'nnight. The attendance was moderate, low qualities of Danube and Black Sea Wheat, and also American, must be quoted 1s. dearer, but no improvement could be realised on other descriptions, and only a limited amount of business was transacted. Barley being scarce brings last week's prices. Beans 1s. per qr. dearer. Peas unaltered in value. With a large arrival of Oats the trade was heavy, and to effect sales it was necessary to submit to a decline of 6d. per qr. For Flour there was a moderate inquiry at late rates.

FRIDAY, May 6

The Wheat trade this week has been firm, and in the majority of markets an improvement of 1s. per qr. has been exacted, more particularly in English Wheat. The business transacted however continued to be on quite a limited scale. It is deserving of attention that the importations of Wheat and Flour into the United Kingdom during the month of March last exceed those for the same month of 1863, notwithstanding our low and unremunerative prices. Business in Spring Corn has been steady without any quotable alteration in prices. Flour has been in moderate request, and in some markets a slight improvement in value has been established. Since Friday last 19 vessels have been reported off the coast. The floating trade has been firm but quiet; for Wheat higher prices are asked, which checked business until yesterday; then, however, several transactions took place, showing an improvement of 1s. to 1s. 6d. per qr.; Barley is in demand for the continent. Paris, May 5.—The Flour trade had improved a little, but closes quiet rather above the rates of this day week. The six marks for delivery this month are quoted equal to 34s. 3d. per 280 lbs. The present stock of Flour is estimated at 17,000 cwt. Wheat is difficult of sale, but unaltered in value. The arrivals of English Wheat and foreign Barley this week have been moderate, of all other grain small, but of barrel Flour good. The attendance was limited, as was also the demand for Wheat, and Monday's quotations, both of English and foreign, must remain unaltered. Barley, Beans, and Peas were unaltered in value. Oats were firm at Monday's prices.

The Furnishing of Bed Rooms.

HEAL and SON have observed for some time that it would be advantageous to their Customers to see a much larger selection of BED-ROOM FURNITURE than is usually displayed, and that to judge properly of the style and effect of the different descriptions of Furniture, it is necessary that each description should be placed in separate rooms. They have therefore erected large and additional Show Rooms, by which they are enabled not only to extend their show of Iron, Brass and Wood Bedsteads, and Bed Room Furniture, beyond what they believe has ever been attempted, but also to provide several small rooms for the purpose of keeping complete suites of Bed Room Furniture in the different styles.

Japanned Deal Goods may be seen in complete suites of five or six different colours, some of them light and ornamental, and others of a plainer description. Suites of Stained Deal Gothic Furniture, Polished Deal, Oak, and Walnut, are also set apart in separate rooms, so that customers are able to see the effect as it would appear in their own rooms. A Suite of very superior Gothic Oak Furniture will generally be kept in stock, and from time to time new and select Furniture in various woods will be added.

Bed Furnitures are fitted to the Bedsteads in large numbers, so that a complete assortment may be seen, and the effect of any particular pattern ascertained as it would appear on the Bedstead.

A very large stock of Bedding (Heal & Son's original trade) is placed on the Bedsteads.

The stock of Mahogany Goods for the better Bed Rooms, and Japanned Goods for plain and Servants' use, is very greatly increased. The entire Stock is arranged in eight rooms, six galleries (each 120 feet long), and two large ground floors, the whole forming as complete an assortment of Bed Room Furniture as they think can possibly be desired.

Every attention is paid to the manufacture of the Cabinet work, and they have just erected large Workshops on the premises for this purpose, that the manufacture may be under their own immediate care.

Their Bedding trade receives their constant and personal attention, every article being made on the premises.

They particularly call attention to their Patent Spring Mattress, the Sommier Elastique Portatif. It is portable, durable, and elastic, and lower in price than the old Spring Mattress.

News of the Week.

IN the House of Lords on Friday the LORD CHANCELLOR introduced a Bill to abolish the power of the County Court Judge to commit to prison in the event of his being satisfied of the inability of the debtor to pay, retaining however the power of imprisonment, in cases of fraud, false pretences, or breach of trust. On Monday, in answer to the Earl of CARNARVON, Earl RUSSELL stated that a suspension of arms for one month from the 12th of May had been agreed to, on condition that the blockade of the German ports should be raised. The Government of Denmark had preferred a simple suspension of arms to an armistice on the conditions demanded by Austria and Prussia. The Earl of CARNARVON, under these circumstances, withdrew the motion of which he had given notice, in reference to the Danish question. Lord CAMPBELL moved two resolutions to the effect that the correspondence with Russia on the affairs of Poland had not yet arrived at any satisfactory conclusion; and that the EMPEROR OF RUSSIA, having failed to comply with the conditions of the Treaty of Vienna, on which he acquired the sovereignty of Poland, the English Government was no longer bound by that Treaty. Earl RUSSELL opposed the resolutions, which were ultimately withdrawn. On Tuesday the Earl of ELLENBOROUGH moved the second reading of the Sentences of Death Bill. Earl GRANVILLE suggested the expediency of postponing legislation on the subject until the Royal Commission to be appointed on the address of the House of Commons had made their report. After a short discussion the Bill was withdrawn. On Thursday the Earl of ELLENBOROUGH called attention to several well authenticated cases of kidnapping of foreigners, which had taken place at New York for the purpose of filling the ranks of the Federal army, and asked whether any steps had been taken to obtain the release of those British subjects who had been entrapped into that service. Earl RUSSELL said he had no doubt that the high bounties offered by the Federal Government for recruits had induced unprincipled persons to practise a species of kidnapping. Lord LYONS had made repeated complaints on the subject to the Government at Washington, but no satisfactory answer had been given to his remonstrances. The Marquis of WESTMEATH moved for papers relating to the release of three persons who had been confined in the county gaol of Westmeath for agrarian offences, and who had been liberated after having undergone two-thirds only of their sentences. Earl GRANVILLE opposed the motion, but on the remonstrance of the Earl of DERBY agreed to produce the papers, on the understanding that it was not to be made a precedent.

In the Commons on Friday, in answer to Mr. D. GRIFFITH, Lord C. PAGET said that the Aurora frigate had been sent to the North Sea, and was now at Heligoland watching the movements of the Austrian squadron. Sir G. GREY explained, in answer to further questions, that his denial on Thursday night in regard to the departure of the Aurora, applied only to the Baltic. Mr. GRANT DUFF called attention to the report of the Public Schools Commission, and moved that the state of the higher school education in England was not satisfactory, and required the early attention of Her Majesty's Government. The CHANCELLOR of the EXCHEQUER opposed the motion, which was ultimately withdrawn. The Under-Secretaries Indemnity Bill passed through committee. The Local Government Supplemental Bill was read a third time and passed. Mr. SOMES moved for leave to bring in a Bill for restrictions on the sale of intoxicating liquors between the hours of 11 o'clock on Saturday night, and 6 o'clock on Monday morning. After some discussion, the motion was negatived on a division, by 123 to 87. On Monday Sir G. GREY informed the House that the Conference had that day agreed upon an armistice for a month, and that the Secretary for the Colonies had received a telegram from Heligoland, stating that an engagement had that day taken place between two Austrian frigates and three gunboats, and two Danish frigates and one corvette, and that the Austrian squadron had been defeated. These announcements were received with loud and protracted cheers. On the Order for going into Committee of Supply, Colonel NORTH moved an Address to the Queen, praying her to relieve the officers of Chelsea Hospital from the payment of rates and taxes charged upon them by a recent regulation for houses in that establishment occupied by them in the performance of their duties. The motion was opposed by Mr. PEEL, and was negatived on a division by 184 to 102. The House then went into Committee of Supply on the Army Estimates, and agreed to several votes. The Under Secretaries Indemnity Bill was read a third time and passed. The Naval Prize Acts Repeal Bill and the Naval Prize Bill were read a third time and passed. The Admiralty Lands and Works Bill and the Joint-Stock Companies (Foreign Countries) Bill passed through committee. The Partnership Law Amendment Bill was considered in Committee. On Tuesday Mr. WHITE moved the appointment of a select committee to inquire into the operation and incidence of our present fiscal system, with a view to secure a more equitable adjustment of the burden of Imperial taxation. The CHANCELLOR of the EXCHEQUER opposed the motion, which was ultimately withdrawn. Sir G. BOWYER obtained leave to bring in a Bill to appoint judicial committees in certain cases with the necessary powers. Sir J. JERVOISE moved an address to the Queen relative to treasure trove, and was speaking in support of his motion, when the House was counted out. On Wednesday, Mr. BAINES moved the second reading of the Borough Franchise Bill, the object of which was to reduce the qualification to 6*l*. Mr. CAVE moved the previous question. The CHANCELLOR of the EXCHEQUER supported the Bill, and laid it down as a principle that every man not incapacitated by certain disqualifications was morally entitled to come within the pale of the Constitution. He spoke in terms of the highest eulogium of the working classes, and said that Parliament ought to consider the claims put forward on their behalf to the possession of the franchise; and such consideration might be better entered upon at a moment like this, when there was an absence of all agitation, than when the doors of the House were besieged and its table groaning under petitions. Mr. WHITESIDE regretted the temporary absence of Lord PALMERSTON, who would certainly have opposed the Bill, and have replied effectively to the arguments of his own CHANCELLOR of the EXCHEQUER. He opposed the Bill on the ground that the influx of 700,000 men, of whom they could know nothing, into the different borough constituencies, would be a dangerous experiment, and that any measures on the subject ought to be propounded by the responsible Ministers of the Crown, acting through their chief. After some discussion the House divided, and the previous question was carried by 272 to 216. Mr. HEYGATE moved the second reading of the County Bridges Bill. Mr. HENLEY moved to defer the second reading for six months. After a short discussion, the motion for the second reading was withdrawn. On Thursday Sir G. GREY moved a resolution that a Select Committee be appointed to inquire into the practice of the Committee of Council on Education with respect to the Reports of her Majesty's Inspectors of Schools. Sir J. PAKINGTON moved as an amendment to add to the motion, "and further to inquire into the constitution of that Committee, and how far their mode of conducting the business of the department is consistent with the due control of Parliament over the annual education grants." On a division the amendment was negatived by 142 to 93. The resolution was then agreed to. The House then went into a Committee of Supply on the Civil Service Estimates, and agreed to several of the votes. Sir G. GREY obtained leave to bring in a Bill for amending the law relating to seats in the House of Commons by persons holding certain public offices.

At the meeting of the Conference on Monday, the Plenipotentiaries of the German Powers and Denmark consented to a suspension of hostilities for one month. While the Plenipotentiaries were employed in arranging the terms on which hostilities should be suspended, a naval engagement between the Austrian and Danish fleets was in progress at the mouth of the Elbe. In this engagement the Danes, although over-matched, were victorious. One of the Austrian frigates was set on fire, and the other, with the gun-boats, was compelled to retire to Heligoland, and seek the protection of British waters. Some of the Danish Ministers have since resigned on account of their dissatisfaction with the suspension of the blockade.

From the United States we learn that General BANKS lost in the late battles in Louisiana, besides killed and wounded, 4000 prisoners, 30 cannon, a great number of small arms, their train, and 1,000,000 dollars in greenbacks. The Federal ironclad Eastport, the most valuable in Admiral Porter's fleet, was also lost. The latest news from Vicksburg states that the Confederates will speedily attack General BANKS at Grand Ecore. No active operations by either of the armies in Virginia are likely to commence for some days. The Confederates are strengthening and extending their works on the Rapidan. The Confederate General FORREST is said to be moving towards Alabama, and Bishop POLK is marching to join him. President LINCOLN has accepted the offer made by the Governors of Wisconsin, Illinois, Indiana, Ohio, and Iowa, of the services of 100,000 volunteers for 100 days for fortification and frontier duty. The House of Representatives has passed a resolution increasing import duties 50 per cent. for 60 days.

PRESENTATION OF THE OXFORD DECLARATION.—On Thursday a large number of the clergy attended at Lambeth Palace to present to the Archbishop the declaration prepared by the committee appointed at the meeting held at Oxford, and which has since received the signatures of upwards of 11,000 of the clergy of England and Ireland. His Grace received the deputation in the library of the Palace. About 300 of the clergy were present. With his Grace there were the Bishops of St. Asaph, Bangor, Rochester, Gloucester, Carlisle, Moray and Ross; the chaplains to the Archbishop; the librarian; and the secretary. Archdeacon Clarke read the following address:—

"MOST REV. AND RIGHT REV. FATHERS IN GOD,

"We, the members of the committee appointed at a meeting held in Oxford to draw up a statement setting forth the clear and consistent teaching of the Church of England and Ireland on matters upon which such clearness and consistency of teaching have been gravely questioned, have now the honour to present to your lordships a declaration of firm belief that the Church maintains without reserve or qualification the Inspiration and Divine Authority of the whole Canonical Scriptures as not only containing but being the Word of God, and also teaches the eternal punishment of the wicked. My lords, we undertook the work entrusted to us under a sense of many and deep responsibilities; we were called upon to act with decision in matters of difficulty and importance which were heavily oppressing the minds of Churchmen, and did not issue the declaration till we had obtained the consent and sanction of a large number of the clergy of England and Ireland. We cannot draw our labours to a close without first of all expressing before your lordships and the clergy here assembled that we are heartily thankful to Almighty God because the task imposed upon us has been carried through to the end with perfect unanimity on our part, and because the weight of it has been greatly relieved by expressions of cordial assent and by hearty co-operation on the part of a large number of the clergy who have affixed to it their signatures. We can assure your lordships that, large as this number is, it by no means represents the whole of those who unswervingly hold the several articles of faith, the truth of which this declaration seeks to affirm. Beyond the public means of communication, we know through a large correspondence that there are, besides the number of names appended to the declaration, some thousands of the clergy whose faith it equally expresses. They assure us they were deterred from signing it, not by any doubt as to the faith of the Church of England on their own part, but by what is natural and legitimate consideration. Indeed, when we consider the novelty of the course which the necessity of the case suggested in order to reassure the lay members of our Church of the faith of their clergy, we have reason to be thankful to Almighty God for the great success with which He has been pleased to bless it. We trust that the declaration has had some force in removing the misgivings of many as to the authoritative teaching of the Church on matters of such vital moment to men's souls as the accepting or denying the inspiration of the Holy Scriptures, and also the eternity of the punishment pronounced upon the cursed. We further trust, that, as expressing the opinions of so large a body of the clergy, it will strengthen your lordships' hands in any future measure which you may devise for guarding the faith of the Church. As we commenced our work with humble prayer for Divine guidance, so we close it with fervent joy that we have been allowed to promote the glory of our Lord, and with thankfulness that the acceptance which this document has met with, affords an assurance that the Church of England can give to all her members throughout the length and breadth of the land a witness that the true faith of Christ, which is her life, is upheld in her by her Divine Lord, and that her clergy who bind themselves to it evince their obligation by a faithful, open, and unreserved acceptance of the doctrine of the Church as set forth in her creeds, articles, and other formularies

"(Signed) C. C. Clerke, D.D., Archdeacon of Oxford, chairman; R. L. Cotton, D.D., Provost of Worcester College; G. A. Denison, M.A., Archdeacon of Taunton; W. R. Fremantle, M.A., Rector of Claydon, secretary; F. K. Leighton, D.D., Warden of All Souls' College; J. C. Miller, D.D., St. Martin's, Birmingham; and E. B. Pusey, D.D., Regius Professor of Hebrew."

The declaration, of which the following is a copy, was next read:—

"We, the undersigned presbyters and deacons in holy orders of the Church of England and Ireland, hold it to be our bounden duty to the Church and to the souls of men to declare our firm belief that the Church of England and Ireland, in common with the whole Catholic Church, maintains, without reserve or qualification, the inspiration and Divine authority of the whole Canonical Scriptures as not only containing but being the Word of God; and further teaches, in the words of our blessed Lord, that the 'punishment' of the 'cursed,' equally with the 'life' of the 'righteous,' is everlasting."

The declaration and address were handed to his Grace by the Archdeacon, who stated that a more complete list of the signatures would shortly be presented. The Archbishop of Canterbury, in reply, said—Reverend and dear brethren: we, the bishops of the United Church of England and Ireland here present, accept this declaration as a renewed expression of your belief in those doctrines of the Church to which it refers. It is satisfactory to receive your assurance that there are some thousands of the clergy who, agreeing with you in the substance of the declaration, hesitated to sign it only by reason of its form or circumstances. This assurance strengthens our conviction that the clergy of our Church will never be disposed to propagate opinions which tend to subvert the fundamental doctrines of Christianity. We, for our parts, shall ever feel it to be our duty to maintain the authoritative teaching of the Church, humbly trusting that we may receive guidance from above, and be endowed with strength and wisdom to promote the glory of God and the welfare of His Church, through Jesus Christ our Lord. The proceedings were closed by the benediction of the Archbishop.

FRANCE.—The debate on the Budget was opened on Friday by M. Thiers, with a speech which his friends declare to have been one of the most brilliant ever delivered by him in the course of his long political career. The following is an abstract of his speech:—

"When the finances were in question, the representatives of the people were called upon to exercise the most important of their duties and the most incontestable of their privileges. They would, indeed, commit a grievous fault if, when such a duty was before them, they neglected to exercise a right which was undoubtedly theirs, and which no one thought for a moment of refusing them. He had applied himself to the study of the financial condition of the country, and he would treat it in a spirit of perfect sincerity, without favour or malice. In order to explain so difficult and complicated a subject, he had need of all the strength remaining to him, and also of all the attention of his colleagues. He would endeavour not to trespass on their patience, but it was absolutely necessary that they should be informed of the state of the finances. Previous to engaging in that dry but not sterile region of figures, he would present some general reflections necessarily connected with the subject. At all times a good direction of the finances was of the greatest importance. At present the spirit of order had made so much progress throughout the world that disorder, whenever it occurred, became intolerable. It was said formerly that war should provide the supplies for war; but if anybody at present practised that maxim he would raise the world against him. If anybody gave up the country in which the made war to the army, he would have not only that country against him, but the countries that were mere spectators of the contest. Neutral States were like seconds in a duel, who require as much generosity as courage from the combatants. At present these armies must be fed, if discipline and the submission of the countries occupied were to be maintained. This explained why the late wars in the Crimea and in Italy were so costly—indeed, more costly than any of the wars under the Empire. He desired that his country should be distinguished for its humanity as well as for its courage. In the present day it was peace which should maintain war. For that reason good management of the finances was the foundation of a good direction of war. No great respect was felt for Powers whose finances were involved, but the alliance of those whose finances were in good condition was sought for, and sometimes others became dependent on them. For that reason people asked how the coalition of 1814 lasted four years; it was regarded as a marvel, but the marvel was easily explained. There was a man in the camp of the coalesced Powers who had nothing in him of the magician, for he was the most sagacious of men—Lord Castlereagh. He dispelled all difficulties with one word. He opened or closed English subsidies. Indeed, it might be said that it was he who led the coalition to the gates of Paris. He would not speak of the close relation between the finances and a good public administration. Formerly people did not perceive the bad management of their finances until they fell under the weight. In modern times well-being and distress were felt more rapidly. The prudence and skill of Government were set up to auction on those great public markets called the Stock Exchange. Confidence rose or fell, and the prosperity of the public increased or diminished. It might, then, be asserted that, in treating the subject of finance, military power, political ascendancy, and the public prosperity of France were discussed. He would quit those generalities to enter into the subject, and he would forthwith explain his plan. He would first endeavour to state precisely the present state of the French budgets; he would seek their starting point and trace the course they had followed. He would examine the increase of those budgets, and afterwards explain by what means a condition might be attained which reason might avow without alarming the prudent. He would ask what was the true state of the budgets? Even that was difficult to ascertain, thanks to the care taken in somewhat disguising their amount. For example—a distinction had been made between the ordinary and extraordinary budget. He was never satisfied, however time-honoured the plan was, that a budget which was called extraordinary for 25 years should finish by being called an ordinary budget, and that by favour of this term 'extraordinary' certain expenses which might be contested and certain receipts of a very doubtful kind were allowed to pass. Cochin-Chinese and Mexican securities could not be so boldly presented in a budget not extraordinary. He would, nevertheless, admit the distinction, thanks to which the budget was cleared of from 100,000,000f. to 120,000,000f. But another distinction had been imagined, by which from 220 to 230 millions were placed under a particular head. A special budget had been imagined, composed of departmental expenses, which at all periods were annexed to the Ministry of the Interior, and communal expenses, which figured in the Department of Finance. He then went over the financial condition of France in periods anterior to the present, examined in all their parts the budgets of the present Government, and described the enormous increase they had undergone. He observed that all mystery as to the cause of that increase would disappear when the details were examined. If it were assented to that every three or four years France should embark in a great war, and if, after having carried on a great war of undoubted public interest, and before the country had time to breathe, or to recover a part of what it had spent, it again entered on another war less easily understood than that of the Crimea, and less national, but only for an idea, as a war for Poland would be, and certainly such as that of Italy, then, indeed, all was explained. If every four or five years a great war were entered upon, and at the same time little wars—little as to the number of men engaged, but considerable from the distance to which they were sent or the sums they cost,—then, indeed, yearly deficits and 300 millions added to the public debt were explained. If while those great and little wars were going on it was desired to add to what was called the splendour of Government increased salaries—not the small ones, but all—and at the same time to demolish cities, in order to rebuild them, then. indeed, all was explained. If when constituting the army, and having to choose between a costly organisation and a less costly one, the former was always preferred, then, indeed, all was explained. If to the indispensable expenses of the navy, such as those incurred in the transformation of ships, were added distant expeditions, and if France aspired to the honour of founding empires in remote countries and bestowing crowns. then, indeed, all was explained. If France resolved to incur necessary expenses, and at the same time expenses that were merely those of luxury, doubtful, or sometimes absolutely useless—urgent expenses as well as those which might be postponed—then, indeed, all was explained,—the 2300 millions, the 2500 millions, and all. Pursuing this train of argument he arrived at the army. He declared that when he heard the word 'disarm' it greatly afflicted him. To talk about disarming was to give Europe to understand that France was armed. He declared that France was the only Power in Europe on a peace footing with an army of 400,000 men. It was an unfortunate thing to say that France was in arms, for it was to inspire fear, and to expose her to be every day called upon to disarm. He could tell them who were in arms in Europe. It was Italy, with a view to Venetia—which was quite natural. It was Austria, on account of Venetia—quite natural also. Russia was in arms not only on account of Poland, but on account of the diplomacy directed against her for the last two years. Prussia was half armed. England was not armed, but in great works of fortification. France, and France only, was on a real peace footing, and he could prove it in ten minutes. It was constantly said that France had an army of 400,000 men. Now these 400,000 were certainly a peace establishment. There were 100,000 out of the territory. There would be as many even after the troops returned from Mexico; for Africa, although it has made great progress towards assimilating itself to France, would always require 70,000 men. France had troops in Italy, and must always have troops in her distant possessions; in a word she would always have 100,000 men out of her territory. At home they had 50,000, such as the gendarmes, veterans, &c. Deduct these from 300,000, and there remain only 250,000 troops of the line in the country. These 250,000 men were exhausted in the service of peace, and those 400,000 men, composing the total of their effective strength, were necessary to fill up the cadres. It may be said that there were too many of these; but with those they had, they could at most muster from 600,000 to 700,000 men, and before renouncing the possibility of such a war footing, a complete moral revolution should take place in Europe. That moral revolution was that Italy should no longer wish for Venice, and that Austria would be good enough to surrender it; that Russia should give up Poland, and that Poland should no longer think of rising in revolt; that nobody should long to dismember the Turkish empire, and that Prussia should not desire to annex to her territory, already so large, some States belonging to her dear confederates around her. Until that revolution came to pass, France would not renounce her filling up her cadres, if necessary, to the amount of from 600,000 to 700,000 men. The expenses of the army, therefore, could not soon be reduced; and, as for those of the navy, they must return from distant countries, the transformation of their matériel must be completed, before they could hope for a reduction in the expenses of that department." In conclusion he said—"I have heard many sincere and reasonable men say, 'What will you have? The country possesses such great activity that it must be constantly supplied both at home and abroad. When we have not Sebastopol or Milan to enter we must go to Pekin or Mexico.' That is very true. I admit that France has a genius of powerful activity, and that a strong aliment must be given to it. And when I look back two centuries and see what aliments Providence supplied, I am not surprised at the desire to procure more. Under Louis XIV. what sublime aliments were given to the national genius! Rocroy, Nerwinde, Almanza; at the same time as the Cid, Athalie, the Misanthrope, and Bossuet's sublime orations. In the 18th century there was not the same glory. France allowed the Great Frederick to fill the north of Europe with his victories, and consoled herself with musing over the regeneration of human society. She laboured to that end by her writers, and exulted in the glory of Buffon, Montesquieu, Voltaire, and Rousseau. Then came the Revolution, when France no longer pursued the work of regeneration by the pen, but by the swords of her generals. She herself was regenerated. Blood flowed where she passed, but civilisation followed her; and the world, while it detested our glory, was obliged to acknowledge our benefits. At last came peace. What aliment was then offered to our devouring genius? Liberty. (Loud approbation.) Here for 30 and odd years, at this tribune, and before I ascended it myself, I respectfully listened to the great minds of our age discussing the affairs of France and of the whole world. Men were impassioned for grand ideas and noble causes—for Greece and for Italy. In these passions and struggles there were illusions, but they were based on noble motives. The genius of France was ardently occupied. In 1851, in the interest of order, it was necessary to drop the curtain on the scene; it was requisite to occupy the country otherwise, and our Budget may tell you how much it costs to occupy the country otherwise than by liberty. But I hope that if the Emperor persists, as I have no doubt he will, in his noble policy of gradually restoring liberty, the issue will prove that liberty does not deserve all the evil said of it. And, even if it should, there is one reflection, which you have doubtless made—namely, that if liberty has all the demerits laid to its charge, there is no denying the great cost of finding a substitute for it." Loud cheers.) The debate was then adjourned.

In the sitting of Tuesday, M. Berryer reproached the members who had defended the policy of the Government for their retrospective strictures upon the Parliamentary system, and said that Revolution never cost so dear as the omnipotence of a single man. Among other services, the Restoration rendered that of relieving them of the latter system. M. Rouher here interrupted M. Berryer by saying that the Restoration was brought about by the foreigner, and fell under the contempt of the people. The President of the Chamber observed, that both systems had their faults and misfortunes, and that it was best to confine oneself to the present state of things. M. Berryer then continued his speech, and principally censured the want of good measures for the reduction of the public debt and the Mexican expedition. He spoke in favour of a peace policy, and demanded the reduction of the effective home force to 250,000 men, which would allow of order being restored to the finances, and would insure peace and liberty. M. Rouher replied, first, to M. Thiers, by showing the greatness of France at home and abroad. He proved to M. Thiers that he had committed the error of exaggeration, that there were errors in his figures, and that he was behind his age and unjust towards his Sovereign, "to whom," said M. Rouher, "we owe so many noble initiatives and so many benefits. Roads, ports, canals, and cities have been improved, military glory has been satisfied, public wealth has been increased, as well as the salaries of the working class, and all this, taken together, forms the statement of the present condition of France." He contended that peace was especially the work of Imperial France, and he hoped that upon that point MM. Thiers and Berryer would convince one another. He said:—

"Peace at present rests upon serious guarantees. I have pleasure in repeating, with M. Berryer, that peace is in the hand of France; but France will only open this hand when compelled to defend her honour or the inviolability of her frontiers. As regards the sad conflict in the north of Europe, we may now hope that a pacific solution will be effected. I cannot believe that the great Powers have met in London to obtain no result. I prefer to believe that M. Berryer has allowed himself to be carried away by the anticipations of a gloomy pessimism."

The peroration of the Minister's speech treated of the Mexican question, which he considered had a very reassuring aspect, and was fruitful in results. The case of M. Armand was heard by the Court of Appeal on Saturday. The Advocate-General proposed that the appeal should be rejected. After a deliberation, lasting 2½ hours, the decision of the Court of Aix was set aside. A commission has been appointed to discuss the question as to a union between the management of telegraphic lines and the Post-office. The Commission will also take into consideration the question of the results to which such an union might give rise. Official despatches from Algiers to the 6th inst. confirm the success obtained by General Martineau, and state that it produced unhoped-for results. The losses of the enemy were enormous. The steamer Florida has arrived at St. Nazaire from Vera Cruz.

SPAIN.—The estimates were voted on Tuesday night at an extraordinary sitting of the Cortes. The Council of Ministers on the same day approved the Bill regulating the right of public meeting introduced by the Minister of the Interior. In the sitting of the Cortes on Saturday, Signor Gobierno defended the system of censorship applied to the press. A prosecution has been instituted against the Novedades and Iberia for reporting the speeches made at the banquet. No decision has been come to by the Commission appointed to deliberate upon the Passive Debt. A total difference of opinion on the principal political questions exists between Senor Olozaga, Marshal Espartero, and General Prim. The different companies who had separately applied for concessions to enable them to establish credit institutions, based upon landed property, have effected a fusion.

PORTUGAL.—The Coimbra students, among whom some tumults lately occurred in consequence of the introduction of a new Ministerial decree, have left for Minho, the soldiers having refused to make common cause with them. The students are returning to Coimbra without further disturbances. The proposed railway to Algarves has been approved by the Cortes.

SWEDEN.—Fifteen Swedish and Norwegian men-of-war are to assemble off Gothenburg, on the 15th of May, under the command of Prince Oscar.

DENMARK.—On Monday the Austro-Prussian fleet, consisting of two frigates, the Schwarzenberg, of 50 guns, and the Radetzky, of 44 guns, and three gunboats, was proceeding to anchor in the river Elbe, when the Danish squadron, consisting of three frigates, viz., the Niels Juel, of 40 guns, and the Dagmar and Heimdal, of 16 guns each, was seen two miles east of Heligoland. The Austrian commander attacked the Danish fleet, but was thoroughly disabled. The Schwarzenberg was set on fire, her foremast and bowsprit shot away, all her boats destroyed, and her hull filled with cannon holes. There were 170 killed and wounded on the German side. The Danes had 53 wounded and only one killed, and their ships are uninjured. The Danes fought with much tactics. The Austrian squadron took refuge in the British port of Heligoland, and is now in Cuxhaven, and the Danes have left for Norway. The following details of the battle are given in the Times of yesterday:—

"On Saturday last, May 7, the Austrian frigates Schwarzenberg and Radetsky, in company of the Prussian gunboats Adler and Blitz, left their anchorage off Cuxhaven for a cruise in search of the Danish fleet. Captain Teggetoff, under whose orders the combined German flotilla is placed, is described by the English pilot who brought him up channel as a very smart fellow, and the crews as bent upon fighting. However, the Danish fleet was not to be found, and on Monday morning the flotilla returned to its anchorage at the mouth of the Elbe after a cruise of 48 hours. They had scarcely dropped anchor when a telegram reached the Austrian Consul at Cuxhaven, informing him that three Danish frigates were bearing down towards Heligoland. This intelligence was instantly forwarded to Captain Teggetoff, who gave orders to get up steam and put out to sea at once. The Schwarzenberg is a screw steam frigate, carrying 50 guns. Her crew amounted to 540 men on the morning of the engagement. Between decks she is fitted with heavy guns, mostly 60-pounders, her upper-deck guns being 24-pounders. Of these last, two fore and two aft are rifled, the rest smooth-bored. The Radetsky is also a screw steam frigate, carrying 30 guns, and is likewise fitted with two rifled 24-pounders on her upper deck, fore and aft. Her crew numbered 310 men. The Prussian gunboats Adler and Blitz, both cased with iron plates 2½ inches thick, carry four rifled guns each on the upper deck. A little before 2 P.M., the German flotilla came in sight of the Danish frigates, which showed every willingness to accept the offered battle. The Schwarzenberg opened the proceedings by firing three blank shots, which were unanswered by the Danes After this warning, Captain Teggetoff, taking the Schwarzenberg well in between the Danish frigates the Niels Juel and the Dagmar, handling his ship as Admiral Lyons was wont to do the Agamemnon, fired a double broadside against the enemy's ships on either side of him. Although somewhat taken aback by this daring bit of seamanship, the Danish frigates lost no time in returning the fire, and the engagement soon became general. One of the first shots fired by the Niels Juel struck the officer second in command of the Schwarzenberg full in the breast, and of course killed him on the spot. He was buried yesterday in the cemetery at Cuxhaven, a large concourse of persons attending. Shortly after, two shells struck the Schwarzenberg near the same spot, by one of the heavy guns which was served by 16 men. Out of the 16, five were killed on the spot, and nine wounded, only two getting off unscathed. This episode was shortly followed by a disaster which threatened the destruction of the ship. The sails were, of course furled, and, as ill-luck would have it, a shell forced its way into the canvas, and, bursting, set the whole rigging of the foremast in a blaze. The ship having her head to the wind, it became necessary to put her about, to prevent the flames communicating themselves to the mainmast. In this manner the Schwarzenberg was temporarily reduced to the use of her two aft rifled guns. While the foremast was still burning, a shell burst in the outer chamber of the powder-magazine, setting the timbers on fire, and creating a momentary panic among the crew. The flames, however, were at once extinguished, and the danger averted. To complete the discomfiture of the Schwarzenberg, her bowsprit was carried away by a round shot. During the course of the engagement the Schwarzenberg was struck 70 times by shot and shell, and once by chain shot, which is preserved on board. Her foremast is burnt down to a stump, and the side of the mainmast turned towards the flames is blistered all over from the heat. The actual loss on board the Schwarzenberg amounted to 31 killed, 44 severely wounded, and between 30 and 40 slightly wounded. Although nothing is known for certain of the Danish loss, it must have been considerable, as the Schwarzenberg in her disabled condition must have fallen into the enemy's hands. It seems the general opinion that officers and men behaved with great bravery and coolness, and the Emperor of Austria has already shown his sense of Captain Teggetoff's services by promoting him to the rank of admiral. While it fared in this manner with the Swarzenberg, the Radetzky did her best to draw off the attention of the Danish frigates, which showed considerable unwillingness to attend to other business, until they should have succeeded in completely disabling the Schwarzenberg. However, before the conclusion of the engagement, the Radetzky was struck by twenty-eight shot, mostly on her port side. A young naval cadet, who directed the fire of her two rifled cannon, on the quarter-deck, was severely wounded in the early part of the engagement, and died of his wounds yesterday morning at eleven. The shell which fractured the thigh of the young officer passed clean between the legs of a seaman, who was hauling back his gun to recharge it. In spite of his desperate wound, the brave young fellow cheered on his men, while he lay himself in agony on the deck. The gunners of the Radetzky showed great coolness throughout, and more than once recharged their guns with Danish balls, which fell on the deck. One shot entered an after chamber leading to the captain's cabin, and, curiously enough, mashed to atoms a portrait of Field-Marshal Radetsky, which was hanging on the walls. A second shot made great havoc with the furniture in the captain's cabin. A shell burst in the chamber where the ship's papers were kept, setting fire to them, and doing much irreparable mischief. The total loss of the Radetsky amounted to five killed and 31 wounded. The Adler and the Blitz, owing to the long range of their guns, sustained no loss, all the Danish shot falling short of their mark. The engagement, which commenced a few minutes before 2 P.M., was over by 4 P.M.

The assent of the Danish Plenipotentiaries to the raising of the blockade has caused a ministerial crisis at Copenhagen. The Ministers of Justice and of the Interior have resigned, and it is asserted that the Minister of War has also tendered his resignation. The Government has concluded a truce for one month, commencing from the 12th inst. The belligerents are to give notice of their intention to renew hostilities one week before its expiration. The allies will remain in possession of Jutland, and the Danes of Alsen. The allied forces are not to impose any further contributions in Jutland, nor to interfere in the civil government of that province. The Minister of Marine has published a notification raising the blockade of Prussian, Holstein, and Schleswig ports from the 12th inst.

The Danish Duchies.—A despatch from Copenhagen says that the fortified camp near Fredericia is being demolished by the allies. 2000 inhabitants of the environs of Kolding and Fredericia have been compelled by the enemy to assist in demolishing the fortifications. On the 5th inst. the Prussians commenced firing on the opposite shore of the Fiord. Trenches are being thrown to the east of the town. Independent of the war contribution imposed upon the towns of Jutland, Field-Marshal von Wrangel has imposed a requisition of 5¾ millions of rigsdalers upon landed property. The shops of the tradespeople at Horsens have been sacked, and the contents carried southwards. Similar proceedings have also taken place at Randers, where, in consequence of the refusal of the inhabitants to pay the imposed war contribution of 100,000 thalers, the horses, cattle, as well as some of the inhabitants, were carried off. At Viborg 50,000 thalers have been demanded of the inhabitants. Throughout the country the citizens are exhorting one another to show their patriotism by persevering in their system of refusals to pay the imposed war contributions. Most of the citizens seized as hostages in Jutland have been set at liberty, the war contribution having been paid. It is thought that the Jutland officials will be also liberated. The popular meeting summoned from all parts of the country took place at Rendsburg on Sunday. It was resolved that the people of Schleswig-Holstein shall firmly maintain their right to be separated from Denmark, and to establish a free Schleswig-Holstein under the rule of the legitimate Duke Frederick VIII. The meeting demanded that an opportunity should be granted to the lawful representatives of the country solemnly to demonstrate the rights of the people. "The people of Holstein," it was stated, "are determined to uphold their rights to the uttermost." A vote of thanks to the allied armies was passed by the meeting, and the wish was expressed that all persons capable of bearing arms should take part in any further struggle for liberty.

Hanover.—In the sitting of the Upper House on Tuesday a debate took place on the resolution of the Chamber of Deputies relative to the policy of Count Platen. The Minister of the Interior declined to give any explanations on the subject. The one-sided action of Hanover in the succession question in the Duchies was disapproved of by the House. The Ministry then read the explanation of Count Platen, which asserts that the reports of the British Envoy to Earl Russell were incomplete. The Minister stated that the reports in question did not contain Count Platen's defence of German rights and the expression of his conviction that the separation of the Duchies from Denmark was necessary. The debate was adjourned.

Frankfort.—A telegram from Vienna says that the Powers represented at the Conference have agreed to commence negotiations on Thursday for the conclusion of peace. The prospects are not unfavourable.

Prussia.—The Crown Princess of Prussia, on the invitation of the Crown Prince, left Potsdam on Wednesday night for Flensburg. Their Royal Highnesses will return to Berlin in a few days. Prince Alfred remained in Berlin until Wednesday morning, when he left for Weimar, on his way to Coburg and Darmstadt. The decision of the London Conference relative to the truce between the German and Danish belligerents has received the Royal sanction. A Royal decree has just been issued, based upon Article 63 of the Constitution, suspending for six months the extra navigation dues payable by foreign ships upon a higher scale than Prussian vessels. The semi-official journal of Saturday says:—

"The war contribution imposed by Field-Marshal Wrangel upon Jutland as compensation for German ships captured by the Danes, having been paid, the Conference will meet at their next sitting under more favourable circumstances. It now depends upon Denmark whether an armistice shall be concluded. At present the German great Powers can be satisfied with the proposals made by the neutral Powers, they having proposed a suspension of the blockade and the evacuation of Alsen by the Danes, as an equivalent for which the allied armies will withdraw from Jutland."

An invitation has been issued by a number of deputies, belonging chiefly to the extreme Conservative party headed by Count Arnim Boytzemburg, to sign an address to the King relative to the affairs of Schleswig and Holstein. The draught of the address to be signed contains the following passage:—

"We deem the separation of the German portion of Schleswig and the whole of Holstein from Denmark, and their union as a separate State either under their own Sovereign, efficaciously protected by a powerful German State, or else annexed as a province to the latter, to be the only solution which offers a corresponding return for the sacrifices already made, and at the same time promises to secure a lasting peace and the welfare of those concerned."

Austria.—Post-Captain Tegetthof, who commanded the Austrian squadron, has been appointed Vice-Admiral by the Emperor, in recognition of his brave exploit of Heligoland. Twenty-three millions of the new loan have been taken by the Anglo-Austrian Bank, Messrs. Baring Brothers, Wodianer and Sina, at 77 10. A second offer for 10 millions, at 76, made by the Crédit Anstalt, was declined. No other part of the loan has been taken.

Hungary.—All the deputies belonging to the party advocating a political union between Hungary and Transylvania who did not take part in the sittings of the last Transylvanian Diet have been re-elected.

Italy.—A Pontifical resolution authorises the issue of 2,500,000f. Consols, bearing interest at 5 per cent. The indisposition of the Pope has ceased. In the sitting of the Italian Chamber of Deputies on Saturday the debate on the question put by Signor Bargoni was renewed. Several deputies called upon the Government to prevent the public subscriptions of Peter's pence. This subject however was dropped; and the discussion on Signor Bargoni's question was closed by the Chamber declaring itself satisfied with the Ministerial statements. In the sitting of Wednesday a general debate took place on the state of foreign politics. Signori Laporta and Miceli questioned the Government relative to their foreign policy, and accused the Ministry of timidity. They also requested information respecting the relations between Italy and France and other Powers. It was impossible, they said, to develop the institutions and organize the finances of the country while the Pope, who protects brigandage, occupied Rome. The Abbé Passaglia, who spoke in the same sense, said that the Papacy would never yield, but would always be the active enemy of Italy as long as it was protected by a foreign force. Signor Macchi asked what had been the course taken by the Government in the matter of the Tunis insurrection. In the sitting of Wednesday, the Minister for Foreign Affairs stated that the principle of non-intervention formed the basis of the negotiations upon the Roman question. The Minister said that to the implacable warfare waged by Rome the Italian Government had always opposed moderation. The measures taken in concert with the French Government for the repression of brigandage had obtained real results, and after a period of diplomatic reserve the Italian Government had resumed negotiations, which are now being carried on. The Minister expressed his desire not to excite premature hopes or indiscreet impatience, but assured the House that there was nothing to justify the discouragement expressed by some members. He also protested against the accusation brought against the Government of vassalage towards France, and said, in conclusion, "Italy is upon excellent terms with France and England. She has entered the European bond, and must take into account the general condition of Europe."

Russia.—The Moniteur of Monday evening announces that General Kotzebue has gone on a tour of inspection to the Bessarabian frontier, where the Russian army is echelloned. The army, which is estimated at 100,000 men, is known to have lately received considerable reinforcements. The Russian Government has prohibited the exportation of horses from the southern provinces of the empire.

Poland.—Intelligence from Opatow states that six innocent young Poles, who were walking in the streets of that town, were arrested and hanged on the same gallows without trial.

The Principalities.—Prince Couza has returned to Bucharest. Popular manifestations took place in his honour on Monday evening.

Circassia.—The whole of the independent Circassian nation have been driven from their country by the Russians, and are taking refuge in multitudes on the Turkish shores of the Black Sea. They are suffering so dreadfully from disease and privations that out of 600 during a voyage of four days only 370 arrived at their destination. Women in childbirth are exposed to the inclemencies of a Black Sea voyage, without assistance or the bare necessaries of life, and the decks of the vessels are swarming with wounded and dying men.

Tunis.—Advices from Tunis to the 1st inst. announce that on that day the Bey withdrew the Constitution. The rebels insist upon the Ministers being brought to justice, and that guarantees be given to them against exaction. The Arab Bey who has been elected by the rebels is at Testour, 20 miles from Tunis, with an army estimated at 40,000 men. The attitude taken up by the insurrectionists is not hostile to foreigners. The French, English, and Italian squadrons, however, have detached ships to guard the coast. A rumour is current that the Italian Government intends to despatch a frigate with troops to Tunis to allay the fears of the numerous Italian inhabitants of that place. It is believed that similar steps will be taken by France and England.

Coast of Africa.—The King of Dahomey's troops have been repulsed by the Egbas, with a loss of 1000 killed, 1000 wounded, and 2000 prisoners, including many of his Amazons.

India.—The Bombay mail has arrived with further particulars of the Indian budget. That document exhibits a very favourable state of the finances and prospects of the country; but the proposed advance in the tariff valuations of cotton piece goods, &c., is strongly condemned by the Bombay press. The successful completion of the Persian Gulf telegraph was the cause of much satisfaction. The Viceroy was expected to leave Calcutta on the 15th ult. and proceed to Delhi, and from thence go to Simla. There had been a very large increase in the quantity of land under cotton cultivation. Bala Rao, brother of the Nana Sahib, is dead. The Bheels are very troublesome in Indore; and on the Peshwar frontier the hill tribes are said to be intriguing and plotting. An American missionary has been murdered in the Punjaub.

United States.—No movement is expected to be made by General Grant for several days. General Burnside has visited Grant's head-quarters. The Confederates are withdrawing troops from all quarters to reinforce General Lee. Both armies are ready for a conflict, but their plans of campaign are still kept secret. Letters from Admiral Porter represent Banks's expedition as a disastrous failure. He lost 4000 prisoners, 30 guns, 1 first-class gun-boat, and 1,000,000 dollars in greenbacks, in a severe battle on the 8th at Sabine Cross roads with the whole of the Confederate army under Kirby Smith. General Banks retreated on the night of the 8th, joining the remainder of the army at Pleasant Hill. The Confederates renewed the attack on the 9th upon the whole of Banks's army at Pleasant Hill, but were repulsed with the loss of several guns. Banks continued his retreat on the 10th, 35 miles, to Natchitoches and Grand Ecore, where he is reorganising his army and fortifying the banks of the river. The latest advices state that the Confederates are marching to attack Grand Ecore, where Banks is strongly entrenched. Advices from New Orleans state that the Federal gun-boats have since succeeded in returning to Graud Ecore, furnishing Banks with ammunition, and that Banks has again advanced towards Shreveport. The Confederate General Hoke assaulted and captured Plymouth, North Carolina, on the 20th instant, with 1500 prisoners and 30 guns. It is reported that the Confederates killed 150 negro troops after they were captured. Hoke is supposed to be moving on Little Washington and Newbern. Two rams co-operate in Hoke's movement. Mobile despatches state that the Red River had fallen, leaving 40 gunboats and transports unable to move until the water rises. The Federals have ordered two French frigates to return from the James River. They obtained no tobacco. Commodore Parker, who has returned from a gunboat reconnaissance up the Rappahannock, states that the Confederates have replaced the torpedoes in that river and all the branches of the Chesapeake. General Forrest is reported to be moving towards Alabama, and Bishop Polk is marching to join him. General Longstreet is reported to have taken up a position on the left of Lee's army. The First Auditor of the Treasury has been ordered to leave Richmond for Montgomery. President Lincoln reviewed Burnside's army at Washington on the 25th ult. President Lincoln has accepted the offer made by the Governors of Wisconsin, Illinois, Indiana, Ohio, and Iowa of the services of 100,000 volunteers for 100 days, for fortification and frontier duty. The House of Representatives has passed a resolution increasing the import duties 50 per cent. for 60 days. It is reported that the Senate will modify this resolution by increasing the tariff temporarily 33 per cent., and exempting bonded goods. In the Senate the New York Legislature have laid on the table the Governor's recommendation that the interest of the State debt be paid in coin. Lieut. Danenhower (not Donahon) has been acquitted of the murder of Mr. Gray, of the British ship Saxon. Charges of personal corruption against Mr. Chase were renewed in the House of Representatives on the 29th amid much violence and recrimination. An investigation will be demanded by the Democratic leaders.

Mexico.—Advices from Mexico to the 1st ult. state that Governor Vidaurris has left Monterey with 2000 men and 27 guns. Juarez forces occupied Monterey. Almonte has gone to Vera Cruz to receive the Emperor Maximilian upon his arrival.

Parliament.

HOUSE OF LORDS.

Friday.—County Court Debtors.—The Lord Chancellor in introducing his Bill to limit actions and process for small debts, to amend the Acts relating to the County Courts, and to confer on such courts a limited jurisdiction in equity, stated that it would attempt to assimilate the case of the small debtor to that of the insolvent with greater liabilities by giving the judge power to call the creditors of a working man together to prove their debts. An order would then be made for the amount to be set apart by the debtor for their payment, the money to be paid into court and distributed by it. A debt contracted with the keeper of an alehouse for intoxicating liquors consumed on the premises would not be recoverable by process under this Act. The second part of the Bill invested the County Courts with a limited equitable jurisdiction in cases involving sums too small to bear the expense of an application to the Court of Chancery.—Lord Cranworth reserved his opinion of the Bill as a whole, but admitted it was most desirable to get rid of the system of imprisonment for debt by these Courts. The difficulty was that imprisonment was often the only means of compelling the payment. To abolish the power entirely they might have to make debts of very small amount debts of honour, not recoverable by legal process at all. The Bill was read a first time.

MONDAY.—The Danish Question.—The Earl of CARNARVON, in calling attention to his notice of motion on the state of Danish affairs, said he had given that notice in the belief that the Conference was practically at an end. He now understood that that body was still sitting, and that an armistice had been agreed upon by all parties. If that report were true he would trouble the House no further than to ask the Foreign Secretary what the facts really were, and the terms upon which the armistice was based.—Earl RUSSELL had great satisfaction in stating that the Conference had, at their meeting that day, agreed to a suspension of hostilities between Austria and Prussia on the one hand and Denmark on the other. The terms on which this arrangement was based were the uti possidetis—each Power to retain its own position both by sea and land and the blockade to be raised. The suspension of hostilities would be for one month, and the Conference would re-assemble on Thursday.—The Earl of DONOUGHMORE inquired if Jutland were to be evacuated.—Earl RUSSELL said that a proposition had been made in the Conference that Jutland should be evacuated by the Germans, and the Island of Alsen by the Danes, but the Danish Government appeared to prefer the simple suspension of arms.—The Earl of CARNARVON had not heard with any great satisfaction the terms which had been agreed to. The arrangement appeared to be a most one-sided one, for Germany gained more from it than could by any possibility accrue to Denmark, which had entitled herself to the sympathy of Europe, as much by her moderation as by the heroism and gallantry she had displayed throughout the contest.—Earl RUSSELL could only repeat that on one side an armistice was proposed, and on the other a suspension of hostilities. The latter was preferred by the Danes themselves.—In reply to the Earl of ELLENBOROUGH, Earl RUSSELL stated that the suspension of hostilities was to commence on the 12th inst. The Polish Question.—Lord CAMPBELL moved that in the opinion of the House the correspondence of the Government with the Cabinet of St. Petersburg on the Polish question had not yet reached a satisfactory conclusion, and that the Czar having failed to comply with the condition upon which, according to the Treaty of Vienna, he acquired his sovereignty in Poland, it was no longer binding upon the English Government to acknowledge it.—Earl RUSSELL opposed the motion, on the ground that, instead of increasing, it would tend to impair the authority of the House. The conditions of the Treaty of Vienna would not satisfy the Polish insurgents, who declared that nothing would satisfy them short of the restoration of their country to the position which it formerly held as a kingdom. He vindicated the course taken by Ministers on the Polish question, and said they would have been justly blameable if they had involved this country in a war with Russia on behalf of Poland. At the same time he was strongly of opinion that, if at a period of tranquillity the Emperor of Russia disregarded the conditions of the Treaty of Vienna, he could not continue to claim the right of sovereignty over Poland.—Earl GREY concurred with Lord Campbell in thinking that the correspondence had come to an unsatisfactory conclusion, and expressed his regret that the Foreign Secretary, if he were not prepared to take up arms in defence of Poland, should have entered into a correspondence which could not lead to any useful result. His interference, in fact, had only encouraged the Poles in a useless and hopeless resistance to overwhelming numbers. The motion was then withdrawn. The Customs and Inland Revenue Bill was read a second time; and the Naval and Victualling Stores Bill was read a third time and passed.

TUESDAY.—The Earl of ELLENBOROUGH, in moving the second reading of the Sentence of Death Bill, said that the present system threw too great a responsibility on one individual, and had recently caused great want of confidence on the part of the public. His object by the Bill was therefore to surround the Home Secretary with every security in the discharge of this serious part of his duty, and to revise, with a slight alteration affecting the personal share of the Sovereign, the practice which had prevailed up to the present reign; and he proposed that the issue of the warrant for carrying out a sentence of death should be decided upon by the Home Secretary, the Lord Chancellor, the Chief Justice, the First Lord of the Treasury, the President of the Council, and other members of the Cabinet whom it might be desirable to summon.—Earl GRANVILLE said he fully recognised the object which the noble earl had in view, but that he thought it desirable to postpone legislation on the subject until the Royal Commission to be appointed on the address of the House of Commons had made their report. It would be difficult to get the proposed committee of the Privy Council together at all times of the year, and it ought to have power to order a new trial in case it saw fit. The noble earl might himself be one of the commissioners; and he was sure that the Bill would receive their careful consideration. He trusted, therefore, that he would not press the measure further at present.—The Duke of ARGYLL thought the law itself required improvement. The dissatisfaction in the public mind would continue till some distinction was drawn between homicide of different degrees of guilt that were at present all classed alike as murder.—Lord REDESDALE apprehended that admitting these distinctions would lead to the French practice of requiring the jury to decide what were "extenuating circumstances."—The Earl of ELLENBOROUGH then withdrew the Bill.—The Common Law Procedure (Ireland) Act Amendment Bill was read a second time. The Naval and Victualling Stores Bill was read a third time and passed.—The Duke of BUCCLEUCH laid upon the table a Bill to remove certain disabilities under which Scottish Episcopalian Clergymen laboured in England.

THURSDAY.—Kidnapping in America.—Lord ELLENBOROUGH asked what steps would be taken to obtain the release of British subjects kidnapped in New York and other American cities, and compelled to serve as soldiers in the armies of the Federal States on false allegations that they had enlisted. He also asked what measures would be adopted to protect English subjects from the illegal practices by which men were reported to have been entrapped by the Federal recruiting agents. He read a letter from General Wistar, a Federal officer, confirming the public accounts of these proceedings. General Wistar distinctly stated that in many cases the men entrapped were drugged, brought to the regimental depots, and put in uniform before they recovered their consciousness.—Earl RUSSELL stated he had received reports of other cases of the same kind, in some of which Lord Lyons had interfered and obtained the release of the men. The manner in which these recruits were obtained was very discreditable to the Federal Government, and if they were not checked it would be necessary to make strong remonstrances on the subject.—The Registration of County Voters (Ireland) Bill, and the Common Law Procedure (Ireland) Act (1853) Amendment Bill passed through committee. The Local Government Supplemental Bill and the Under Secretaries Indemnity Bill were read a second time. The Promissory Notes and Bills of Exchange (Ireland) Bill and the Customs and Inland Revenue Bill were read a third time and passed. Release of Prisoners in Westmeath.—The Marquis of WESTMEATH moved an address for a copy of any memorial received by the Lord Lieutenant of Ireland or the Irish Government, praying for the release of three persons confined in the county gaol of Westmeath for agrarian offences. He complained that the prisoners had been released after they had undergone two thirds of their sentences only.—Earl GRANVILLE, in opposing the motion, said he believed that all the proceedings which were usual on such occasions were taken by the Lord Lieutenant, and that the judge who tried the case was consulted before the prisoners were set at liberty.—The Earl of DONOUGHMORE thought the public had a right to know the grounds which had induced the Lord Lieutenant to release the men. It was asserted that political influence had been brought to bear upon the Irish Government in the matter.—Earl GRANVILLE remarked that, if it was thought that the Government were blameable, a resolution to that effect should be submitted to the House.—The Earl of DERBY denied that any charge was made against the Government; but the House had a right to be made acquainted with the grounds upon which they had acted, especially when it was known that in this case the prisoners had been released without the local magistrates having been consulted, and, indeed, in opposition to their wishes.—Earl GRANVILLE said he had no objection to give the memorial and correspondence if it was understood that the case would not be made a precedent. The motion was then agreed to.

FRIDAY.—The Royal Assent was given by commission to several public and private Bills. The Danish War.—In answer to the Earl of ELLENBOROUGH, Earl RUSSELL said that the Conference have agreed that during the suspension of arms there should not be levied by the allied troops in Jutland or elsewhere, any contributions of war; and that, on the contrary, they will pay for the articles they require for the troops. The Conference did not lay down any rules with regard to the contributions previously imposed, but he believed the spirit of the article would be that the allied troops should cease to levy contributions of war. The Conference was anxious to stop an effusion of blood, but was also as anxious to stop those contributions of war; but having decided on the main points, they had left it to the naval and military commanders, and others interested, to settle the details between each other. He was not authorised to say more. The Regius Professorship of Greek (Oxford) Bill.—On the order of the day for going into Committee on this Bill, Lord LYTTELTON presented a petition from the Archdeacon of Bristol against the Bill. [Left speaking.]

HOUSE OF COMMONS.

FRIDAY.—The Channel Fleet and the Austrian Squadron.—Mr. D. GRIFFITH asked whether the Aurora frigate, under the command of Sir Leopold M'Clintock, had been sent to the North Sea in the direction of the Austrian squadron, and, if so, why a force more adequate to cope with any possible contingency that might arise had not been despatched at the same time.—Lord C. PAGET said that the Aurora had been sent to the North Sea in accordance with the uniform practice of this country, that, where a foreign squadron was cruising off a coast with which we had considerable commercial relations, we should despatch a vessel of war to look after British interests. For this purpose the Aurora was particularly adapted, and consequently she had been sent.—Sir J. PAKINGTON inquired whether the Austrian squadron had left the Downs, and what was its destination.—Lord C. PAGET said that the fleet had left the Downs, but that he was unable to state what was its destination.—Sir G. GREY repeated the statement he had made on a former evening, namely, that the Austrian Government had given the most distinct assurance that their only instructions to their admiral was that he should protect German shipping and prevent the blockade of the Elbe and the Weser.—Mr. GRIFFITH asked for some explanation of the circumstance that on the previous evening the Home Secretary had denied that the Aurora had sailed.—Sir G. GREY replied that he had stated the previous evening that there was no foundation for the announcement that the Aurora had gone to the Baltic.—Sir J. ELPHINSTONE invited Lord C. Paget to favour the House with some information as to the present whereabouts of the Aurora.—Lord C. PAGET said that the last news they had of the vessel was that she was at Heligoland, probably to ascertain the proceedings of the Austrian fleet.—Sir G. GREY announced that the House would adjourn on Friday next for the Whitsuntide Holidays, and reassemble on Thursday the 19th inst. Public Schools Commission.—On the order for going into Committee of Supply, Mr. G. DUFF called attention to the Public Schools Commission. He analysed the Report with reference to the descriptions it gave of the present state of things, which were very unsatisfactory, and to the recommendations of the Commissioners, which he discussed, adding suggestions of his own, with estimates of the relative value and importance of different branches of study. He noticed the subjects of discipline, of which the Commissioners reported more favourably than of the intellectual attainments of the scholars; of the buildings; of recreations in relation to health, and remarked the omission in the Report of any mention of the importance of some system of training masters. He concluded by moving that the state of the higher school education in England is not satisfactory, and calls for the early attention of Her Majesty's Government.—The CHANCELLOR of the EXCHEQUER, after remarking that the discussion of this subject so soon after the publication of the Report might be thought premature, paid a warm tribute to the laborious and valuable services of the Commissioners, to whom, he said, the Government were deeply indebted. With regard to the motion, he said that it was premature, at least, to ask the concurrence of the House in a resolution which really amounted to a condemnation of the Commissioners. He defended the teachers of our public schools, and took a comprehensive view of the instruction received in the Universities and public schools of England and Scotland, combining training power and teaching power, claiming for those institutions a debt of gratitude from the country. In noticing the improvements suggested in the branches of learning to be taught there, he dwelt upon the danger of overloading the mind so as to prevent its faculties from growing and thriving. It was the intention of the Government to take the Report into consideration, with a view to legislate upon the subject, and he pointed out the objects to which Parliamentary legislation should be directed.—Mr. WALPOLE approved of the suggestion of the Chancellor of the Exchequer, and said that the authorities of the schools were considering in what manner they could give effect to the recommendations of the Commissioners.—Sir S. NORTHCOTE, one of the Commissioners, stated, on behalf of his colleagues, that they had conducted the inquiry in a fair, friendly, and candid spirit, and that, while suggesting reforms, they had carefully avoided condemning the public school system of this country. He recommended that the subject should be referred to a Parliamentary committee, as he believed the House of Commons was incompetent to deal with it.—Sir H. BRUCE moved a resolution that it was not just to charge the Poor Rate in Ireland with the expenses connected with the registry of votors and births and deaths.—Sir R. PEEL opposed the motion, which was eventually withdrawn.—Sir J. HAY moved a resolution that the House would view with satisfaction the distribution of the full sum awarded by the Order in Council of 1854 for the retired officers in the Royal Marines, as it would tend to expedite the necessary promotion in that valuable corps.—Mr. W. WILLIAMS opposed the motion upon economical principles, and Lord C. PAGET upon the facts and merits of the case. The motion was withdrawn.—Mr. MACEVOY moved a resolution, pledging the House to adopt the recommendation of the select committee of 1858, respecting the claims of Ireland to a grant of the half cost of Medical Officers in Poor-Law Unions, as was now the practice in England and Scotland.—The motion was opposed by Sir R. PEEL, and negatived on a division by 73 to 58.—Sir H. VERNEY put a question respecting the Duchies of Schleswig and Holstein, and moved for copies of the answers received from the Governments to whom invitations were addressed to attend the Conference.—Mr. LAYARD declined to produce the papers.—Lord R. CECIL deprecated interpolating the ordinary business of the House with Danish discussions; and referring to the supposed German sympathies of Sir H. Verney, observed, amid the cheers of the House, that those members in it who wished the country to believe that there was a German party in Parliament, might be numbered on one's fingers.—Sir H. VERNEY said he did not sympathise with the Austrians and Prussians, but that he did sympathise with the German inhabitants of the Duchies.—Mr. NEWDEGATE expressed a hope that England which once claimed to be a great maritime Power, would not tamely allow the gallant Danish people to be eliminated from the map of nations. The motion was withdrawn, and the House went into committee of supply pro formâ. The Under Secretaries Indemnity Bill passed through committee. The Local Government Supplemental Bill was read a third time and passed.—Mr. SOMES moved for leave to bring in a Bill to restrict the Sale of Intoxicating Liquors between 11 o'clock on Saturday night and 6 o'clock on Monday morning. He stated that he proposed to allow the working classes from 1 to 2 o'clock for obtaining their "dinner beer," and from 8 to 9 o'clock for their "supper beer."—The motion was seconded by Mr. PEASE, and opposed by Mr. ROEBUCK, Sir W. JOLIFFE, Sir G. GREY, and Mr. PACKE.—Mr. CLAY and Mr. HORSFALL supported it.—On a division the motion was rejected by 123 to 87.

MONDAY.—The Conference.—Mr. HOPWOOD asked whether the Government would state what course they intended to take with regard to the Danish question before the Whitsuntide recess.—Sir G. GREY replied that he had already stated, in answer to questions of a similar nature, that a Conference was sitting, and that her Majesty's Government hoped it would succeed in carrying out the object for which it was convened. He had now, however, the gratification to add that an armistice for a month had been agreed to. (This announcement was received with general cheering).—Mr. D. GRIFFITH inquired whether the right hon. gentleman would state what were the terms of the armistice.—Sir G. GREY said he was unable to do so at that moment, but that there would be no difficulty in giving the House the fullest information on an early occasion. The Naval Battle in the North Sea.—Mr. B. OSBORNE inquired whether the Government had received any information of a collision having occurred in the North Sea off Heligoland, between the Austrian and Danish ships of war, and that the Austrians had got the worst of it.—Sir G. GREY said that the Secretary for the Colonies had received a telegram from the Governor of Heligoland to the effect that an engagement was then going on between two Austrian frigates and three gunboats and two Danish frigates and one corvette; and, since the House had met, an additional telegram had been received from the same source to the effect that the Danes had defeated the Austrian squadron, that one of the frigates of the latter was in flames, and that the remainder of the Austrian ships were making for Heligoland. (This announcement was received by both sides of the House with applause, in which the strangers in the galleries exhibited their satisfaction by clapping their hands.)—Mr. DISRAELI complained that the House had not been treated by the Government with the respect to which it was entitled, as the terms of the Conference had just been communicated to the other House of Parliament, although Sir George Grey had declared himself unable to impart any information on the subject.—Sir G. GREY observed that he had stated to the House all the information of which he was in possession.—Chelsea Hospital.—On the motion for going into committee of supply, Colonel NORTH moved an address to her Majesty, praying that she would be pleased to relieve the out-pensioners of Chelsea Hospital from the payment of all rates and taxes which had been charged upon them by a recent regulation, and the houses in that hospital occupied by them in the performance of their duties.—The motion was opposed by Mr. PEEL and the CHANCELLOR of the EXCHEQUER, and, on a division, was negatived by 184 to 102. The House then went into committee of supply on the Army Estimates. The vote of 750,870*l.* for works, buildings, and repairs at home and abroad, which formed the subject of discussion on the last supply night, was agreed to.—On the vote of 173,883*l.* for military education, Mr. MAGUIRE called attention to the constitution of the Royal Hibernian Military School, and protested against the manner in which a fair proportion of Roman Catholic children were excluded, and against the narrow and proselytising system adopted by the authorities of the establishment.—Mr. VANCE warned the House against giving way to the representations of Mr. Maguire without first consulting the governors of the school.—Colonel NORTH expressed his amazement at the statement made by Mr. Maguire, and, as an old commanding officer, bore testimony to the good conduct and unwavering gallantry of the Roman Catholic regiments in her Majesty's service.—The Marquis of HARTINGTON said that the school was under the control of governors appointed by the charter, and that the War Department had very little power in the matter. At the same time the House, which voted 12,000*l.* a year to the institution, had a perfect right to interfere, and motives of public policy dictated that the institution should not be conducted on an exclusive principle. He hoped, however, that the governors would see the necessity of remedying the evils complained of without Parliamentary interference. The vote was ultimately agreed to, as were the following:—88,345*l.* for surveys of the United Kingdom; and 223,344*l.* for 128,103*l.* for miscellaneous services; and 2,100,[illegible] administration of the army. Votes amounting to [illegible] for the non-effective services were likewise agreed to. The resolutions were ordered to be reported. The Under Secretaries Indemnity Bill was read a third time and passed. The Summary Procedure (Scotland) Bill passed the Committee on recommittal. The Pier and Harbour Orders Confirmation Bill was read a second time. On the order for going into committee upon the Collection of Taxes Bill, the CHANCELLOR of the EXCHEQUER explained certain alterations he proposed to introduce into the Bill, which was committed pro formâ. Other Bills were forwarded a stage.—The House having gone into Committee on the Partnership Law Amendment Bill, after a division upon the fourth clause, Mr. SCHOLEFIELD, who introduced the Bill, declared he should withdraw it. He was, however, prevailed upon to take time for consideration, and the Chairman was ordered to report progress.—Mr. PEEL moved for a Select Committee to inquire as to the most desirable arrangements to be made respecting the Patent Library and Museum.—Mr. COWPER opposed the motion, which, after a short discussion, it was carried on a division by 91 to [illegible].—Mr. PEEL obtained leave to bring in a Bill to explain certain provisions contained in the Drainage and Improvement of Land (Ireland) Act, 1863; a Bill to amend the Acts for the extension and promotion of Public Works in Ireland; a Bill to indemnify such persons in the United Kingdom as have omitted to qualify themselves for Offices and Employments, and to extend the time limited for those purposes respectively; and a Bill to enable her Majesty to grant a lease for 999 years of the building known as the College of Physicians, in Pall Mall East, and a Bill for amending and extending the Railways (Ireland) Act, 1851, and the Railways (Ireland) Act, 1860.—Mr. [illegible] obtained leave to bring in a Bill to amend the laws relating to the valuation of Rateable Property in Ireland

TUESDAY.—Hostilities in Ashantee.—Mr. CARDWELL stated, in reply to Sir J. HAY, that the operations against the King of Ashantee were in continuation of the hostilities of last year, and that every precaution had been adopted to supply the British force with everything necessary for the preservation of life during a campaign in such a country.—In reply to Mr. C. BERINCK, Mr. COWPER said that it was not his intention to lay any estimate on the table for the erection of a new National Gallery until the House should have decided whether it should or should not be built on the site of Burlington House. American Debt.—Mr. LAYARD, in reply to a question from Mr. B. COCHRANE, said that the Government were not in possession of any official information that the State of New York had resolved that the interest due to foreign bondholders should in future be paid in paper instead of bullion. Public Taxation.—Mr. WHITE moved for a select committee to inquire into the operation and incidence of our present fiscal system, and to consider and report, if any, and what, measures could be devised to secure a more equitable adjustment of the burden of imperial taxation. In bringing forward the subject he disavowed any party feeling, as he believed that a Committee indifferently chosen from hon. members at both sides of the House, to be presided over by Lord Stanley, might be able to indicate some plan by which the burdens of the people, more especially the working classes, might be diminished without reducing the efficiency of the public service.—The motion was seconded by Mr POLLARD URQUHART.—The CHANCELLOR of the EXCHEQUER objected to the motion chiefly upon three grounds: first, that an inquiry such as the hon. member invited the House to undertake would raise fallacious hopes of relief from taxation which could not be realised; secondly, because he was opposed to propositions which aimed at fundamental changes in our system of taxation incompatible with the ends of justice; and thirdly, because he believed that any such change would be met on the threshold with difficulties which would render it impracticable. He was not, however, prepared to hold to the doctrine of finality in matters of finance; but he recommended his hon. friend to withdraw his motion for the present, and, should he revive it hereafter, to narrow his field of inquiry so as to make it one with which a Select Committee of the House could deal.—Mr. O'REILLY supported the motion, urging that inquiry would at all events dispel many of the fallacies that now existed on the subject of finance, and would inspire the public with confidence in the present system of taxation.—Mr. W. EWART expressed himself in favour of a wider system of direct taxation. The motion was then by leave withdrawn.—Sir GEORGE BOWYER obtained leave to bring in a Bill to enable the Benchers of the Inns of Court to appoint judicial committees in certain cases, and to give the necessary powers to such committees.—Sir J. C. JERVOISE moved an address to her Majesty, praying that she would cause full information to be given to the House on the subject of Treasure Trove; and further, that she would cause such measures to be taken as might tend to make the enforcement of the rights of the Crown more uniform and more consistent with the legitimate claims of owners of property where objects of interest and value were discovered for which no owner could be found. He was speaking in support of the motion when the House was counted out at half-past 7 o'clock.

WEDNESDAY.—Mr. BAINES moved the second reading of the Borough Franchise Bill, the object of which was to extend the right of representation among the working classes, the great bulk of whom were wholly unrepresented in that House. He observed that the present time, a period of calm, was favourable for the introduction of such a measure, and though it was objected that it was not called for, he contended that there had been no real change in public opinion upon the subject, and that members who had given distinct pledges in favour of such an extension of the franchise were bound to redeem them. He urged on various grounds the claim of the working classes to an admission into the constituency, for which their progress in education and the improvement in their social habits, moral character, and material condition, showed they were qualified, and which might, therefore, be safely conceded to the most provident among them. He showed that there was nothing alarming in the effect of adopting a 6*l.* rental franchise as proposed by the Bill.—Mr. CAVE moved the previous question. He had no hostility to the principle that the working classes should have a share in the representation, but he assigned various reasons why the present was not a convenient period for bringing forward such a measure. He discussed its object at some length, suggesting the danger of giving so large an influence to one class as would overbalance that of others. He repeated what he had said in 1861, when a similar Bill was introduced—that certain objects belonged to certain periods, and that it was true policy not to meddle with our institutions except upon an emergency. He objected to a bit-by-bit reform, which might lead to a domestic revolution; to a measure not initiated by the Government, and for which, he believed, the House and the country were indisposed.—Mr. MARSH seconded the amendment.—The CHANCELLOR of the EXCHEQUER said he could not go the length of Mr. Baines with respect to the pledges given by Parliament on this subject of reform, but he was willing to admit that the question since 1851 had not been in a satisfactory condition, and that it was to the interest of the country that it should be speedily entertained and settled. He deprecated the language held by Mr Cave with reference to tampering with the constitution, because he did not believe that the institutions of the country would be endangered by such an extension of the franchise as that which Mr. Baines had indicated. He granted that if they were to reverse that proposition, and give a monopoly of power to the working classes, it might have the effect of setting class against class; but the experience of the past showed that the working classes were not disposed to act together as a class. On the contrary, their inclination was to follow their superiors in the social scale, and to put their confidence in those whose character and antecedents indicated that they were worthy of the trust. In his opinion every man not incapacitated by crime, or otherwise unfitted, was morally entitled to come within the pale of the constitution. To violent, sudden, and inconsiderate changes, however, he was opposed; but, as he considered that the Bill now under discussion would not transfer any unsafe measure of power to the unrepresented classes he would vote in favour of it.—Mr. WHITESIDE charged the Chancellor of the Exchequer with having made a speech of which the Premier would not have approved, and the object of which was to make political capital out of doors. The working classes had no substantial grievances to complain of, and although the Chancellor of the Exchequer had insinuated that agitation might bring political concessions, he believed the people themselves were too sensible to follow counsel which, if adopted, would tend to metropolise the country and Americanise the constitution.—Mr. W. E. FORSTER reminded the House that there was hardly a measure which had promoted the prosperity or elevated the condition of the working classes, which had not been opposed by the party to which Mr. Whiteside belonged. These classes knew too well what was due to their own self respect to get up riots in favour of reform; but they had not forgotten their constitutional rights, and he told hon gentlemen opposite that they were resolved, by all legitimate means, to obtain their fair share of political power.—Mr. NEWDEGATE objected to the measure, because it was theoretical, because it would increase the power of the cities and the boroughs, and because it would not remove the inferiority of representation which pressed upon the majority of those who resided beyond municipal limits.—Mr. BASS and Lord FERMOY supported the Bill.—Mr. S. BEAUMONT opposed it, and expressed his amazement that the most prominent member of the Government should have declared himself in favour of so crude and ill-timed a proposition.—Lord H. SCOTT opposed the Bill, which was supported by Mr. WATKIS, the new member for Stockport.—Mr. GREENAL opposed the Bill, because it would not settle the question, and because he considered it was unfair and unequal, and calculated to do more harm than good.—After a few words from Sir J. ELPHINSTONE, amid impatient calls for a division, the House divided, when the "previous question" was carried by 272 to 216. The Bill was therefore lost. The announcement of the numbers was hailed with loud cheers by the Opposition.—The County Bridges Bill was withdrawn. The Court of Justiciary (Scotland) Bill was read a third time and passed, as was the Naval Agency and Distribution Bill. Leave was given to bring in certain Bills.

THURSDAY.—Kertch Prize Money.—In reply to Mr. J. EWART, Mr. HUTT stated that he hoped that the Parliamentary grant to the troops concerned in the Kertch expedition would be distributed by the 1st of next month.—In answer to Mr. H. TRACY, Lord C. PAGET said that the "Iron Plate Committee" would cease to exist in a few days, but that it was his intention to place copies of their report in the library of the House, but not to put the country to the expense of printing it, unless it should be considered necessary for the public service.—Sir G. GREY, replying to a question from Mr. WHALLEY, observed that the orders to the police to prevent the holding of Public Meetings in the Parks were general, and extended to week days as well as Sundays, as it was the opinion of the Government that the holding of tumultuous meetings in places intended for the amusement and recreation of the public would defeat the object for which the parks were reserved. In reply to a question by Mr. NEWDEGATE on the subject of the revival of Diplomatic Relations with Brazil, and the claim of a Mr. Reeves, a British subject, to compensation in respect of an unjust law suit, Mr. LAYARD said, that the King of Portugal had undertaken to mediate between the Emperor of Brazil and her Majesty's Government. Inspectors of Schools.—Sir G. GREY moved that the orders of the day be postponed until after the notice of motion relative to reports of her Majesty's inspectors of schools had been disposed of, and also moved that the resolution of the House, agreed to on the 12th of April, condemnatory of the mutilation of the inspector's reports, be read. He then submitted a motion, "That a select committee be appointed to inquire into the practice of the Committee of Council on Education with respect to the reports of her Majesty's Inspectors of Schools." In bringing this motion forward he observed that he could not refrain from expressing his opinion that the House had acted upon a misapprehension in coming to its vote of the 12th of April. The late Vice-President of the Council of Education had offered explanations upon the subject, which shewed that he had only discharged the legitimate duties of his office, and it appeared to be the unanimous opinion of the House that no reflection rested on the right hon. gentleman. But it was the earnest and the very natural desire of the noble earl at the head of the Council, and of the officers of the department, that their conduct should undergo the most thorough investigation; hence the resolution which he had placed in the hands of the Speaker.—Sir J. PAKINGTON moved an addendum to the resolution of Sir George Grey—"and further to inquire into the constitution of that committee, and how far their mode of conducting the business of the department is consistent with the due control of Parliament over the annual education grants." He denied that his object was to embarrass or impute blame to the Government. His only motive was, by enlarging the terms of reference, to make the Educational Department more efficient and more useful.—Mr. H. A. BRUCE defended the Committee of Council, and contended that the amendment of Sir J. Pakington was altogether unnecessary, as the President and Vice-President of the Department were already responsible to Parliament for the discharge of their duties.—Lord R CECIL supported the addendum on the ground that it was desirable that the committee should undertake the inquiry untrammelled by the order of reference to which the Government purposed to confine them. He also read a statement from Mr. Morrell, late an inspector of schools, declaring that portions of his report had been struck out, not by his own hand, as alleged by the late Vice-President of the Council, but by that of the permanent secretary to the Council.—Mr. B. OSBORNE commented upon what he termed the false and calumnious charges of Lord R. Cecil on a previous occasion, and characterised both the motion and the addendum as unnecessary and ill-timed. For his own part, he would rather have seen a motion to rescind the resolution of the 12th of April in deference to which the Vice-President of the Council had resigned.—Mr. ADDERLEY saw no reason why the Government should not accept the addition as suggested by Sir J. Pakington, although he was quite ready to admit that the Committee of Council were not bound to print the pamphlets of every inspector of schools who might desire to see his particular opinions in print. On a division, the addendum of Sir John Pakington was negatived by 142 to 93. The original motion was then agreed to.—On the motion for going into committee of supply, Mr. A. SMITH made a long speech against the inordinate, and, in his opinion, unnecessary expenditure on account of the Civil Service, and complained that Sir J. Paxton, by counting out the House on Tuesday night, had prevented him from making the speech which he had prepared for the occasion.—Sir J PAXTON justified the "count," and referred, in vindication of his conduct, to the circumstance that, during the speech which Mr. Smith had just delivered, there were not more than 12 or 13 members in the House.—The House then went into committee of supply on the Civil Service Estimates: and among the subjects discussed was the propriety of erecting some shelter similar to that in the Bois de Boulogne, near Paris, for the use of female equestrians in Rotten-row.—The CHIEF COMMISSIONER of WORKS admitted that it would be desirable to afford the shelter suggested, and promised that if it could be supplied without disfiguring the park he would endeavour to provide it.—The frescoes in the Houses of Parliament were also brought under review by Mr. GREGORY, who suggested that Mr. Herbert and Mr. Maclise should receive some additional remuneration for their exertions in adorning the walls of the building.—Mr. B. OOCHRANE, Mr. BRIGHT, and other members, warmly advocated the claims of Mr Herbert, who, it was stated, had neglected the whole of his private practice in order that he might devote himself to his great picture in the House of Lords.—The CHANCELLOR of the EXCHEQUER said that it was necessary to consider not only the claims of particular painters, but the position in which the Government was placed with reference to works already executed, and all subsisting contracts. What they proposed was to endeavour to form a small Commission, which should go carefully into the whole question of contracts and performance, and advise the Government on the whole case. After a rather long discussion, the vote was agreed to.—The CHAIRMAN then was ordered to report progress.—Certain Bills were forwarded a stage.

FRIDAY.—The Danish Question.—In answer to Mr. R. LONG, Sir G. GREY said that Earl Russell had not thought it right on account of the exactions and oppressions which had taken place, to cease to maintain the Conference. He would have done very unwisely, he thought, if he had taken such a course. The Georgia.—Mr. T. BAINES called attention to the fact that an armed steamer was now in the port of Liverpool which, having been originally manned and equipped from British ports, had preyed upon the commerce of a friendly nation, and has never been in any port of the belligerent under whose flag she sails. He entered at considerable length into questions of international law.

Metropolis and its Vicinity.

THE SOUTH KENSINGTON MUSEUM.—On Thursday evening Lord Granville had the honour of entertaining their Royal Highnesses the Prince and Princess of Wales and the Duchess and Princess Mary of Cambridge at a soirée held in the new courts of the South Kensington Museum, which were brilliantly lighted up for the occasion. The whole fête, in its general features, resembled those great Assemblies which were given with such success at South Kensington during the time of the Exhibition, though, as might be expected, last evening the invitations were confined to a smaller number of visitors, and not more than about a thousand had the honour of receiving them. This, in courts of such extent as those which were thrown open to receive the company, seemed, and was, in fact, a small number, but the freedom of circulation afforded to all the guests, and the perfectly even atmosphere, neither too warm nor too cool, which prevailed throughout the evening, made the assembly contrast most favourably in point of comfort with the somewhat crowded gatherings which were held there in 1862. The guests began to arrive soon after nine, and, in compliance with the etiquette usual when invitations are issued to meet Royalty, had almost all assembled before the arrival of the Prince and Princess. Their Royal Highnesses came soon after 10 o'clock, and were received by Lord Granville, and conducted to the private room which had been fitted up for the use of the Royal party during the evening. In this, however, only a stay of a few minutes was made, and the Prince conducting the Princess Mary, while Lord Granville accompanied the Princess of Wales, went through the courts among the rest of the guests, either examining the exquisite collection of works of mediæval Italian art or conversing with those who had the honour of being intimately known to them. There was certainly a charming scene before the Royal party, for the lighting up of the new Italian courts brought the simple and beautiful manner in which decoration has been applied to develope as it were their principles of construction into full relief, and anything better toned or in more quiet good taste than their general effect it would be very difficult to design. Some of the courts were grouped about with stands of flowers, so that between the music, the lights, flowers, works of art, and, above all, the ever-moving groups of guests, the scene was most animated and attractive. Soon after midnight the Royal party retired to partake of supper, which was served in their private room, laid only for the guests who had previously received special invitations. Soon after 1 o'clock the Prince and Princess of Wales took their leave. Almost immediately after, the visitors, who included the leading members of both Houses, and some of the most distinguished names in science, literature, and art, hastened to follow the Royal example, and the assembly soon broke up.

GENERAL GARIBALDI.—A telegram received at Stafford House on Tuesday morning from the Duke of Sutherland states that General Garibaldi landed at Caprera at 2 o'clock on Monday. The Garibaldi subscription originated at Stafford House, is at an end. Mr. Seely has written to the daily papers to say that an intimation has been made from good authority that Garibaldi will decline to receive it. The idea is therefore dropped, and the money already paid is to be returned.

THE GARIBALDI MEETING ON PRIMROSE HILL.—A meeting to protest against the sudden departure of Garibaldi was held on Saturday night on Primrose Hill, and was attended by from 1000 to 1500 persons. Mr. E. Beales presided, and in his opening speech vindicated the right of the people to meet in the open air for the discussion of public matters. The question of Garibaldi's departure from England was then discussed, and Mr. Shaen made a statement of the reasons which had induced the General to give up his provincial engagements. He asserted that at a meeting of Lord Shaftesbury, Mr. Gladstone, Mr. Kinnaird, and Mr. Seely at Stafford House on Sunday, the 17th ult., Mr. Gladstone told Garibaldi that the Government was certainly desirous that he should leave. Resolutions were unanimously passed declaring the right of the people to meet in the parks, and protesting against the improper pressure which had been brought to bear upon Garibaldi to induce him to leave England. The meeting, which had been very orderly throughout, then quietly dispersed. On Tuesday the Chancellor of the Exchequer received a deputation from the Garibaldi Working Men's Committee, and entered fully into a discussion of the discrepancies that appeared between his version of what passed between him and Garibaldi as he gave it to the House of Commons, and as Mr. Shaen declared it at the meeting on Saturday. Mr. Shaen said that the authority for his statement was Mr. Cowen, of Newcastle, who told him he had it from Garibaldi himself. Mr. Gladstone denied in the most emphatic manner that he had used any language to Garibaldi that could by possibility be construed into a meaning that the Government wished Garibaldi to leave for political or for any reasons. He said that he was perfectly ignorant of all the circumstances under which Mr. Fergusson's letter was written. He only acted upon it in good faith, and as it was in accordance with his own feeling on the matter. Some further remarks having been made by Messrs. Taylor, Hartwell, and Beales as to the words "obliged to leave" in Garibaldi's letter to the City Committee, Mr. Gladstone said that he could not agree in their conclusions. He assured the deputation he had stated all he knew; he had nothing to conceal, and was happy to have had the opportunity of making this explanation. The deputation then retired, the interview having lasted one hour and a quarter.

BOILER EXPLOSION ON THE METROPOLITAN RAILWAY.—On Monday morning a boiler explosion occurred at the Bishop's Road Station of the Underground Railway. A train was on the point of starting for the city when the boiler burst, throwing the dome of the boiler, weighing 6 cwt., almost perpendicularly to a great height, whence it fell near the Dudley Arms, at the foot of the Harrow Road Bridge, a distance of about 200 yards from the station. A large portion of the roof of the station was blown away, and one of the approaches to the bridge which crosses from one platform to the other was entirely demolished. The plate-glass windows (half an inch thick) on both sides of the station were smashed to atoms, and the engine was reduced to a wreck. The driver, who was on the engine at the time, escaped without any injury, and the stoker received only a slight wound on the top of his head. In the carriage compartment next to the engine the shock was felt very slightly, but in the next compartment both the windows were blown in, and four passengers were so severely cut about the head and face with the glass that they were removed to the hospital, where, with one exception, they are doing well. At the moment when the explosion occurred the down train from Farringdon Street was just entering the station, and the concussion was so great as to smash some of the windows in the carriages of that train, and to burst the gas-holders on the roofs of the carriages—increasing the noise and confusion. The shock of the explosion was heard for a considerable distance. It is considered fortunate the explosion took place in the station; had it occurred in the tunnel the damage and loss of life must have been frightful.

THE PUBLIC HEALTH.—The Registrar-General's Weekly Return states that the number of deaths registered in London in the week that ended Saturday, May 7, were 1317. In the corresponding week of the 10 years 1854-63, the average number, corrected for increase of population, was 1311. The present return is therefore 6 above the average. During the week the births of 967 boys and 912 girls, in all 1879 children, were registered in London. In the 10 corresponding weeks of the years 1854-63 the average number was 2025.

HAYLE.—On the 3rd inst. seven gipsies, a mother and her six children—were charged before the Rev. Uriah Tonkin in this town, with having slept under tents, and were all committed to 21 days' imprisonment in the county gaol.

HUDDERSFIELD.—A frightful tragedy was enacted at the village of Bradley, within this township, on Saturday. Joseph Pogson, a clothworker, 64 years of age, who had retired upon a small sum of money which he had accumulated from his earnings, lived with his niece, to whom he had been attached from childhood, at the house of her husband, a man named Joseph Haigh, who was also a workman at the mill at which Pogson had formerly been employed. Haigh was regarded as a steady, religiously disposed man, but latterly he has become morose, and has indulged in fits of violence towards his wife. On Saturday morning he awoke his wife about 4 o'clock with the strange request that she would pray with him, and she complied with his request. While repeating the Lord's Prayer, however, he suddenly struck her a violent blow upon the face with his fist, and accused her of mocking him. She pacified him for the time being, but in about an hour his paroxysm of violence returned, and she fled from the house in her night-dress. Her intention was to alarm the neighbours, but instead of doing so she returned to the house. Immediately on her entering it her husband seized her, and her screams and those of the children in an adjoining room roused the house. The old man, Pogson, went to his room door in his night clothes to ascertain what was the matter. Haigh no sooner saw him on the landing than he relinquished his grasp of his wife, who again fled for safety into the street, and vented his violence upon Pogson. He threw him down, jumped and trampled upon his body, especially upon his head, causing his right jaw to protrude from his cheek, and fracturing his skull in a frightful manner. The old man never spoke or manifested consciousness afterwards, and did not survive his injuries three hours. Haigh was taken before the Huddersfield magistrates on Monday, and remanded to await the result of the inquest. It is said that he is insane.

LIVERPOOL.—A fatal accident occurred to the steamer Leinster Lass, of Drogheda, on Wednesday week. While on the voyage to this port the piston-rod got detached, and fell through the bottom of the vessel. The sea rushed in through the hole and filled the compartment. The passengers, in a panic, rushed to the boats, one of which, full of people, broke from the tackle and was swamped, and it is said that five emigrants were lost. The screw steamer Torch, on her way to Dublin, fortunately came up in time to tow the vessel into Holyhead.

THORNBURY.—The village of Rudgway, near this town, has been the scene of a brutal murder. The victim is a poor blind woman named Mary Carthey, but better known as Mary Curtis, whose husband has been dead for some time, and who, since her widowhood, has supported herself by basket-making. It was known to have been her custom every night to walk down the garden path leading from her cottage to shut the wicket, and her murderer must have availed himself of this opportunity to effect his purpose. On Tuesday morning the poor woman was found lying dead outside her house, there being marks of blows about her head, and her throat being cut. A stone hammer, a razor-case, and a stick were found near the spot, and have been identified as the property of a labourer named Gough, who has absconded, and who had previously threatened the deceased.

THE FUNERAL OF SIR THOMAS FITZGERALD.—The affliction of Lady Fitzgerald and her family has been aggravated by a barbarous outrage on the part of the peasantry. The popular feeling, it seems, did not go with the verdict of the jury, and the impression that prevailed among the lower classes was that the suicide of Sir Thomas Fitzgerald was deliberate and of malice prepense, with the avowed purpose of defrauding his creditors. Consequently, they thought that the verdict should have been simply that he was guilty of self-murder, and as such unworthy of Christian burial. This view is ascribed chiefly to an hereditary animosity to the family, dating from 1798, when the grandfather of the late baronet, by his atrocious cruelties to the insurgents, acquired the sobriquet of "the Flogger," by which he was long remembered in Tipperary. The Irish peasantry firmly believe in providential retribution in cases of oppression, and, if the wrongdoer escapes in this life, they have no doubt that his descendants will be punished in his stead. The history of this family seems to have confirmed the popular belief, for it has suffered several heavy calamities, and all have been regarded as divine judgments. The son of "the Flogger," who inherited his titles and estates, was drowned coming from Liverpool in the Nimrod. A young son of the suicide hanged himself some years ago from a nail stuck in the wall, to which he fastened a cord. According to the popular story, the boy was showing to his little sister and brother how his grandfather used to hang the rebels. Believing, however, that the verdict should have been felo-de-se, a mob of strangers assembled in the churchyard of Ballygriffin on the evening before the funeral, and filled the grave with stones. The funeral procession was as private as possible, the remains being followed only by a few relatives and friends. They were met by the mob at the gate, expressing in such menacing terms their determination that the corpse of the suicide should not enter consecrated ground that all remonstrances and entreaties were unavailing; and the coffin had to be borne back to the house. The Rev. Mr. Ryan, P.P., exerted himself to calm the excitement of the people; and next day he addressed them from the altar, strongly condemning their conduct. On Monday morning the interment took place, under the protection of a strong body of constabulary 150 in number. A guard remains upon the grave day and night. The funeral service was read by the rector of the parish. The Roman Catholic clergyman and his curate were present, and exhorted the people not to disturb the remains just committed to the ground.

THE CONFEDERATE VESSEL PAMPERO.—A final judgment was given last week in this case by Lord Ormidale at Edinburgh, in terms of a compromise agreed upon between the parties for a nominal conviction without penalty. Minutes were lodged by the builders, withdrawing from the suit, and by the owners, stating that they adhered to the statement that, so far as they were concerned, the counts in the information were unfounded in fact, having ascertained that Mr. G. T. Sinclair, one of the defenders, did attempt and endeavour to furnish the vessel with the intent stated in the third count; and being advised that the said vessel might thereupon be legally liable to seizure, even though her owners had not themselves infringed the statute, they had entered into the agreement set forth in the joint minute with the Crown. The joint minute for the Crown and the owners set forth — first, that the defenders, John Fleming and others, consent to a verdict being entered for the Crown without the intervention of a jury, on the 37th count of the information, but this on the footing that no liability is incurred by the said defenders to her Majesty's Advocate or to any of the officers of the Crown acting in their capacity of informers; and, second, that in the application of the said verdict no expenses shall be found due by either party in the suit. The Lord-Ordinary pronounced interlocutors — first allowing Messrs. Thomson, the builders, to withdraw from the case; second, allowing the minute for the defenders, Fleming and others; and, third, finding for the Crown on the 37th count in terms of the joint minute, the count in question being to the effect that the defenders attempted and endeavoured to furnish the said ship or vessel with intent and in order that such ship or vessel should be employed in the service of the Confederate States, with intent to cruise and commit hostilities against a certain foreign State with which her Majesty was not then at war—to wit, the republic of the United States; the third interlocutor further declaring that no penalty had been incurred by the defenders, and that no expenses were due by either party.

Court of Queen's Bench.—(Sittings in Banco, before the Lord Chief Justice, Justices Blackburn, Mellor, and Shee.)—The Case of the Confederates charged as Pirates: Ex parte Ternan and Others.—This was the case of the prisoners now in gaol at Liverpool charged with piracy, and arrested and detained by order of the Secretary of State, at the instance of the American Minister, for the purpose of being delivered up to the United States under the Act for enforcing our Extradition Treaty with that country. In November last an American schooner, the Gerity, lay at Matamoras, laden with a cargo of cotton, bound for New York. Six or more men—including the prisoners—took passages on board, and embarked on board as passengers. It was admitted that they went on board armed for the very purpose of seizing the vessel, and under the command of one Hogg, who assumed to be in the Confederate service, and professed to have papers from the Confederate Government, and under whose orders they acted. The vessel left Matamoras on the 16th November, and at half-past 12 on the night of the 17th the men thus embarked under his orders rose upon the master and crew and seized the ship, cast the master adrift in the Gulf of Mexico, and took the ship to Belize, in British Honduras, where it would appear they abandoned the ship and sold the cargo, part of which had found its way to Liverpool. In January last three of the men (two of whom were British subjects) were found to be at Liverpool, and on the information of the master of the schooner, who also happened to be there, Mr. Adams, the American Minister, made a requisition to Sir George Grey under the Extradition Act. Sir G. Grey thereupon issued his warrant to the magistrates of Liverpool, under which they issued their warrant to arrest the men, and they were accordingly so arrested, and were then charged with piracy, on the evidence mainly of the master of the ship seized, who distinctly stated that Hogg told him he had papers to justify what he did, and that he was a Major in the Confederate service, and that he (the master) believed him to be so, and he also stated that the other men acted under his orders, and that when they seized the ship they said they did so for the Confederates; and that Hogg spoke about Jefferson Davis. The statements of the prisoners were likewise given in evidence, and were to the effect that they were engaged by Major Hogg, of the Confederate service, for the purpose of seizing the ship, and that he showed them documents signed by a General Bee, and stating that they were authorised by Jefferson Davis to do so. Upon the evidence adduced before the magistrate it was submitted, on the part of the prisoners, that the act was not piracy, and not within the treaty. The magistrate (at the suggestion of Mr. Justice Willes, at the assizes) remanded the men from time to time, in order to allow of their making an application to this Court, the warrant for their committal distinctly stating that they were committed, not for the purpose of trial in this country, but of delivering up under the treaty. A rule nisi had been obtained, on behalf of the prisoners, for a habeas corpus, directed to the gaoler at Liverpool, for the purpose of bringing them up with a view to their discharge, and it was now moved to make that rule absolute. Cause was now shown against the rule on behalf of the American Minister. After a long discussion the judges retired to consider their decision, and on their return the Lord Chief Justice said—We are of opinion that the rule should be made absolute. We do not desire, at the present stage of the case, to express any decision as to the construction of the statute; but we think that in a matter of so much importance in an international point of view it is desirable that we should have before us all the materials on which to form our judgment on authoritative grounds. We therefore think it better that the rule for a habeas corpus should be made absolute. Mr. Adams, the American Minister, was present during the arguments. The rule will be argued next Term, which begins on the 23d inst. In Re Pater—The Bench and the Bar.—In this case Mr. Pater, a member of the bar, was defending a prisoner indicted for felony at the Middlesex Quarter Sessions before the deputy-assistant judge, Mr. Payne. In the course of the trial he was objecting to the course taken by the prosecuting counsel, when he was interrupted by the foreman of the jury, who said, "We know what all this is for: we know the object." On another occasion he was objecting to the course taken by the prosecuting counsel in pressing one of his own witnesses and examining him as if he was cross-examining him, pointing out that such pressure might induce the witness to carry his evidence further than the strict truth would warrant, when he was again interrupted by the foreman, who said he had no right to insinuate that a witness was not speaking the truth. After this, in addressing the jury on behalf of his client, Mr. Pater said, adverting to the previous interruptions, "I thank God there is more than one juryman to try the case, for if it rested with one, and that one the foreman, there could be no doubt what the result would be." The deputy judge upon that said it was an improper observation, and desired it to be retracted. Mr. Pater refused to do so, contending that he had a right to use the expression he had, and upon that the assistant-judge was appealed to, and he inflicted a fine of 10*l.* upon Mr. Pater for contempt of court. An order was subsequently drawn up imposing the fine, and Mr. Pater received an intimation from the Sheriff of Middlesex that it would be levied. The fine had not been estreated into the Court of Exchequer, or that court would have had an exclusive jurisdiction; but this was a fine imposed by a court of quarter sessions, which it appears is leviable under the statutes on the subject without being estreated into the Exchequer; and it was conceived that this court by virtue of its general superintendence over inferior courts had jurisdiction in the matter. It is a general rule that all courts of record can commit or impose fines for contempt, and adjudicate upon what is a contempt, without setting out the words deemed to be a contempt; and in the present instance, although it was understood that the words would be set out in the order with a view to raise the question, it was merely stated that Mr. Pater had uttered words which were a contempt of court, and had been fined for such contempt. A rule had been obtained on behalf of Mr. Pater for a certiorari to bring up any orders of the Court of Quarter Sessions at Middlesex imposing any fine upon, or affecting the applicant in the matter in question, in order that they might be quashed. Cause was shown on Monday against the rule. After a long argument the Lord Chief Justice delivered judgment that the rule for a certiorari to quash the order should be discharged, and that consequently the fine should stand. He said it was beyond a doubt that the Court of Quarter Sessions had inherent in it the power to punish contempt of Court, as being a court of record. No man could have a higher sense than he had of the importance of the rights and privileges of counsel in the discharge of their arduous and important duties. He quite agreed that they had not those privileges for themselves, but for the whole community, and he should be the last man in the world to limit or to restrain them. But, on the other hand, the Court was bound to protect the jurymen in the discharge of their duties, and if, looking to the whole of the circumstances, they saw evidence from which it might fairly be concluded that there was an intention to insult, they could not interpose to prevent the consequences from a desire to uphold the privileges of the Bar. Deeply, therefore, as he regretted the result, he was bound to say that the Court would not be justified in making the rule absolute to quash the order. Mr. Justice Blackburn, Mr. Justice Mellor, and Mr. Justice Shee concurred. The rule was consequently discharged. The result is that the fine will be levied. The House of Keys.—The authorities of the Isle of Man lately committed Mr. Browne, the editor of a newspaper in the Island, to prison for some contempt of their orders. Mr. Browne applied to the Court of Queen's Bench for a writ of habeas corpus, which was resisted on the technical ground that the Isle of Man was one of the foreign possessions of the Queen, and that, therefore, the Court of Queen's Bench had no jurisdiction in the island. The question was argued on Saturday, when the Court unanimously held that, though the island was not within the realm of England, it was not so much a foreign possession but that the Court had jurisdiction, and so the rule to bring up Mr. Browne before them was made absolute. At the same time the Lord Chief Justice expressed his opinion that Mr. Browne was illegally detained.

Court of Exchequer; The Steam Rams.—Sir G. Honyman applied to postpone the trial at bar, fixed in this case for the 27th inst, until the 6th of June, on the ground that a M. Bravay, who had intervened and claimed the rams, and was, of course, a party to the information filed by Her Majesty's Attorney-General, was a necessary witness for the defence, and could not possibly be in this country on the day appointed for the trial. M. Bravay had stood as a candidate during the recent elections in France, and had been elected, but for some cause or another his election had been annulled, and he was again a candidate for re-election, and, as the 27th would find him busily employed for that purpose in France, it was hoped the Court would grant the application.—The Attorney-General, after perusing the affidavit upon which the application was provided, said that as M. Bravay's absence might prove an impediment to his success he saw no objection to the 6th of June being fixed for the trial of the case.—Sir Hugh Cairns said he appeared for the other defendant, and offered no opposition to the application.—The Lord Chief Baron said that, as all seemed agreed upon the 6th of June, let that be the day.

LEADENHALL POULTRY MARKET.—May 13.

Trade is very quiet for the month of May. The supply is a full average. The good prices of the last fortnight have had their effect in bringing into market everything that had either youth or condition to recommend it. Plovers' eggs are this year sent in much smaller numbers, and it would seem that improved farming and draining is doing for these birds what it already has for many others. Leverets are scarce and in good demand. The supply of Dotterel is not up to the average.

Thursday, May 12.

Although the number of Beasts is not quite so large as on Thursday last, it is quite equal to the demand, and that day's quotations are not on the average exceeded. Sheep are rather more plentiful; at the commencement trade was brisk, but dull towards the close of the market, prices ranging about the same as on Monday last. Choice Calves and Lambs are in request at full rates. Our foreign supply consists of 660 Beasts, 1270 Sheep, and 576 Calves. Milch Cows, 75.

MARK LANE.—Monday, May 9.

The supply of Wheat from Essex and Kent to this morning's market was small, and disposed of at the extreme rates of last Monday. Foreign was rather more inquired after, but very full prices being insisted upon, only a limited business resulted. Barley and Beans brought last week's quotations. Peas were 1s. per qr. dearer. The Oat trade was steady at about the prices of this day se'nnight. For Flour there was a fair demand at fully late rates.

Friday, May 13

The weather since the 9th has been showery and unsettled. The suspension of hostilities agreed upon at the Conference on Monday, and consequent raising of the blockade in the Baltic, has had a depressing influence on the Wheat trade throughout the kingdom, and in the majority of markets the improvement established last week has been lost. No quotable alteration has taken place in the value of spring corn, but the prices of Barley rather inclined downwards, whilst those of Beans and Peas tended to improvement. Flour quotations remain without alteration. Since Friday last only 4 vessels have been reported off the coast. The floating trade has been quiet; Wheat buyers keep back, and no material alteration has taken place in the value of any kind of grain. Paris, May 12.—Flour is very difficult of sale, but holders continue to ask extreme rates. The six marks for delivery this month are quoted equal to 34s. 6d. per 280 lbs. The present stock in Flour is estimated at 15,700 cwt. Business in Wheat was limited, and in a few transactions rather lower prices have been accepted. The arrivals of English grain and foreign Wheat during the week have been small, of foreign Barley and Oats to a fair extent. The attendance at to-day's market was very limited, the business transacted in all descriptions of corn was small. Monday's quotations are nominally supported, but the tendency in the value of Wheat and Oats is downwards.

LIVERPOOL, May 10.—The announcement of a suspension of hostilities between the Danes and Germans has caused business to be very dull at our market to-day, and the advance of 2d. per cental on Wheat, and 6d. per barrel and sack on Flour, established on Friday last, has quite disappeared. Indian corn also has lost the recent improvement, and 28s. 6d. is again the best obtainable for prime mixed. Oats and Oatmeal are little inquired after. Peas and Beans are offered more freely, and must be quoted the turn lower A fine warm day, and the reaction consequent on the change in political affairs, both combine to depress our market, and it closes at its worst point.

FRIDAY, May 13.—The market was thinly attended. Wheat more in retail demand, at 2d. per cental decline. Flour 6d. lower and slow. Indian Corn dull. Beans, Oats, and Oatmeal unchanged.

DENNIS'S PATENT METALLIC HORTICULTURAL BUILDINGS are made from the best Wrought Iron, upon an entirely new principle. The combination of Iron and Glass under this patent is perfect: the possibility of fracture is prevented, and a permanently Water-tight Roof insured.

The leading practical advantages are extreme smallness of Framing, admitting a maximum of light and heat, great strength, durability, and perfect ventilation. They are speedily erected, partake of more desirable outline, and do not exceed the cost of a perishable wooden structure.
For Prospectus, &c., address T. H. P. DENNIS, Horticultural Builder, Hot-Water Engineer, &c., High Street, Chelmsford, Essex.

"INTERNATIONAL EXHIBITION, Class 31.
"Of the most recent inventions it should be said that Messrs. JONES & BOWEN'S Patent Worcestershire Range has attracted very special attention, and has been commended by the best authorities. A valuable peculiarity of their Ranges is the placing of the OVEN and ROASTER one above the other instead of side by side, and the ROASTER is constantly replenished with fresh air."

News of the Week.

In the House of Lords on Friday, in answer to the Earl of Ellenborough, Earl Russell said that the Conference had agreed that during the suspension of arms no contributions of war should be levied either in Jutland or elsewhere, and that all articles taken should be paid for. On the order for going into committee on the Regius Professorship of Greek (Oxford) Bill, the Earl of Derby said that the University did not object to endow the professorship because it was in the patronage of the Crown, but because they conscientiously objected to the opinions and doctrines of the person who now held it. He therefore suggested that the measure should be postponed to give more time for its consideration. The Lord Chancellor admitted that his proposal was not the best method of endowing the professorship, but it was the only one left open to him for remedying the injustice of the University. Under the circumstances he felt that the Crown was bound to endow the professorship as it was in its patronage. After some discussion the previous question was moved by Lord Redesdale, and carried upon a division by 55 to 25. Their lordships then adjourned until Monday, the 23d inst.

In the Commons on Friday, on the motion that the House at its rising should adjourn until Thursday for the Whitsuntide holidays, Mr. T. Baring called attention to the fact that an armed steamer was now in the port of Liverpool, which having been originally manned and equipped from British ports, had preyed upon the commerce of a friendly nation, and had never been in any port of the belligerent under whose flag she sailed; and asked if the admission of such vessels to British harbours was consistent with our international obligations, our professions of neutrality, and the preservation of British interests. The Attorney-General said, whether successfully or otherwise, her Majesty's Government had endeavoured to the best of their power at once to vindicate the laws of the country, and fulfil our obligations of a sincere and impartial neutrality. The motion for the adjournment to Thursday was then agreed to, and shortly afterwards the House was counted out. On Thursday, on the re-assembling of the House after the Whitsun recess, Mr. Layard stated, in answer to Mr. Whiteside, that one of the conditions of the suspension of hostilities was that forced contributions should be discontinued, and that the Austrian and Prussian troops should pay for whatever they required. He feared, however, that such contributions were still levied, though her Majesty's Government were in possession of no official information on the subject. The Union Assessment Committee Act Amendment Bill, the Railway Companies' Powers Bill and the Railways Construction Facilities Bill, passed through committee. The Summary Procedure (Scotland) Bill and the Admiralty Lands and Works Bill were read a third time and passed. Mr. Dodson obtained leave to bring in a Bill to amend the Registration of County Voters in England and Wales; and Sir G. Grey obtained leave to bring in a Bill to amend the Act for the better management of Highways in England and Wales.

Despatches from Copenhagen state that the Prussians have violated the conditions of the armistice by imposing and exacting contributions in Jutland after the 12th inst. They have also refused to pay for the necessaries of life during the armistice, and have put an embargo on Danish ships in the port of Veile. The Danish papers demand the resumption of the blockade as a reprisal for this breach of the armistice. In connection with these proceedings, we may mention that Count Manderstrom, the Swedish Minister for Foreign Affairs, has announced that his despatches containing secret instructions to General Wachtmeister, the Swedish Minister in London, were opened in their transmission through Germany.

A telegram from Vienna of Wednesday stated that in the sitting of the Conference on Thursday week, Austria and Prussia demanded a complete autonomy of the Duchies, their personal union with Denmark, material guarantees, and especially the maintenance of the point of view held by the Federal Diet on the succession question. This statement has since been contradicted by the official organ of the Saxon Government, which asserts that the Federal representative declared himself altogether averse to any connection between the Duchies and Denmark, and that Denmark rejected even the proposal of a personal union. The Austrian official journal of Monday proposes that the sittings of the Conference should be transferred to Brussels on account of the insults offered to Germany by the English Parliament and the press of London, which city it considers not to be neutral.

A great trial for poisoning, for the purpose of defrauding the insurance companies, has been in progress for some days in Paris. On Tuesday the prisoner, Count de la Pommerais, was found guilty, and condemned to death. He has since appealed to the Court of Cassation, and it is said that the jury have also asked for a commutation of the sentence.

From the United States we learn that the new campaign was opened on the 4th inst. On that day General Meade's army crossed the Rappahannock without opposition. He advanced on the 5th to Chancellorsville and Wilderness, where, after heavy skirmishing, in which both parties suffered severely, General Lee was found in force in the Federal front. It was understood that General Meade would make a general attack on the following morning. Heavy firing was heard on the morning of the 6th; but no details of the battle have yet been received.

By a telegram from Shanghae we learn that in the war between the Chinese Government and the Taepings the Imperialist troops have sustained a severe repulse at Kintang. Major Gordon was wounded in the engagement, and several of his officers were killed or taken prisoners.

Home News.

Departure of the Queen for Scotland.—The Queen and Royal family left Osborne on Monday for Windsor Castle, where they remained until Friday, when her Majesty took her departure for Balmoral, accompanied by Princesses Helena, Louisa, Beatrice, and Prince Leopold. The Royal party travelled from the Windsor Station on the Great Western Railway by a special train of 15 carriages, four of which were state saloons provided by the London and North-Western Railway Company. Her Majesty and Princess Helena occupied the Royal saloon. The Royal party arrived at the Perth station exactly at the appointed hour, 20 minutes before 9. The Royal party were received on the platform by the Lord Provost and magistrates of Perth, the Earl of Mansfield, the Earl of Wemyss, and other gentlemen. Breakfast was prepared in the boardroom of the Scottish Central directors, after partaking of which the Royal party resumed their journey about 17 minutes before 10. At Aboyne the train arrived at 1.32 p.m., the whole journey of nearly 600 miles by rail being performed in about 18 hours. On leaving Aboyne station, the Queen and party posted by road to Balmoral, where they arrived at 20 minutes past 3 on Saturday afternoon. THE EX-ROYAL FAMILY OF FRANCE. — The whole of the Orleans family have assembled at Claremont, for the approaching marriage of the Count de Paris to his cousin the Infanta Marie Isabella, eldest daughter of the Duke and Duchess de Montpensier. The ex-Queen Marie Amelie returned to Claremont on Saturday, from a short residence at St. Leonard's, in order to meet the Duke and Duchess de Montpensier and family, who arrived at Claremont on Monday evening, from Spain. The Duke de Nemours and the Prince and Princess de Joinville have returned to Claremont from a visit to Belgium on family affairs. The betrothal of the Count de Paris and the Infanta took place at the Palace of St. Telmo, in the early part of last month, and the marriage is fixed to take place at the Roman Catholic Chapel at Kingston, on the 31st inst., the anniversary of the marriage of the late Duke of Orleans with the Princess Helena of Mecklenburg-Schwerin. The Princess is the eldest of the two daughters, and the third of the five children of Prince Augustus of Saxe-Coburg Gotha, and the Princess Mary Clementine, daughter of the late King Louis Philippe.

THE CONFERENCE.—It is asserted that at the sitting of the Conference on Thursday week, Prussia and Austria declared that, in consequence of the events of the war, they considered themselves released from the engagements of the Treaties of 1851 and 1852. Russia and England maintain the principle of those treaties. On Tuesday the Plenipotentiaries met again at the official residence of the First Lord of the Treasury, and sat three hours, when it adjourned to Saturday, the 28th inst. All the members of the Conference were present.

THE CABINET.—A Cabinet Council was held on Saturday at Cambridge House. Summonses have been issued for another Council to be held to-day at Lord Palmerston's official residence in Downing Street.

THE CHANNEL SQUADRON. — Five of the ships belonging to the Channel squadron arrived in Plymouth Sound from the Downs on Friday afternoon. The Edgar, 71, bearing the flag of Rear-Admiral Dacres, took her station westward of the centre of the Admiralty anchorage, and there exchanged salutes with the Royal Adelaide, 26, flag of Port Admiral Sir C. H. Fremantle, K.C.B., the second in command; the Black Prince, 41, passed the flag, and anchored well to the eastward. She was followed by the Warrior, 40; Defence, 16; and the Prince Consort, 35. The ammunition and shell were discharged immediately from the iron ships Warrior and Defence, and they were to be docked on Saturday—the Warrior at Keyham, and the Defence at Devonport. The Black Prince will be placed in the dock at Devonport in which she was repaired last October, and the Prince Consort will be placed in dock at Keyham. The officers of the squadron do not expect to stay longer than eight or ten days at Plymouth. The screw steam frigate Galatea, 26, left Plymouth on Friday for Portland.

Foreign.

FRANCE.—In the sitting of the Corps Legislatif on Thursday, M. Rouher, replying to a previous speech of M. Favre, spoke at great length on the Danish question. He said:—

"He saw with grief the invasion of the Duchies. He could not discuss certain questions, because the Conference had met. He confined himself, therefore, to refuting the observations of M. Favre upon the conduct of France until the meeting of the Conference, and pointed out that the Treaty of 1852 did not oblige France to make war to defend the resolution of the Conference and the integrity of the Danish Monarchy. To uphold the treaty, England would have easy victories at sea, but France would be obliged to march upon the Rhine and traverse Germany to reach Denmark. If France could embark her treasure in such an enterprise, it is not to Denmark that we should have gone: we should rather have moved armies for other misfortunes and other sorrows. But the policy of the Government is not a policy of sentiment. When such questions present themselves, a Government devoted to the country does not engage in war before having everywhere exhausted all the combinations which might secure and maintain peace. We have respected the Treaty of 1852. We have accepted every means for re-establishing peace. We hope that the Conference will give peace. With regard to Poland, the question is a European one. We have suffered deeply by the events in Poland and Galicia, but we did not wish to disturb the peace of Europe. We understood that collective steps on the part of the Powers being no longer capable of realisation, France should no longer make vain protests at St. Petersburg, but should leave to God and to time the care of judging on which side lay the great iniquity and on which side legitimate grievances. With regard to the Congress, the Powers who had refused the Congress had inflicted upon themselves the greatest injury. France was not less glorious and powerful after the refusal of the Congress."

In the sitting on Saturday a discussion took place on the propriety and the legality of the publication of the Evening Moniteur. The publication was warmly condemned by M. Gueroult, and defended by M. Forçade la Roquette. A debate then took place on the law of public safety. M. Pelletan, the author of "La Nouvelle Babylone," attacked the law with so much power as to draw down the censures of the President of the Council of State, and when M. Pelletan persisted in his strictures on the Government he was interrupted by tremendous uproar, and a scene of great excitement ensued. The Corps Legislatif has since passed the navy estimates unanimously, although they reach the high figure of 126 millions, owing to the general desire to have France raised to the rank of a first-rate naval power. On Wednesday the Session was prolonged until May 25. A cause celèbre, which has created quite as much sensation as the great Lafarge case, commenced last week before the Court of Assizes of the Seine. The prisoner was a gentleman bearing one of the most honoured names in the French noblesse—Count de la Pommerais, who has for some time practised as a physician. He was arraigned on a double charge—First, for the murder by poison of Mdme. Pauw, a lady whom he attended professionally in appearance, but with whom he is alleged to have kept up a liaison; secondly, for the murder of his mother-in-law, Mdme. Dubizy. The cause assigned for the first murder was that he had insured Mdme. Pauw's life for a sum of 20,000*l.*; the motive of the poisoning of the mother-in-law was to appropriate her fortune. The facts, as stated in the indictment, as usual in a French acte d'accusation, partook of the character of a sensation novel. Madame Pauw was six years ago left a widow with three small children in a state of destitution. Count de la Pommerais had known and attended her husband. He called after his death, and was kind to the widow, and in a short time she became his mistress. This intrigue continued for two years. At the expiration of that time La Pommerais married a Mdlle. Dubizy, and broke off his intercourse with Madame Pauw. In June last he called upon her, and made a proposal for making her fortune and that of her children, by organising a fraud on six French and two English insurance companies. He proposed to insure her life, and then told her that he would give her some drug to cause temporary illness, and thus induce the companies to annul the life policies, and grant in exchange an annuity of 6000 francs a year, which she would share with him. Madame Pauw eagerly accepted the proposal. An insurance on her life was effected for the sum of 550,000 francs, payable at her death. The policies were transferable by endorsement. Madame Pauw was unable to pay the premium. Count de la Pommerais did so, taking care to have the policies transferred to himself, and having used his influence with the widow to make her sign deeds and make a will in his favour, so as to protect him from any action on the part of the next of kin, he induced her to feign illness, under pretence of facilitating the obtaining of an annuity, and in November last he administered to her digitalis to "deceive the physicians of the insurance companies." She suffered severely; Count de la Pommerais attended her; Dr. Gaudinot was also called in, but he received with implicit confidence the story told him by Madame Pauw, that she had fallen down stairs, and when he found that his prescriptions were not attended to he withdrew. Left to the Count de la Pommerais, Madame Pauw, who seems to the last to have believed she was only practising a trick to defraud the insurance companies, died. An inquiry was set on foot, and Count de la Pommerais was arrested. The acte d'accusation proceeded to state that he was well aware that the poison he administered (digitalis, or foxglove), leaves no trace behind it, and to detect the poison in the body most curious experiments were resorted to. The expectorations of the deceased and the residue of the contents of the digestive tube, were administered to animals, and they died with the same symptoms as she had manifested. It was then ascertained that Count de la Pommerais had purchased digitalis, and some of that poison was found in his possession when he was arrested. The case as regards the death of the mother-in-law, Mdme. Dubizy, was not so circumstantial. It seemed, however, that she died under circumstances very similar to those of Mdme. Pauw's decease; that her son-in-law had a great interest that she should die, in order to gain possession of her small fortune. However, more than two years having elapsed since her death, the analysis of her remains led to no conclusive results. The Procureur-General therefore abandoned the charge as regarded the poisoning of the mother-in-law, but so far as that of Madame de Pauw was concerned, he laid down that there was no doubt of her having been destroyed by the prisoner, and called on the jury not to be deterred by considerations of his social status from doing their duty to society. The trial concluded on Tuesday, when the jury found the prisoner guilty of poisoning Madame de Pauw. No mention of extenuating circumstances having been made, he was condemned to death. Count de la Pommerais has since appealed to the Court of Cassation against the sentence of death, and the jury have also asked for a commutation of the sentence. The Moniteur of Thursday says:—

"The journals, in circulating a rumour of an intended modification of the Ministry, comment upon a letter alleged to have been written by M. Rouher to the Emperor, pointing out the necessity of a reorganisation of the Government. Such a letter does not exist, and there is no question of any change in the Ministry."

M. Von Beust was expected to arrive in Paris yesterday. The Princess Clotilde has entered the seventh month of her pregnancy. Advices from Oran announce the defection of the greater part of Flittas, in the subdivision of Mostaganem. On the 14th inst. Colonel Lipasset, on his return from Tiaret, was attacked by a body of 2500 men. After a long combat the enemy was repulsed with heavy loss. The French had one killed and four wounded. The body of the officer of the Japanese Embassy who died at Marseilles was embalmed, and afterwards buried in the cemetery of St. Pierre, several of the members of the Embassy having gone from Paris to be present at the ceremony. After the coffin was placed in the grave and covered with earth, a small brazier half filled with burning charcoal was placed on the ground, and each of the mourners, after kneeling and saying a short prayer, threw a small quantity of incense on the fire. This was all the ceremony. The Ambassadors have sent 300f. to the Prince Imperial Asylum. A story is going the round of the papers that some days since, when making purchases at a jeweller's in the Rue de la Paix, the shopkeeper was so struck by a parasol carried by one of the Japanese that he proposed to accept it in payment for a certain quantity of coral ornaments selected for purchase by his visitors; the proposal was readily accepted, and it is said that half the parasols of the Embassy have since passed into the hands of the speculative jeweller.

SPAIN.—It is asserted that the Queen will this summer make a journey into the Basque Provinces. The Congress discussed the questions of Italy and Peru in its sitting on Thursday. The Epoca of Saturday says:—

"The Government is not indifferent to the complications which may arise from the Roman question. It is preparing the ground for common diplomatic action with Catholic Europe in the eventualities of the future."

A difference of opinion on the principal political questions exist between Senor Olozaga, Marshal Espartero, and General Prim. The different companies who had separately applied for concessions to enable them to establish credit institutions, based upon landed property, have effected a fusion. The Epoca of Wednesday states that Spain will appoint a representative to Mexico so soon as the Emperor Maximilian shall have notified to the Spanish Government his accession to the throne.

SWITZERLAND. — The Federal Diet will formally request from the Austrian Government the extradition of Langiewicz, now a prisoner at Josephstadt, as a Swiss citizen. The Japanese Embassy will arrive at Berne in August next.

SWEDEN.—Count Manderström, Minister for Foreign Affairs, has stated that on the 18th of April he sent secret instructions from Stockholm to General Wachtmeister, the Swedish Minister in London, and that those despatches were opened in Germany.

DENMARK.—The North Sea squadron arrived at Copenhagen on Sunday at noon, in an undamaged state, and was greatly cheered by the assembled spectators. The King went on board the ships, and was received with great enthusiasm by the sailors. The Danish loss in the engagement is officially announced to be 14 killed, and 54 wounded. A communication from the Austrian Rear-Admiral Tegetthoff denies the statement published in several journals that Her Majesty's ship Aurora manœuvred to separate the Austrian frigate Schwarzenberg from the allied squadron. The Aurora was at anchor off Heligoland until the close of the engagement.

THE DANISH DUCHIES.—The Prussian Commander at Veile has prohibited the departure of any ships from that port. The Dagbladet of Saturday says that notwithstanding the armistice, the Prussians continued pillaging on the 12th and 13th inst. in Aarhuus, and on the 12th inst. in Randers. On the 14th they continued their confiscation of goods and horses. Large quantities of the wire from the Government telegraph lines were also carried away. On the 13th the Prussian General Bomstedt, at Wiborg, imposed a contribution in kind. On the refusal of the local authorities to give the articles demanded without payment, he threatened to take them by armed force, and to throw the Committee of Provisions into prison. The Prussians have refused to pay for the necessaries of life during the armistice. The Dagblad demands the resumption of the blockade as a reprisal for the breach of the armistice. The whole of the magistracy of Flensburg have been removed. Herr Bremer, an advocate, who had been expelled from the country by the Danes, has been appointed burgomaster. The Duke of Augustenburg entered Altona on Sunday evening, and met with a most enthusiastic reception. It is stated that, in order to prevent his reception at places in Holstein having an official character, the Federal commissioners have instructed the authorities not to receive him. The Crown Princess of Prussia arrived at Hamburg on Friday morning. The Crown Prince arrived during the day. Their Royal Highnesses arrived at Lubeck on Sunday evening. On Monday they visited the most remarkable places in the town, and were expected to leave on Tuesday. The Federal Commissioners in Holstein also arrived at Lubeck on Sunday.

FRANKFORT.—The Ober Postamts Zeitung of Wednesday publishes a telegram from Vienna, stating that in the sitting of the Conference on the previous day, Austria and Prussia demanded a complete autonomy of the Duchies, their personal union with Denmark, material guarantees, and especially the maintenance of the point of view held by the Federal Diet on the succession question. It adds that this latter point induced Baron von Beust to give in his adhesion to the proposal of the German Plenipotentiaries, and that Russia was not averse to this proposition. The official Dresden Journal of Thursday, however, denies the truth of the Vienna telegram, and says:—

"According to authentic intelligence, the Federal representative declared himself altogether averse to any connection between the Duchies and Denmark. The latter, however, has rejected even the proposal of a personal union."

PRUSSIA.—The Crown Prince of Prussia has been appointed to the command of the Second Army Corps. Marshal von Wrangel has been raised to the rank of a Count. It is asserted, upon good authority, that Prince Frederick Charles of Prussia has been appointed Commander-in-Chief in the Duchies. A committee, under the presidency of Herr von der Heydt, met at Berlin on Wednesday for the purpose of establishing a company to construct a Schleswig-Holstein canal to connect the North Sea with the Baltic. An offer of the Government to defray the expenses of the preparatory works from the Exchequer was accepted. Privy Councillor Lentze has been intrusted with the execution of the undertaking. In a note addressed by Count von Bismark on the 14th inst. to Count Bernstorff, the Prussian Minister in London, the Prime Minister declares the Prussian Government to be completely free from all obligations that might be deduced from the Treaty of 1852, and to be justified in discussing any other combination that may be entirely independent of that treaty. He says:—

"It is a natural consequence of political relations that the solution of the question is of European importance, and that endeavours should be made to effect this conjointly with the other great Powers. This position was the only one recognised by the Government in the concluding sentence of its declaration of the 31st of January. The sole task of the Conference is conjointly to search for and deliberate upon the means whereby a solution of the question may be arrived at."

AUSTRIA.—The Oesterreichische Zeitung of Wednesday proposes that the sittings of the Conference should be transferred to Brussels, on account of the insults offered to Germany by the English Parliament and the press of London, which city it considers not to be neutral. The Nord denies the statement that the Emperors of Austria and Russia are about to meet. The Anglo-Austrian Bank has since agreed to take the remainder of the Austrian loan of 46½ millions for disposal on commission, and will make partial advances in the meantime to the Minister of Finance. Austria continues to concentrate troops in Transylvania. A detachment 30,000 strong has been assembled on the Moldavian frontier.

HUNGARY.—The Pesth Hirnok professes to have learned from reliable sources that the recent hard frosts have destroyed nine-tenths of the rape and four-tenths of the wheat sown in Hungary. The loss sustained is estimated at 40,000,000fl., but the accuracy of the estimate is questionable.

ITALY.—Letters from Rome to the 16th inst. state that the illness of the Pope has increased in an alarming degree. A secret Pontifical bull is said to have been issued, ordering a conclave composed only of the Cardinals present in Rome, for the election of a successor to Pius IX. before the death of the latter is known to the public. In the sitting of the Italian Chamber of Deputies on Friday Signor Alfieri and the Abbé Passaglia urged the Government to depart from their reserve and take resolute steps. Signor Laporta and Miceli demanded that the Chamber should declare the necessity for occupying Rome. Signor Musolino proposed to call upon the Romans to deliberate on their own destiny. Signor Chiaves desired the introduction of a law establishing electoral districts in the Pontifical territory, and deputing the Italian authorities on the frontier to carry out the electoral operations. He proclaimed the right of the Romans to elect deputies, and said that France could not oppose this action, since it was not contrary to the principle proclaimed by her of the defence of the Head of the Church. The Minister declared that the Government could not accept the various proposals, and the debate was adjourned. In the sitting of Saturday the President of the Council opposed the proposition of Signor Chiaves, which he stated did not bear a practical aspect. He also condemned the proposals of other members, and said that the Government could treat with France on the bases of the consent of the populations and the principle of non-intervention. The President enumerated the difficulties surrounding the Roman question, which required a gradual solution, and declared his readiness to accept passing to the order of the day pure and simple, as an expression of the Chamber's approbation of the Government policy. The House then passed to the order of the day by a large majority. The Opinione of Wednesday denies the rumours that the negotiations for the sale of the Government railways have been broken off. On the contrary, the negotiations are almost terminated, and a convention will shortly be laid before the Italian Parliament, together with other railway Bills. At a meeting of the working-men of Turin held on Sunday, thanks were voted to the working-men of England for the reception they had given to Garibaldi. The Journal de Bruxelles of Thursday, refuting some statements of Russian papers, says:—

"Russia declared to Prussia and Austria prior to the capture of Düppel that she would not oppose the annexation of the Duchies to Germany, provided that Austria and Prussia would promise to prevent the realisation of the establishment of a Scandinavian union."

POLAND.—The Ojezajzna of Friday announces that ten Poles have recently been hanged and five shot in the government of Augustowo by order of General Bolaklanof. The Landed Property Credit Association held a sitting on Friday, in which it was resolved to send a deputation of three of the most prominent members of the association to St. Petersburgh with an address expressing their loyalty and devotion to the Czar.

THE PRINCIPALITIES.—Prince Couza has returned to Bucharest. Popular manifestations took place in his honour on Monday evening. The first sitting of the Conference on the question of the Principalities was held on Monday week. The Plenipotentiaries of the five great Powers and Italy were present. On the 14th the Conference decided on the nomination of a special commission to examine the titles to property of the secularised convents. It is stated that the Conference has been adjourned to await the arrival of Prince Couza, who has been invited, on the proposal of France, to take part in the Conference. A palace is preparing for his reception. The Chambers have been dissolved in consequence of their having refused to discuss the electoral law, which was the sole object of the recent Session. The Electoral Law and an additional article to the Constitution have since been proclaimed by Prince Couza. The nation has been invited to vote a simple affirmative or negative on these questions. Tranquillity prevails, and public opinion is favourable to the Prince. No opposition is manifested against the steps recently taken by Prince Couza, and no popular assemblage has taken place relative thereto. The Prince walked out on the 15th alone, and was enthusiastically greeted by the people.

TURKEY.—Advices from Constantinople announce that the negotiations between England, the Porte, and the Viceroy of Egypt respecting the transport of troops to India have been satisfactorily concluded. It is asserted that Turkey will request explanations at St. Petersburg relative to the concentration of Russian troops in Bessarabia.

TUNIS.—Advices from Tunis to the 11th inst. assert that the Bey declined to allow the French Admiral to land troops at that place. The French squadron in the Mediterranean has received orders to hold itself in readiness to go to Tunis, its presence being necessary to solve these difficulties.

ABYSSINIA.—Advices from Abyssinia state that complete anarchy reigned there. The Emperor Theodore is hemmed in by his revolted subjects. All the troops are concentrated at Gondar.

PERSIA.—Advices from the East state that difficulties have arisen between Persia and England with regard to the island of Barhein, in the Persian Gulf.

INDIA.—Mr. Ashley Eden, British Envoy to Bhootan, has been insulted by the chiefs of that State in public Durbar. He was subsequently imprisoned, and compelled to sign a treaty ceding British Assam to Bhootan. The Candia, which left Aden for Calcutta on the 27th April, met with a fearful cyclone on the 29th, and put back to Aden on the 3d inst., having lost all her sails, mizenmast, maintopmast, five boats, and deck gear. She was to leave again on the 8th for Calcutta.

CHINA.—A telegram from Shanghai of April 9, says that the Imperialists have been repulsed at Kintang. Major Gordon was wounded, and several of his officers were killed or taken prisoners. The Imperialists are recovering from this reverse, and are again moving to attack Kintang. They are receiving large reinforcements. The rebels are believed to be hemmed in.

UNITED STATES.—The Army of the Potomac crossed the Rapidan at Ely's and Germania Fords without opposition at midnight on the 3d and the morning of the 4th. On the morning of the 5th an engagement took place at Wilderness between General Grant's cavalry and the divisions of Generals Ewell and A. P. Hill, in which both sides lost heavily in killed and wounded. The Confederates lost 300 prisoners, but captured two cannon. About the same time Generals Hancock and Getty were attacked by General Longstreet near Chancellorsville, and fought for two and a-half hours, also suffering severe loss. No decisive advantage appears to have been gained by either side, and at nightfall General Grant's troops rested in line of battle between Germania Ford and Chancellorsville with their centre at Wilderness. A general attack was ordered for the 6th, and at 5 o'clock heavy firing announced that the battle had commenced. General Lee had retired to Mine Run, which General Meade found impregnable last December. A report was current for a whole day that General Burnside, who with a force of 40,000 men formed the Federal reserve, had been defeated by General Longstreet at Thoroughfare Gap, with the loss of from 2000 to 4000 men, but the rumour was contradicted before the departure of the mail, and the encounter with Longstreet is now said to have been unimportant. General Burnside has since joined General Meade. General Baldy Smith has marched on the line of James River to Fort Darling, while a third column, under Generals Couch and Sigel, is advancing through the Shenandoah Valley. General Sherman's forces are in motion in Tennessee, and are said to be advancing on Rome, Georgia. Official information has been received at Washington of the arrival at City Point, on James River, of the forces of Generals Butler and Smith. General Beauregard, with 30,000 men, is reported at Petersburg, 10 miles distant. General Butler is severely censured for the evacuation of Washington, North Carolina, which it is declared was threatened by only seven companies of Confederates, and by which the Federals lost all their heavy ordnance and several million dollars' worth of stores, which were burnt to prevent capture. The town itself is totally destroyed. Cairo telegrams to the 3d state that the Confederates attacked General Banks during his retreat to Alexandria, and were repulsed with the loss of 1000 men and nine cannon. The same despatches report that the Confederate General Marmaduke had attacked General Steele near Camden, Arkansas, and captured 1000 prisoners, 7 cannon, and 240 waggons. Despatches of the 6th state that General Steele had returned to Little Rock. Vicksburg advices of the 25th ult. state that the banks of the Red River swarmed with Confederate sharpshooters, accompanied by artillery, who attacked every passing vessel. The Confederates have also appeared in force on both banks of the Mississippi at Vicksburg, and threatened to attack that city. Provost-Marshal General Fry has ordered draughting to commence in New York on the 9th. The Herald urges that if the order be enforced, there will be riots much more formidable than those of last year. The court-martial on Admiral Wilkes has found him guilty of all the charges against him, and he has been sentenced to be publicly reprimanded, and suspended from service for three years. The House of Representatives has appointed a committee to investigate the charges of fraud and immorality in the Treasury Department. Parliament.

HOUSE OF LORDS.

FRIDAY.—The Regius Professorship of Greek (Oxford) Bill.—On the order of the day for going into Committee on this Bill, Lord LYTTELTON presented two petitions against the Bill, observing, however, that he could not express agreement in their prayer.—Lord CHELMSF. objected to the Bill, and suggested that the professorship should be transferred to the university, which would then be willing to endow the chair from its own funds.—Lord TAUNTON said he felt that Professor Jowett had been treated very unjustly by the university; at the same time, he had great objection to the Bill on the ground that it would exclude laymen from the chair. In fact, to remedy a temporary evil it was proposed to inflict a permanent one.—The Earl of DERBY said he had on a previous occasion stated his reasons for objecting to the Bill, but at the same time he did not feel authorised to move its rejection. The university did not object to endow the professorship because it was in the patronage of the Crown, but because it conscientiously objected to the doctrines of the person who now held it. He suggested that the further consideration of the measure should be postponed.—The LORD CHANCELLOR admitted that this was not the best way to endow the professorship, but it was the only one left open to him to remedy the injustice of the university. Under all the circumstances, he felt that the Crown was bound to endow the professorship, as it was in its own patronage.—The Earl of CARNARVON moved that the Committee be postponed for three weeks.—Earl GREY greatly regretted that the Lord Chancellor had not acceded to the proposal of Lord Derby to withdraw the Bill for the present year.—The Bishop of ST DAVID'S was of opinion that the Bill, if carried, would have the effect of applying a permanent remedy of a most unsatisfactory kind to an evil merely temporary.—The Archbishop of CANTERBURY desired to see the Bill postponed to next Session.—Lord REDESDALE moved the previous question, in order to afford the House a better opportunity of deciding whether they wished to proceed at once with the Bill or postpone it indefinitely.—On a division this motion was carried by 55 to 25. The Bill is therefore postponed for the present.

HOUSE OF COMMONS.

FRIDAY.—Mr. LOWE made a personal explanation with reference to a document which had been introduced, without notice, into the debate of the preceding day on the subject of the reports of Inspectors of Schools, and upon which document (of which he had then, he said, no knowledge) a statement had been founded implying that he had unintentionally stated that which was not true in fact. He gave an explanation of the document and repelled the charge.—Lord R. CECIL thought that, as the matter had been referred to a select committee, the more regular course would be to summon Mr. Morrell, and hear what explanation he had to give on the subject. The Georgia.—On the motion that the House at its rising should adjourn for the Whitsuntide holidays until Thursday next, Mr. T. BARING called attention to the fact that an armed steamer was now in the port of Liverpool, which, having been originally manned and equipped from British ports, had preyed upon the commerce of a friendly nation, and has never been in any port of the belligerent under whose flag she sails. He entered at considerable length into questions of international law, and asked the Attorney-General whether he thought the admission of such vessels to British harbours consistent with our international obligations, our professions of neutrality. and the preservation of British interests.—The ATTORNEY-GENERAL said that her Majesty's Government had endeavoured to the best of their power to vindicate the law and to fulfil the obligations of a sincere and impartial neutrality. The measures which they had already taken had tended materially to diminish the equipping of armaments in our ports, and he hoped that the legal proceedings still pending would have the effect of clearing up and declaring the law to be sufficient for the purpose. If, on the other hand, it should be ascertained that it was not strong enough to cope with the evil, he hoped that Parliament would reconsider the subject. At present, however, the Government were not prepared to recommend any amendment of the law, as they were not satisfied that it was inefficient. With regard to the ship Georgia, she was a commissioned vessel of war, and there was no evidence to show that she was the property of a British subject. She came into the port of Liverpool lawfully for repairs; but it was subsequently stated that she would probably be dismantled and offered for sale. If it should turn out that she was not to be deprived of her character of a man of war, she would be ordered away as soon as possible.—Mr. W. E. FORSTER asked whether Federal vessels would be allowed to pay off their crews in British ports as the Confederates had done, and whether similar facilities would not be afforded to them in this respect, as otherwise we might find the effect of our policy injurious to ourselves in the event of our becoming belligerents.—Mr. COBDEN expressed his apprehension lest the personal suffering and wrong which were inflicted by the depredations committed upon Federal commerce by Confederate cruisers armed and equipped in British ports would not permanently alienate the good feeling of the North from this country.—Lord R. CECIL did not believe that any breach of international law had been committed in the case of the Georgia, but, if any had been committed at all, he was disposed to think it had been committed on the part of the North, seeing that the great house of Baring & Co., represented by the hon. member who had introduced the subject that night, was constantly engaged in the shipment of large quantities of ammunition to the Federal States.—After some observations from Mr. LEFEVRE, Lord R. MONTAGU, and Alderman ROSE, the motion for the adjournment was agreed to.—On the motion for going into committee of supply, Mr. MORRITT rose to call attention to the expediency of reducing the Duty on Malt, and was commenting upon the empty benches around him, when the SPEAKER counted the House, and 24 members only being present, an adjournment took place at 5 minutes to 9 o'clock.

THURSDAY.—The House re-assembled after the Whitsun recess. German Exactions in Jutland.—In reply to a question from Mr. WHITESIDE, Mr. LAYARD stated that forced contributions continued to be levied by the Prussians and Austrians in Jutland, contrary to the agreement arrived at, but that her Majesty's Government had not received any official information on the subject.—Sir J. PAKINGTON inquired whether it was true that another Austrian Squadron had proceeded to the Baltic?—Mr. LAYARD replied that he believed the portion of the Austrian squadron which had been left at Lisbon had followed their consorts to the North Sea.—Mr. HENNESSY asked whether the Government had received any information from their agents abroad relating to the conduct of the Russian Government in Circassia.—Mr. LAYARD said that according to communications from the British Ambassador at Constantinople, and our agents on the shores of the Baltic Sea, a very considerable immigration had taken place of Circassians, who had found it impossible to remain under Russian rule, and had therefore taken refuge in Turkey, where the Government of the Sultan had made the best arrangements possible for their reception, though he regretted to say that great mortality existed amongst the unfortunate refugees.—Lord J. MANNERS gave notice that, in Committee of Supply on the miscellaneous estimates, he should move the omission of the vote for the new National Gallery at the rear of Burlington House, with a view of retaining the Gallery in its present position. The Report of the Committee of Supply was brought up and agreed to. The Union Assessment Bill, and the Railway Companies' Powers Bill, passed through Committee. The Summary Procedure (Scotland) Bill and the Admiralty Lands and Works Bill were read a third time and passed. The Rivers Pollution (Scotland) Bill was read a second time.—Mr. DODSON obtained leave to bring in a Bill to amend the Registration of County Voters in England and Wales.—Sir G. GREY obtained leave to bring in a Bill to amend the Act for the better management of Highways in England.

FRIDAY.—Prussian Exactions in Jutland.—In answer to Mr. WHITESIDE, Lord PALMERSTON, who was loudly cheered on his reappearance after his recent illness, said that the conditions of the armistice were quite clear that no fresh contributions should be levied. There was some ambiguity as to whether contributions before the armistice should be levied. His noble friend at the head of the Foreign Office was in communication with the Prussian authorities on the subject.—In answer to Sir M. FARQUHAR, his lordship added that it was clearly understood that provisions should be paid for. Case of Captain Grant.—Colonel NORTH moved an address to her Majesty, praying for a suitable reward to Captain Grant for his services in improving the system of cooking in the army.—The Marquis of HARTINGTON resisted the motion, which was negatived on a division by 104 to 70. China.—Mr. BAXTER called attention to the state of affairs in China, and asked for explanations as to the policy of the Government in regard to that country.—Lord PALMERSTON in reply said that it was not the intention of the Government to direct interference with military or naval services in China beyond the protection to be afforded to the treaty ports

Metropolis and its Vicinity.

THE ALBERT MEMORIAL.—The works in connection with this national Memorial have been commenced in Hyde Park, nearly opposite the entrance to the Horticultural Gardens. From the great height (160 feet) and the immense solidity and massiveness of the Memorial, the foundations have to be taken unusually deep, considering the excellent nature of the soil, which is all gravel. Under the centre part they are to be formed of 16 feet of concrete, and nowhere are they to be less than 10 feet. The base of the Memorial is to consist of broad flights of steps 130 feet square. The steps of grey granite are to be laid in a double flight, with a broad landing between the lower and upper tier. From this upper landing the Memorial will rise, the basement being formed of a frieze in marble, the figures on which will be in high relief, and of life size. The columns which support the spire are to consist of groups of four red granite pillars, each 2 feet in diameter. Their capitals are exceedingly rich, and will be surmounted with statues of heroic size. The spire is one of the most elaborate of Mr. Scott's designs. It will be built of red and grey granite, and the rich white stone known as Dane Dale. The terminal cross will be of wrought copper gilt, executed by the Skidmore Art Company, who the rood screen in the transept of the last Exhibition excited general admiration for its exquisite finish. Beneath the groined arch will be placed the statue of the late Prince Consort. His Royal Highness is represented in robes of State, seated on a chair of state. The proportions of the figure are on a scale which, if the statue was represented standing, would give it a height of 30 feet. The whole work is expected to take four years in completion, and by the terms of the contract Mr. Kelk has bound himself to complete it for the sum in hand—120,000*l.* The laying of the foundation stone will be marked by a public ceremonial at which the members of the Royal family will be present. No date is fixed for this event, which is not likely to take place till late in autumn.

NEW NATIONAL GALLERY.—An estimate has been presented to Parliament proposing a vote of 10,000 the first instalment of 152,000*l.*, which is the estimated cost of building a new National Gallery at Burlington House, including finishings and decoration. In submitting the estimate, the First Commissioner of Works makes the following statement:—"The accompanying estimate is for the erection of the National Gallery on the site purchased by the Government in Piccadilly. The site consists of about three and a half acres, of which one-half is occupied by Burlington House, with its two wings and its colonnade, and by the courtyard which they surround. These buildings are occupied by the Royal Society, the University of London, the Linnean Society, and the Chemical Society; and the large hall is used for the meetings of the Geographical and other learned societies. These buildings need not be disturbed at present, since the garden, which occupies half of the site, will furnish ample accommodation for the pictures, ancient and modern, belonging to the trustees of the National Gallery, and also for the additions to the collections which may be expected by gift and purchase for many years to come. Whenever, however, a large increase of space may be required, Burlington House and its wings will be pulled down to make room for an extension of the National Gallery, and in the meantime the courtyard will make a handsome and convenient approach to the main entrance of the new building, which will be through the central hall of Burlington House. The proposed building will be 300 ft. long and 218 ft. wide. That part of it which will be devoted to the exhibition of pictures will be of one story, lit from the ceiling, and will provide 3000 lineal feet of wall-space in a horizontal line, exclusive of doorways, and 36,200 superficial feet of floor space. The larger galleries will be 40 ft. wide and 40 ft. high, and the rooms for small pictures will be 21 ft. wide, with a proportionate height. The only external elevation that will be visible will be at the northern side in Burlington Gardens, where the ingress room and offices of the trustees and the residence of the keeper will be placed in two stories, and where there will be a public entrance. On the southern side, where the level of the ground is lower, there will be a useful basement story, and the whole building will be of fireproof construction."

METROPOLITAN BOARD OF WORKS.—At the meeting of this Board Mr. Bazalgette, the engineer, reported that, at the present time, about one-sixth of the metropolitan sewage was intercepted by the Northern Outfall Sewer works, and discharged into the Thames at ebb tide at Barking, whence it was carried to the sea. This sewage, about 14,000,000 gallons in quantity, was formerly discharged into the river within the metropolis at low water. The progress made with the main drainage works was thus stated:—On the Main Drainage Middle Level Sewer, work to the amount of 306,000*l.* had been done; on the West Sewers, 3¾ miles of sewer had been constructed at a cost of 51,000*l.*; at the Northern Outfall Reservoir works had been executed to the estimated cost of 163,000*l.*: at the Southern Low Level Sewer, 3¾ miles of work had been completed at the cost of 110,000*l.*; the Southern Outfall works at Crossness, work to the amount of 213,000*l.* had been finished. With regard to the Northern Thames Embankment, the engineer reported that the works of the first contract (from Westminster Bridge to the east side of Cannon Street) had been much delayed by the difficulty in obtaining possession of the wharves on the side of the river, and by the necessity there was for making experiments as to the best form of iron caissons for excluding the water. Work had been done on this contract to the amount of 30,000*l.*, and on the second contract (between Westminster Bridge and the eastern side of Temple Gardens) to the value of 12,000*l.* The report was ordered to be entered on the minutes.

DRAMATIC SCHOOL.—On Friday, Mr. Charles Dickens presided at a meeting held in the Adelphi Theatre, for the purpose of establishing a Shakspeare Foundation School in connection with the Dramatic College. It is intended to establish a first-class school for children of both sexes, open to all ranks and professions, with a certain number of foundation scholars, according to the funds subscribed, to which the children of actors, actresses, and dramatic authors shall alone be eligible. Considerable progress has already been made in the subscriptions.

The Whitsun Holidays.—On Monday last the holiday-makers were more favoured by the weather than they usually are. From morning to night there was scarcely a cloud in the sky; and a very large portion of the population was out of doors and out of town. The steam boats and railway trains were alike crowded, Greenwich, Woolwich, the Crystal Palace, Richmond Park, Epping Forest, and Hampton Court, being the principal attractions. In the evening the theatres and principal places of entertainment were crowded.

The Islington Roads.—At a recent meeting of the Metropolitan Board of Works the names of various thoroughfares were altered, and the villas, terraces, crescents, places, rows, cottages, and other subsidiary names in the old thoroughfare known as the Lower Road or Lower Street, Islington, were ordered to be abolished, and the whole thoroughfare was renamed Essex Road.

Gambling in Government Offices.—For some time past the clerks in a particular branch of the Accountant-General's office have been employing themselves during office hours in gambling. The time supposed to be given to a careful revision of the voluminous accounts from all parts of the world relating to stores, pay, and allowances, forming the greater part of the 15 millions which the country has to pay annually for its military establishments, was devoted to chicken hazard, and it appears that the two chief officers who were responsible to the Accountant General for the efficiency and conduct of their branch, were not only cognisant of this, but active participators in the play. When these facts were established, Earl De Grey at once dismissed the two seniors, who had been from 20 to 30 years in the service, reduced the clerk standing next in point of responsibility to the bottom of his class, and stopped the promotion of others who acquiesced in the practices of their seniors. The report that loaded dice were employed is entirely without foundation.

Murder in Lambeth.—On Sunday a murder was committed in Johanna Street, New Cut. A woman named Weston, in a state of drunken frenzy attacked her husband, a vendor of cat's meat, and, before assistance could be rendered, beat him so fearfully that he died almost immediately. It is said that she has been for long known as an abandoned woman, and that a short time ago she stabbed her husband so severely that he was not expected to survive. She was taken into custody, and on Monday last was brought before the magistrate at the Southwark Police Court, when the case was remanded till after the coroner's inquest.

The Public Health.—The Registrar-General's Weekly Return states that the deaths in London in the week ending Saturday, May 14, were 1306. The average number in the corresponding week of the 10 years 1854-63, corrected for increase of population, was 1283. The present return is therefore 23 above the average. During the week the births of 963 boys and 973 girls, in all 1936 children, were registered in London. In the 10 corresponding weeks of the years 1854-63 the average number was 1964.

Provincial.

Lewes.—The 600th anniversary of the battle of Lewes was celebrated on Monday by the residents in that town and the neighbourhood. The battle, which was fought on the 14th May, 1264, on that portion of the Southdowns now known as the Race Hill, between Henry III. and the barons, is memorable in English history as having resulted in the triumph of constitutional liberty and the permanent establishment of constitutional government. The anniversary properly fell on Saturday last, but for the convenience of the tradespeople, and in order that the day might be observed as a general holiday, the celebration was postponed till Monday. As it was Whit Monday, and the weather was delightfully fine, a large number of pleasure-seekers were attracted to the town from different parts of the surrounding district, so that the county town of Sussex presented an unusually animated appearance. The castle, with the museum of the Sussex Archæological Society, the De Warren chapel in Southover Church, and the Mechanics' Museum—were thrown open to all comers, and inspected by large numbers of visitors in the course of the day. The annual custom of treading the boundaries of the borough was observed about noon, with the usual formalities, and at 1 o'clock the large town-bell, familiarly known as "Old Gabriel," which is only tolled on particular occasions, was rung as a signal for closing the shops and working establishments in the town. In the afternoon the local rifle corps had a sham fight on the battle-field, after which a public dinner took place in the County Hall, to which the Volunteers were invited. In the evening there was a torch-light procession through the town, followed by a display of fireworks from the castle keep. The proceedings were wound up by a ball in the Corn Exchange.

Ripon.—The Ven. Charles Dodgson, Archdeacon of Richmond, has been preaching, in his turn, in the cathedral of this city, and in a sermon on the efficacy of the sacraments made remarks which Dr. Goode, the Dean, construed into a personal affront. The dean "presented" the archdeacon to the bishop for teaching unsound doctrine, but the bishop declined to interfere, and informed the dean that if he desired to proceed he must do so through the Ecclesiastical Courts, by setting the Church Discipline Act in motion.

Rochdale.—Mr. Cobden has succeeded in obtaining a promise from the Secretary of the Home Department, that at the earliest opportunity a Government surveyor shall be sent down to inspect and report upon the state of the Rochdale reservoirs, including also the reservoir of the Oldham Corporation at Piethorn, which is believed to be in a very unsatisfactory condition.

Rotherham.—On Monday last, after an investigation lasting for three days, James Sargisson and Richard Denton were committed by the magistrates for trial on the charge of murdering and robbing John Cooper, near Roche Abbey, on the night of the 9th April. The main evidence against Sargisson resulted from his own confession. A few days after the Government offered a reward of 100*l.* for information of the murder, and a free pardon to an accomplice who did not strike the fatal blow, Sargisson, who had previously been suspected, began to talk unguardedly, and was then apprehended. He immediately confessed to having been present at the murder, but said that Denton was the man who induced him to go, and that they both murdered Cooper and robbed him. In proof of this he told the police that the watch and keys of the murdered man were hid in his pigstye, having been secreted there by Denton's directions. He also said that the clothes he wore at the time of the murder would be found hid between his bed and mattress. These articles were found in the places indicated, and Sargisson accounted for blood being on his clothes by saying that he accidentally fell upon the pool of blood where Cooper had lain. The police declined to make Sargisson a witness, the case against him being conclusive. Beyond Sargisson's statements the evidence against Denton consisted in proofs that he was in the neighbourhood at the time; that two pocket-handkerchiefs found in his possession are identified, though not very positively, as those of Cooper; that there were slight marks of blood upon his clothes, which, however, he says were made in assisting to kill a pig a month ago; and that he has associated much with Sargisson—a fact which he denied when apprehended. He appears to be dreadfully alarmed at his position, and swooned several times during the course of the inquiry. Sargisson, on the other hand, appears quite cool and unconcerned. The two prisoners have frequently exchanged bitter recriminations during the course of the inquiry. A third man, named Taylor, had been apprehended, but he was acquitted on the first day, there being, in fact, no evidence against him. Sargisson repeated in the dock, after the usual caution, the confession which he originally made to the police.

Saddleworth.—On Tuesday week a shocking accident took place at a village near this town. The large chimney of a factory fell and crushed three cottages, the inmates of which were asleep in their beds. The nearest cottage was levelled, and its occupants escaped with severe bruises. The second was levelled to the ground, and eight out of 10 of its inmates were killed on the spot. In the third cottage, which was also partially destroyed, one life was lost. The disaster caused great consternation in the neighbourhood. The inquest has been adjourned to obtain some professional opinion as to the security of the mode of building. The evidence already taken showed great apathy on the part of the workmen. It was shown that the inmates of the cottages which were crushed were aware of the danger. The private watchman amused himself in the early part of the night of the accident by measuring the rapidly increasing crack in the structure, but never thought of warning those who were so soon to become the victims of the accident.

Salisbury.—The subscriptions towards the restoration of the cathedral amount up to the present time to upwards of 10,000*l.* The estimated cost of the proposed works is 40,000*l.*

Sheffield.—A public meeting was held on Wednesday evening in the hall of the Mechanics' Institution in this town, at which the Duke of Argyll and Mr. Roebuck addressed a numerous audience on the occasion of the assembling of delegates of the Yorkshire Mechanics' Institutes. The Duke of Argyll, in a long speech, which was loudly applauded during its delivery, treated mainly of the advantages of the Union in supplying the working classes with advantages hitherto associated with the great public schools, and hinted at the probable introduction of a larger measure of governmental agency towards the education of the working class. Mr. Roebuck declared his opinion that state aid ought to be, and before long would be, more extensively introduced for the purpose of facilitating the education of the working poor. He referred to the introduction of the Factory Act, which he and others at the time regarded with disapprobation, considering it an interference of the State between the employer and the employed, but observation and experience had taught him his error. As soon as he had seen reason to change his mind upon that important question he got up and delivered his recantation in the House of Commons, and when he had done so, the late Sir James Graham laid his hand upon his shoulder, and said, "I am glad that you have read your recantation, and I will read mine to-morrow." Before concluding his address he remarked in severe terms upon the apathy of the master class of Sheffield and its neighbourhood, with respect to the many admirable organisations for introducing intellectual pleasures to their work-people.

Riot in Edinburgh.—A strange outbreak took place a few days since in the streets of Edinburgh. The stipends of the established clergy used to be levied as a direct tax on the inhabitants, which the more extreme dissenters refused to pay. Within the last year or two the amount of the tax was considerably reduced, and the lower charge was amalgamated with the police tax—the corporation taking upon itself the payment of the ministers. But this arrangement has proved as little satisfactory to the extreme party of the other, and one of them having refused to pay his goods were distrained. A riot ensued, in the course of which the goods seized were taken into the street, smashed to pieces, and burned by the mob, who sympathised with the owner's resistance to the law.

Execution at Glasgow.—On Monday morning John Reilly, who was charged with the murder of Nancy Laffy, near Glasgow, was executed in front of the gaol of that city. The evidence against him was altogether circumstantial, and as there was a feeling that it was not conclusive, great efforts were made to obtain a remission of his sentence. But Sir G. Grey, after consulting the judge who tried the case, declined to interfere with the course of law. The prisoner asserted his innocence to the last. There were above 20,000 persons present at the execution.

Law.

Court of Common Pleas: Collingwood v. Berkeley, M.P.—The plaintiff in this case some time since obtained damages against Mr. Henry Berkeley, M.P., as one of the directors of a company which undertook to convey passengers across the American Continent to British Columbia, and failed in its engagements. Distress was levied on Mr. Berkeley's furniture, but a friend of Mr Berkeley's came forward and pleaded a bill of sale, which led to the present trial in the form of an interpleader issue. The point was whether the bill of sale was sufficient to bar the claim which Mr. Collingwood had against Mr. Berkeley. The judge told the jury that a great many legal points had been raised which would be settled in another court. Their business was to decide whether, in their opinion, the bill of sale was a genuine or only a colourable transaction. The jury found for the genuineness of the sale and for the plaintiff.

Court of Error.—Attorney-General v. Partington.—A case of considerable importance came before the Court on Saturday. As far back as 1819 a widow lady named Shood died without a will, leaving property to the extent of 20,000*l.* Her next-of-kin was in America, but neither she nor her husband, nor her husband's son, made any formal claim till 1855, when he took out letters of administration to the property. He obtained the whole sum, with the accumulations of interest, which in that time had nearly doubled the value of the original property. The Crown, which up to this time had held the property, then put forth its claim for legacy duty upon the two devolutions of the property, insisting that the present claimant should pay the legacy duty for the two previous parties, without the admission of whose right it could never have come to him, and also that the legacy duty should be paid not only on the principal sum, but also on the accumulations of interest at the date of each separate devolution of the property. The Court of Exchequer, before whom the case came, decided that only one legacy duty should be paid, but that it should be charged on the property at the time the letters of administration were first taken out. Both sides appealed against this decision, and the case was argued at great length. The Court, after taking time to consider its judgment, on Monday decided for the Crown on both these points.

BRITISH WOOLS.—LONDON, May 20.

We are now in a state of transition. The fat wool is mostly sold, and the stock wool not yet clipped. The market is supplied for the present, and the consumers are indisposed to speculate at the present high prices, so that a lull is taking place; at the same time there is a good prospect of remunerating rates for some time to come.

METROPOLITAN CATTLE MARKET.

MONDAY, May 16.

The number of Beasts is rather larger, but the weight of beef smaller, as it includes about 600 stores and Milch Cows. The hot weather makes buyers cautious; prices are, however as good as on Monday last for best qualities. We have a larger and better supply of Sheep; the demand is smaller, this being holiday week, and trade is worse, especially for heavy fat Sheep. Lambs and Calves are selling about the same as on Monday last. From Germany and Holland there are 1360 Beasts, 4579 Sheep, and 174 Calves from Scotland, 450 Beasts; from Ireland, 50; and 2510 from the Northern, Eastern, and Midland Counties.

MARK LANE.—MONDAY, May 16.

The supply of English Wheat was short this morning, and that of spring corn moderate. The splendid weather checked the general demand for Wheat, and last week's prices declined 1s. per qr. for the best, and 2s. on other sorts. Flour sold slowly at about former rates. Grinding Barley was steady in value. Beans and Peas were fully as dear. Oats were purchased to a moderate extent at about last Monday's rates.

FRIDAY, May 20

Since the 13th inst the weather has been unusually fine, and the temperature as high and probably higher than any recorded at this period of the year. The Wheat trade has been very inactive and depressed; a decline of 1s. per qr. is reported from various markets throughout the kingdom. The value of Spring Corn was maintained, except in Scotland, where Barley and Oats are somewhat cheaper. Flour continues to be neglected, and may be noted 1s. per sack and 6d. per barrel cheaper. Since Friday last 72 vessels have been reported off the coast. With the numerous arrivals off the coast holders have become inclined to accept 1s. to 2s. per qr. lower prices for Wheat, but buyers pressing for a greater reduction only a few sales have been made. Barley is inquired after at 6d. to 1s. per qr. lower rates. Paris, May 19.—Flour is held for late rates, but business has remained very limited. The six marks for delivery this month are offered at 34s. 9d. per 280 lbs. The present stock of Flour is estimated at 16,720 cwt. Wheat is very difficult to dispose of, and nominally unaltered in value. The arrivals of English Oats are large, of foreign Barley good, of all other English and foreign grain small. The attendance at to-day's market was very limited, and business in Wheat from the stands almost suspended, some of the Essex left over from Monday being unsaleable, except at a reduction of several shillings per qr. Foreign not being pressed for sale prices were nominal. A few sales made of Barley, Beans, and Peas were at late quotations, but Oats were difficult of sale and rather cheaper.

LIVERPOOL, May 17.—To-day's market has had a very slender attendance of buyers, and the business done in both Wheat and Flour have been of the merest retail character, at a further slight reduction on the rates current last market day, say fully 1d. per cental and 6d. per barrel and sack. Indian Corn was in fair request at 3d. per qr. less money. Oats and Oatmeal very dull, and both the turn in buyers' favour. Beans, Peas, and Barley each remain stationary at late rates.

FRIDAY, May 20.—The attendance and business at market is so very limited that the value of all articles is quite nominal.

News of the Week.

THE House of Lords re-assembled on Monday after the Whitsuntide recess. On the motion for the second reading of the County Courts Amendment Bill, Lord ST. LEONARD'S and Lord CHELMSFORD objected to the Bill that it would take away the credit of the working classes, which in reality was their capital. The LORD CHANCELLOR defended the Bill, which was ultimately read a second time. On Tuesday, being the QUEEN'S birthday, the House did not sit. On Thursday, the Earl of ELLENBOROUGH called attention to the exactions of the Prussians in Jutland in spite of their obligations under the recent armistice, and expressed his opinion that the QUEEN'S natural sympathies with Germany had diminished the influence of England, and prevented the Government from vindicating their views by force. Earl RUSSELL in reply said that Marshal VON WRANGEL was directed on the 28th of April to levy contributions to the extent of 90,000*l.*, being the estimated amount of German shipping captured and destroyed by the Danes, and that subsequently the Prussian Government had issued orders to stop any further contributions, and to pay for all provisions required by their troops. With regard to this country embarking in a war with the great German Powers, no good result could ensue from the adoption of such a course; and with regard to the QUEEN'S views his lordship added, that in all the steps which had been taken with respect both to Denmark and Poland, HER MAJESTY had readily acceded to the advice tendered to her by her responsible advisers. The Duke of BUCCLEUCH moved the second reading of the Scotch Episcopal Disabilities Removal Bill, the object of which was to repeal the laws which prevent persons ordained in the Scotch Episcopal Church from holding benefices or officiating in England. After a long discussion the bill was read a second time and referred to a select committee.

In the Commons on Friday Lord PALMERSTON stated, in answer to Mr. BAXTER, that her Majesty's Government had interfered in the contest between the Imperialists and Taepings in China simply for the purpose of protecting our treaty rights and national interests. In answer to Sir J. PAKINGTON, Mr. CARDWELL said that it had been determined to put a stop at once to the Ashantee war, and that transports would immediately be sent to the Gold Coast to bring away all the troops except those which are ordinarily employed there. The House then went into committee of supply on the Civil Service Estimates, and was shortly afterwards counted out. On Monday, in answer to Mr. WHITESIDE, Mr. LAYARD, and afterwards Lord PALMERSTON, said that it was distinctly provided by the armistice, that no contributions should be levied in Jutland after the date of its signature, and that whatever was required for the Allied troops should be paid for; and Count BISMARK had assured her Majesty's Government that this engagement would be fulfilled. The Vacating of Seats (House of Commons) Bill. The Army Prize (Shares of Deceased Persons) Bill and the Beer House (Ireland) Bill were read a second time. The Limited Penalties Bill, the Chain Cables and Anchors Bill, and the Chief Rents (Ireland) Bill, passed through committee. The Piers and Harbours Orders Confirmation Bill was referred to a select committee. Sir JOHN HAY obtained leave to bring in a bill to authorise the Bank of England to issue their notes in Scotland, and to make such notes a legal tender there. Sir H. BRUCE obtained leave to bring in a Bill to assimilate the law for shooting game in Ireland to that in force in England and Scotland. The House then adjourned over the QUEEN'S birthday and the Derby Day to Thursday. On that day Mr. HENNESSY moved resolutions to the effect that the negotiations of her Majesty's Government respecting Poland had not terminated in a satisfactory manner; that it appeared from the papers laid before Parliament that the conditions on which the British Government agreed to acknowledge the dominion of Russia in Poland had not been fulfilled by Russia; and that her Majesty's Government was no longer bound to recognise the sovereignty of Russia in Poland. Lord PALMERSTON opposed the motion, and after a long debate the resolutions were negatived without a division. The House then went into committee of supply on the Supplementary Navy Estimate, which was agreed to after considerable discussion. The report on Banks Acts was brought up and agreed to. The Union Assesment Committee Act Amendment Bill was considered, and some new clauses added. The Highways Act Amendment Bill was read a second time and referred to a select committee. The Vacating of Seats (House of Commons) Bill, and the Army Prize (Shares of Deceased) Bill passed through committee.

The Prussian Prime Minister has declared that the Prussian Government considers itself free from the obligations of the Treaty of 1852; and it is reported in Paris that England, Sweden, Prussia, Germany, and France are agreed as to the necessity of establishing a natural and definite frontier line between Germany and Denmark, all the territory on one side to be exclusively Danish, and all on the other side exclusively German. This frontier is to be the Dannewerk. The whole of Holstein and the southern part of Schleswig, according to this arrangement, would be detached from Denmark altogether, and either become part of Prussia, or be constituted a separate State under the Duke of AUGUSTENBERG. It is also reported that the Conference at their next meeting will determine whether this question is to be decided by the votes of the inhabitants, as suggested by the EMPEROR OF THE FRENCH; by the Conference itself, as suggested by Earl RUSSELL; or by the German Diet, as proposed by Baron von BEUST.

A despatch from Copenhagen informs us that a strong warlike feeling is openly expressed in that capital, and that the Government is determined to recall its plenipotentiaries from London if the German Powers do not modify their claims. A deputation from the town of Kolding arrived at Copenhagen on Monday, to request the KING to uphold the rights of Denmark at the conclusion of peace, and not to prolong the armistice. Similar addresses are expected from several other towns in Jutland.

By the Bombay mail of the 29th ult., we learn that the VICEROY has left Calcutta for Simla, at which place the Viceregal Council is to meet until further orders. The Hon. ASHLEY EDEN has returned to Darjeeling from Bhootan, where, as is already known, he was grossly insulted in public Durbar by the chiefs, and compelled to sign a treaty surrendering to them the whole of Assam. The KING of BOKHARA has released the four Italian gentlemen whom he had imprisoned. The Imperial Council has passed a new Marriage Law for India. Fresh troubles have broken out in Cabool. The Sirdars have entered into a conspiracy against the AMEER, and have written to UFZUL KHAN, urging him to march on Cabool. The AMEER has solicited the aid of the British Government. The Bombay, Baroda, and Central India Railway has been brought to a successful termination, and is to be opened shortly.

From the United States we have further details of the series of sanguinary battles with which the new campaign in Virginia has been opened. The first of these battles was fought at Wilderness on the 5th inst. It lasted all day, and terminated in the capture of two entire Federal brigades. On the 6th General GRANT renewed the battle along his whole line, but was repulsed with dreadful slaughter. General HANCOCK, on the left, was first driven back, and General SEDGWICK'S corps, on the right, was then thrown into confusion and compelled to fall back on BURNSIDE'S reserves. Later in the day General LEE assumed the aggressive, turned the right of the Federal army, and drove it back upon the centre with a loss to the Federals of nearly 7000 men. On the night of the 6th General LEE retired to another line of defence, near Spottsylvania. To that point General GRANT immediately followed, and, after some sharp skirmishing on the 7th, again attacked the Confederates on the following morning. The battle raged throughout the 8th, 9th, and 10th with little intermission, except during the darkness of night. The losses on both sides in these engagements were enormous, those of the Federals, as the attacking force, being said to have amounted in killed, wounded, and missing, to 40,000 men. On the 12th another desperate battle was fought in front of General LEE'S new position. It was commenced early in the morning by a vigorous charge of General HANCOCK on the Confederate rifle-pits in his front, in which he is said to have made 4000 prisoners, including Generals JOHNSON and STEWART, and captured several guns. The battle was continued with great fury throughout the day, but every effort to penetrate General LEE'S line was unsuccessful, and at nightfall the Confederates maintained their position in front of Spottsylvania Court House. No engagement has since taken place, and both armies now confront each other at Spottsylvania, General LEE holding a strong position north of the Court House. Heavy rains have prevented further military operations on either side. The carnage of the 12th is described as awful, and the men on both sides are said to have fallen like grain. No returns of killed and wounded are given, but the total loss of the Federals in the eight battles is estimated at 45,000 men, including among the killed Generals SEDGWICK, HAYS, WADSWORTH, RICE, OWENS, STEVENSON, and CRAWFORD. General LEE also lost many Generals, and both himself and General LONGSTREET were wounded, the latter, it is said, severely. The Confederates have attacked General BUTLER before Drury's Bluff, in front and in rear, inflicting considerable loss and compelling him to retire to his lines. The Confederates have also defeated General SIGEL at Newmarket, capturing five guns. He retreated however across the Shenandoah in good order to Strasburg, with the loss of 650 men. General SHERMAN, after two days' fighting, has occupied Dalton and Resaca, General JOHNSTONE retreating towards Atlanta, pursued by the Federals. A portion of General BANKS's army has been compelled to march overland to the Mississippi river, fighting its way out. His retreat from Alexandria by the Red River had been previously cut off by Confederate batteries. A fleet of steamers, with supplies and reinforcements for his army, has been sunk or captured, and Admiral PORTER'S gunboats above the falls of the Red River have been stranded by a diversion of the waters, and are expected to fall into the hands of the Confederates. The House of Representatives has adopted a resolution to drop from the army rolls all unemployed general officers, including Generals M'CLELLAN and FREMONT, and has passed a bill giving to soldiers and sailors, both white and coloured, homesteads from confiscated Confederate estates. A forged proclamation was issued in New York on the 18th, announcing a call by President LINCOLN for 400,000 men, and declaring General GRANT'S campaign closed. The publication of the document caused intense excitement until the forgery was discovered.

ARMOUR PLATED VESSELS.—A return from the Admiralty has been presented to Parliament, giving an account of our iron-plated ships and batteries built or building, their armament, horse-power, draught of water, and other particulars concerning them. The return comprises the 16 vessels already afloat and the seven floating batteries; and it includes 11 vessels now building and to be either wholly or partially armour-clad, to be completed at various dates within the next 12 months. Of the ships in the list, the first—the Warrior—was launched in December, 1860; the floating batteries are all of the date of 1855 and 1856. The Black Prince is the most costly ship in the list, the first cost, including engines and fittings, amounting to 363,813*l*.. The ships entered as "building" are the Agincourt, described as ready for launching, but completing before undocking; the Prince Albert (launched last week), and the Favourite, marked for launching this month; the Royal Alfred, for October; the Pallas, for December; the Bellerophon, Lord Clyde, Lord Warden, Viper, and Vixen, March, 1865; and the Northumberland, April, 1865.

There are 309,883 persons described generally as "labourers."

Foreign.

France.—The Session of the Corps Législatif has been prolonged until the 28th inst. Baron von Beust was received by the Emperor on Saturday in private audience. His Excellency paid a visit to M. Drouyn de Lhuys on the same day, and left Paris for London on Tuesday morning. Councillor Krieger, one of the representatives of Denmark at the Conference, was received on Tuesday by M. Drouyn de Lhuys, and returned to London on Wednesday evening. The Constitutionnel of Thursday, in an article on the Danish question, says:—

"The Dano-German conflict is, above all, a question of Nationalities. The aspirations and interests of the nationalities which gave rise to the conflict should therefore be satisfied by a definitive solution. Holstein is German, and half of Schleswig is German. It is therefore not astonishing that a project exists to unite the German portion of Schleswig with Holstein. Inconveniences would arise from the system of a personal union between that new State and Denmark, and it appears difficult to understand why the population should not be summoned to decide upon a Government, and it is probable that they would then choose a German Sovereign. France has done nothing to bring about this solution, but it is evident that it is not in opposition to her policy."

The Pays says that England, France, Sweden, Prussia, and the German Diet have agreed to divide the Duchies at the Dannewirke, the southern part, inhabited by Germans, to be either united to Prussia or made a separate State under Prince Frederick, and the northern part to remain connected with Denmark. It adds, that Prussia, France, and Sweden are in favour of submitting this question to the votes of the inhabitants, that England is in favour of having it settled by the Conference, while the Diet claims the decision as its own privilege. The views of Austria, it says, are not yet known. On Wednesday, being Queen Victoria's birthday, there was a dinner at the British Embassy, at which the Emperor's Ministers were present. M. Drouyn de Lhuys proposed the health of the Queen. Earl Cowley replied, and proposed the health of the Emperor. The Corps Legislatif last week rescinded its vote in favour of restoring to the heirs of Lesurques the patrimony forfeited by the unjust execution of their parent, on the ground that it is too late to repair the injustice. The Duke of Malakoff (Marshal Pelissier), Commander-in-Chief in Algeria, died on Monday after a few days illness. He was born in November, 1794, at Maromme, in the Department of the Lower Seine, where his father was a powder manufacturer. He saw a good deal of service as a subaltern in 1823 and 1827, in the campaigns of Spain and the Morea; but first became known in Europe by his exploits in Algeria, and especially by his destruction of the Khabyl tribe of the Ouled Riahs, whom he smoked to death in a cave. When the Russian war broke out he was placed in command of the 1st corps of the Crimean army; and in May, 1855, he succeeded Marshal Canrobert as Commander-in-Chief of the French army. In August of that year the Russians attacked the French position on the Tchernaya, and were completely repulsed by General Pélissier. In the following month he captured the Malakoff tower of Sebastopol and the Redan of Careening Bay, for which he was made Marshal of France. He was created Duke of Malakoff, and a senator of France, in the following year. From 1858 to 1859 he held the appointment of French Ambassador in London, but as he did not find diplomacy at all to his taste, he retired, and in 1860 was again sent to Algeria as Governor-General. In 1857 a pension of 100,000 fr. was settled on Marshal Pelissier and his children; and he was nominated Vice-President of the Senate. In the following year he was appointed a member of the Privy Council; and in 1859 was created Chancellor of the Legion of Honour. The Moniteur, in announcing his death, says that France and the Emperor have sustained a heavy loss. The Algerian papers give the details of a victory gained by General Deligny, in which 3600 Arabs were repulsed. After the engagement of the 13th inst. the Flittas sacked the houses of Zammorais, burning the supplies and pillaging the warehouses. Colonel La Passet arrived during the night of the 15th and revictualled Zammorals. He subsequently covered the plain of Belizanne with reinforcements. General Deligny obtained a fresh success over the insurgents on the 16th inst. This insurrection is said to be intimately connected with the Tunis outbreak, which extends over almost the entire seaboard from La Calle to Tripoli, and is said to be connected with religious views. Many of the native chiefs thought that France would be engaged in a general war in 1864. They are very well informed respecting events in Europe. Several of their number receive the Arabic journal published at Constantinople, which contains the debates in the French Chamber and the English Parliament. Four steam frigates are preparing for the conveyance of troops to Algeria. The 12th Regiment of the Line and a detachment of military artisans have already been despatched to Algeria. The ship Ville de Paris, having on board Vice-Admiral Bouet-Willaumez, left Toulon for Tunis on Sunday morning, accompanied by six men-of-war, carrying in all 510 guns. Orders were sent on Thursday to Cherbourg for the departure of the ironclad frigate Invincible for the same destination. The French Derby was run on Sunday. The race was won by Bois Roussel, beating Affidavit and Civility by a bare length. Flatman, the jockey, who rode the winning horse, has now won the French Derby four times—in 1837 for Lord Seymour, with Lydia; in 1846, for Baron de Rothschild, with Meudon; in 1856, for the Prince de Beauvau, with Lion; and now, for M. Delamarre, with Bois-Roussel.

Spain.—The Minister for Foreign Affairs has taken into serious consideration the differences that have arisen between Spain and Peru. Fresh instructions have been despatched to the Spanish representative in that quarter, and to the Admiral in command of the fleet in the Pacific. A committee of the Senate has proposed to authorise the Government to treat with the Bank of Spain in order to make arrangements for liquidating all the deficits of the Treasury. The Bank would issue hypothecated notes amounting to 342 million francs, bearing 6 per cent. interest from the 1st July, 1864.

Belgium.—The Duchess of Brabant gave birth to a Princess on Saturday morning. Her Royal Highness and the infant Princess are both doing well. The Ministerial crisis has terminated, all the Ministers having withdrawn their resignations. The Chamber of Deputies has been convoked for the 31st inst.

Denmark.—The general elections to the Folksthing (Lower House) of the Rigsdag, the special Assembly for the kingdom, which were to have taken place upon the 14th June, are now ordered, by public letter of the King, to be held upon the 7th. It is considered of importance that Jutland should send its representatives to the Legislative Body, and as the armistice expires upon the 12th, it is doubtful whether the elections could take place at the date originally intended. The King has forwarded the following rescript to the Minister of Finance:—

"Some years ago an institution was founded in the vicinity of Copenhagen, the object of which was to secure a "home" for sick persons whom the troubles of life had deprived of that refuge which the word so beautifully designates. I am of opinion that a similar home might be established for the soldier wounded in war—be he officer, sub-officer, or private—who has no friends with whom he can reside, and would therefore desire to spend his life among comrades. It has seemed to me that the castle built and surrounded with splendidly laid out grounds in a lofty and healthy situation, close to Copenhagen, by King Frederick IV—that King who first created the 'Danish Militiaman,' and upheld Denmark's right to the possession of Schleswig—would form a voluntary home for the brave men of the army and fleet who have bled for Dybbol, and wherever else this fateful war may demand sacrifices. I request your Excellency to examine this idea of mine, in conjunction with the Ministers of War and of the Marine, and to lay before me the necessary plans. CHRISTIAN R."

A committee has been appointed, in consequence of this rescript, to examine his Majesty's proposition. Public opinion in Copenhagen has lately taken a more warlike tone. Perseverance in a persistent policy is approved. It is asserted that the Danish Government has determined to recall its Plenipotentaries should the German Powers not modify their demands. A deputation from the town of Kölding arrived at Copenhagen on Monday to request the King not to prolong the armistice, and in concluding peace to uphold the rights of Denmark. Several similar addresses are expected from other towns in Jutland. It appears that after the arrival of a Danish Government Commissioner at the Prussian head-quarters in Horsens, the commander of that place retired from Jutland, leaving nobody behind with whom negotiations could be carried on. The Prussian officers in command at the different places act everywhere arbitrarily. In Aarhuus they arrested the superintendent of the Custom-house for demanding the duty from Prussian contractors. The recruits called in before the armistice on the 12th of May were arrested on the route to join the Danish army, and threatened with deportation southwards. The Minister of War, Colonel Lundbye, has resigned, and Lieut.-Colonel Reich, commander of the Copenhagen sea fort, has been appointed in his stead. Several important posts in the War Ministry are being reorganised. The Danish Government steamer Freya arrived at Travemunde on Wednesday morning, with the mails from Copenhagen, and returned immediately.

The Danish Duchies.—The Lauenburg Association has sent a declaration, through the Federal Commissioners, to the German Diet and Baron von Beust, demanding separation from Denmark equally with the two Duchies of Schleswig and Holstein. The declaration further states that the Association wishes that the law of succession should be considered as not binding upon Lauenburg. The inheritance to the throne being granted by the treaties in the same line as the landed property, the Federal Diet alone has the power to decide the question of succession. In his reply, Baron von Beust hopes that the result of the Conference will show that the wishes of the Association have received the fullest consideration.

Frankfort.—The Europe of Wednesday, in an article on the Conference, says:—

"Information relative to the Conference, the accuracy of which we can guarantee, announces that the representatives o the Powers would now choose between a war threatening to overstep the limits of the Duchies and the adoption of a system giving satisfaction to Danes and Germans alike. This system would be the constitution of Holstein and the German portion of Schleswig in a single State. The people would decide by universal suffrage upon the interior government they would prefer. The remainder of Schleswig would be united to the Danish Monarchy."

Austria.—The National Zeitung of Wednesday publishes a letter from its Vienna correspondent, stating that a decided alteration has taken place in the policy of Austria on the Schleswig-Holstein question. That Power now inclines decisively to the point of view adopted by the Federal Diet, and to the substance of the legal opinion expressed in the resolution brought in by Herr von der Pfordten, the Bavarian representative. It adds that "Austria will take up the position required by her interest, and, in especial, by her old traditional relations to the middle States." The semi-official Abendpost of Wednesday evening says:—

"Even in the most recent phase of the Dano-German question there is a perfect understanding between the two great German Powers upon every detail."

The same paper states that the prospects of the Duke of Augustenburg have greatly improved. The Spenersche Zeitung of Tuesday publishes a telegram from Vienna, asserting that the representatives of England and France have made declarations to Count Rechberg abandoning the Treaty of 1852, agreeing to the union of South Schleswig with Holstein as a separate State independent of Denmark, and absolutely rejecting a personal union with that State.

Prussia.—The Crown Prince of Prussia has left for Stettin to assume the commannd of the Second Army Corps. His Royal Highness was expected to return on Monday evening. A banquet was given on Tuesday in the new Palace in Potsdam in celebration of the birthday of Queen Victoria. A deputation of 17 members presented to the King on Monday the address proposed by Count Arnim-Boytzenburg, and bearing 30,000 signatures, requesting that Schleswig-Holstein might be made an independent State. The address was read by Count Arnim. The King replied as follows:—

"I have received with pleasure the address in which you assure me of the willingness of the Prussian people to assist in solving the Schleswig Holstein question, thereby granting me a worthy return for the beloved blood of so many children of the country. This return will be mine, should I attain the end for which, together with the Emperor of Austria, I have taken up arms. In conjunction with my illustrious ally, I will take measures, so far as God has placed it in our power, that full security be obtained against a return of the oppression of our countrymen in the Duchies by Danish rule, and that effectual and lasting guarantees be secured to prevent further disturbances on the northern frontier of Germany. To gain this object the allies have fought, and for this they are now striving at the Conference, reserving the entire freedom of action to which they are entitled both by the conduct of the Danes and the course of events. During the pending negotiations I cannot, of course, be expected to give any explanation as to the nature of the solution. But even, as you may rest assured, that under all circumstances the honour of Prussia will be preserved, so also you may be assured that the sacrifice we have offered for the cause of Germany will also conduce to the interests of our own more immediate fatherland. In this confidence I am strengthened by the words you have addressed to me, for which I thank you from my heart, since in them I perceive a new proof of the warm and unanimous devotion of the Prussian people, on which, in all cases concerning the greatness and wellbeing of our common fatherland, I may rely.

The Emperor and Empress of Russia will arrive at the Prussian Court on the 9th of June. Their Majesties will remain at Potsdam two days. The following is the official text of the despatch addressed to the Prussian Ambassador in London by Herr Von Bismarck on the 15th inst.:—

"Berlin, May 15.

"As it is to be foreseen that the question of the position of the two German Powers with regard to the London Treaty of 1852 will be brought forward at the approaching sittings of the Conference, I find it requisite to make the following remarks upon the subject:—Up to the death of King Frederick VII. the German Powers were able to expect that the Crown of Denmark would fulfil the obligations it had undertaken towards them, and that by this means, and by a presentatation of the succession law to the Estates of the Duchies—which has not even yet taken place—the order of succession aimed at by the London Treaty would be placed in a perfectly legal position before the anticipated lease of the demise of the Crown actually occurred. These expectations were not only frustrated by the death of the King, but his successor upon the Danish throne immediately proclaimed his intention, by the act of the 18th November, not to comply with those obligations. The Government of the King immediately called attention to the connection of those obligations with the intended order of succession, with regard to which I need only refer to my despatch No. 467, of the 23d November, and repeatedly declared that it should therefore consider itself justified in regarding the Treaty of 1852 as no longer binding upon Prussia. That she did not instantly proclaim her withdrawal from that arrangement was owing solely to regard for the remaining Powers, and to the hope that Denmark's yielding, by receding from the open breach of her obligations, would re-establish the preliminary conditions and afford the possibility of the maintenance of peace. Even when this hope was deceived, when the constitution for Schleswig, opposed to the treaty, not only remained unretracted upon the 1st Jan., but then came into operation, the two German Powers were unwilling to make any immediate use of their rights. Even at the moment when they were forced to adopt warlike measures against Denmark, they declared in the despatch of the 31st January of the present year that they did not intend to attack the principle of the integrity of the Danish monarchy. But they at the same time expressly stated that Denmark's further persistence in the course she had adopted would compel them to sacrifices which would render it their duty to give up the combinations of 1852, and to endeavour to come to an understanding upon some other arrangement with the signataries of the London Treaty. This case has completely occurred. The Danish Government has carried its persistence in denial to the utmost, and has continued armed resistance to the last. After all these occurrences the Government of the King cannot consider itself in any way longer bound by the obligations as contracted on the 8th May, 1852, under other circumstances. Prussia concluded this treaty with Denmark, and not with the other Powers; the ratifications were only exchanged between Copenhagen and Berlin, not between Berlin and London, or St. Petersburg. Even if, which we do not admit, the London Treaty had been intended to create obligations between us and the neutral Powers, these would become void together with the treaty as soon as the latter lapsed through non-fulfilment of its preliminary conditions. The Government of the King therefore considers itself, in accordance with the declaration of January 31, entirely free from all obligations which could be deduced from the London Treaty of 1852, and justified in discussing any other combination quite independent of that treaty. It results from the nature of political relations that the solution of a question, the European bearing of which the Government of the King has never undervalued, should be attempted in common with the other great Powers, and this natural consequence is recognised by the Government in the concluding sentence of the declaration of January 31. By accepting the English invitation to the Conference the Government of the King has given proof of its readiness to seek for and discuss in common the means for this purpose; and this and nothing else can be the task of the Conference."

VON BISMARCK

The Ministerial Provincial Correspondenz of Thursday concludes an article on the negotiations for peace as follows:—

"The clearer Denmark's conduct makes it appear that the political independence of the Duchies cannot be assured under any connection with that country, so much the more is the solution of the question only to be sought in complete separation from Denmark. It appears that the Prussian and Austrian Governments have already entered into negotiations in order to come to some resolution in accordance with these views."

The Norddeutsche Allgemeine Zeitung of Thursday publishes an article on the alleged policy of England that Schleswig should be divided, and on the views of Denmark that the Danewirke should in that case form the national frontier. It says:—

"It is a fact that until 1848 the boundary line dividing the districts in which the German language was used in the churches, from those where it was Danish, ran northerly from Flensburg to Tondern. If a boundary on the basis of language were possible, it must be drawn in this direction. But there would be other matters to be taken into consideration besides the question of boundary based on the difference of language, in order to guard against Danish oppression. It is, of course, understood that the wishes of the population should in justice be consulted, especially where the nationalities are mixed."

The Spenersche Zeitung of yesterday says:—"We are informed that the Prussian Government will exert its utmost influence to support the candidature of the Prince of Augustenburg to the throne of Schleswig-Holstein, and the complete separation of the Duchies from Denmark.

ITALY.—The intelligence relative to the health of the Pope is unfavourable; but his Holiness nevertheless took part in the customary procession on Thursday in honour of the festival of Corpus Christi. The collections for St. Peter's pence since 1859 have produced 36,500,000 lire. The commercial treaty between Holland and Italy, and the treaty of commerce with Belgium to redeem the Scheldt dues, have been approved by the Italian Senate. In the Chamber of Deputies on Saturday the estimates for the various departments of the Ministry of Public Works came on for discussion. Signor Mordini called the attention of the House to the current rumours of bribery laid to the charge of several of the deputies in reference to the South Italian Railway Company. He proposed that a Parliamentary inquiry should be instituted to determine whether the dignity of the National Representation had thereby been impaired. After some further observations the proposal was unanimously approved by the Chamber, and the President was instructed to appoint a committee of seven members for that purpose. In the sitting of Wednesday the Minister for War, replying to the questions of Signor Mordini, stated that the active army consisted of 380,000 infantry, 80 batteries of artillery, and 19 regiments of cavalry. This army was capable of defending the kingdom from any attack whatever, but the Minister could not say whether it was sufficient for Italy to make an attack alone and without allies. The state of the fortifications, he said, was excellent, and the mobilisation of the National Guard was nearly completed. The Budgets of War and Marine were subsequently approved by the Chamber. An official account of the state of the Treasury up to the end of December, 1863, reviewing the final results of the Budget of 1863 and the preceding years, was distributed on Wednesday among the members of the Chamber of Deputies. In this account the revenue is stated at 2,433,000,000 lire, and the expenditure at 2,668,000,000 lire, leaving a deficit of 235,000,000 lire. Part of this deficit is covered by a balance of 103,000,000 lire remaining in the Public Treasury on the 31st of December, and the remainder will be met out of the last loan of 200,000,000 lire. The evening journals publish details respecting a great number of documents seized at the house of Baron Conuza, in Rome.

POLAND.—According to the Russian registers the number of Poles transported to Siberia up to February last was 87,500. General Berg, alarmed at the effect of the Emancipation Committees in the provinces, intends recalling them to Warsaw.

RUSSIA.—The Russian Budget for 1864, which was published on Wednesday, shows an equilibrium. The public revenue is estimated at 401,000,000 roubles, of which 355,000,000 are from ordinary sources, 18,000,000 from Treasury Bonds, and 28,000,000 from the Anglo-Dutch Loan. The expenditure is estimated at 364,000,000 roubles, to which there are to be added 37,000,000 for extraordinary military expenses. The Journal de Bruxelles of Thursday, refuting some statements of Russian papers, says:—

"Russia declared to Prussia and Austria prior to the capture of Düppel that she would not oppose the annexation of the Duchies to Germany, provided that Austria and Prussia would promise to prevent the realisation of the establishment of a Scandinavian union."

CIRCASSIA.—Letters from St. Petersburg announce that, according to the Invalide Russe, the Grand Duke Michael had gone to Anauna, in order to facilitate another great emigration of Circassians, exceeding 100,000 persons of that nationality.

DANUBIAN PRINCIPALITIES.—A conspiracy to overthrow the Government of Prince Couza and effect the separation of the Principalities, with a return to the former regime, was discovered at Bucharest last week. The papers seized on the person of Dr. Lamberti, who had just arrived from Constantinople, showed the connivance of foreign enemies of the Prince. Dr. Lamberti was arrested with Prince Soutzo, formerly minister under Stirbey. He confessed his guilt, and acknowledged the authenticity of the documents signed by himself and by the other persons compromised in the affair. This news, which was published on the morning fixed for the plebiscite under the new electoral law, caused a profound sensation. Another reactionary conspiracy has since been discovered at Jassy. Deputy Balsch has been arrested. The papers of a so-called national committee have been seized. General indignation has been excited by this discovery. The result of the popular voting is almost everywhere unanimous in favour of Prince Couza.

SERVIA.—The Turkish Lieutenant, Ismail Bey, has been killed by the population of the Servian village of Vichimiz.

TURKEY.—Advices from Constantinople announce that the negotiations between England, the Porte, and the Viceroy of Egypt respecting the transport of troops to India have been satisfactorily concluded.

TUNIS.—In consequence of the spread of the insurrection, the French fleet has arrived at Tunis from Toulon. It is said that the instructions given to the Commissioner of the Porte at Tunis forbid him to take any steps without previous consultation with the French Consul-General. The English Consul-General has received orders to come to an understanding with the Consul-General of France to watch over the safety of French and English subjects.

MOROCCO.—The Pays of Thursday evening says that the French, English, and Italian Consuls in Morocco have addressed a note to the Government of that State demanding the withdrawal within a month of the orders prohibiting the Moors from trading with Europeans.

EGYPT.—At the request of the Sultan the Viceroy has ordered 3500 men to be despatched against the revolted Bedouins in Yemen. A telegram from Trieste states that England has concluded a convention with the Viceroy of Egypt for the passage of English troops.

INDIA.—By the Bombay mail we have news from that Presidency to April 29. The Viceroy left Calcutta on the 15th for the North-West. His Excellency was to halt especially at Bhagulpore, Benares, Allahabad, and Umballa, and proceed direct to Simla. The viceregal council were to assemble at Simla after the 1st of May, till further orders. The Hon. Ashley Eden has returned to Darjeeling from his mission to Bhootan, where he was grossly insulted in public Durbar by the Chief, and dismissed with great indignity, after having been compelled to sign a treaty making over to them the whole of Assam, including the tea estates held by Europeans, which are to be taken over at a valuation. Disturbances have broken out in Bhootan, in the Dhurm Raj territory. The Deb Raja has been dismissed, and a number of interior landholders and officers have sought refuge in British territory. A conspiracy on the part of the sirdars in Cabool has been discovered by intercepted letters, which they had written to Utzul Khan, urging him to march on the city. Sirdars Auzeem Khan and Ufzul Khan, the elder brothers of the Ameer by a different mother, were collecting their respective forces, with the intention of attacking Cabool. The Ameer has besought the aid of the British Government in money and troops. Colonel Eden, the Political Agent at Oodeypoor, in Central India, was mobbed on the 31st of March by 300 or 400 persons, who rushed into the Residency, shouting and violently gesticulating and throwing stones. Colonel Eden has rendered himself unpopular with certain evil-disposed persons, who feel aggrieved by his prohibition of the custom of human sacrifices. The State prisoners of the Royal house of Delhi, now confined at Rangoon, having, on the death of the ex-King, applied for leave to return to Delhi or some part of the North-Western Provinces, Sir Charles Wood has refused their application. The four Italian gentlemen who had been imprisoned by the King of Bokhara, have been released at the solicitation of Sirdar Mahomed Ufzul Khan. The Bill providing for the solemnisation of marriages in India of persons professing the Christian religion has been passed and received the confirmation of the Viceroy. It is currently reported that Sir Charles Trevelyan proceeds to England in December next, and that his successor will be Mr. Forster, one of Her Majesty's Finance Commissioners. It has been decided to open the Bombay, Baroda, and Central India line of railway from Bombay through to Ahmedabad on the 1st of June next for passenger traffic, and immediately after the monsoon for goods traffic.

UNITED STATES.—Further details of the great battles in Virginia have been received this week. It appears that after the Federal army had crossed the Rapidan, the first battle was fought at Wilderness on the 5th. General Sedgwick advanced on the right, General Hancock on the left, and General Warren on the centre. Strong resistence was offered by the Confederates, under Generals Hill, Longstreet, and Ewell, and fighting continued along the whole Federal line until nightfall. In this day's battle the Confederates are reported to have captured nearly the whole of two Federal brigades, together with their commanders—Seymour and Shaler. On the 6th the engagement was renewed, and continued throughout the day with little abatement, the fighting being the most desperate that has been known in modern times. In the forenoon Hancock was driven back, the Confederates repossessing themselves of some of the ground lost on the previous day. Sedgwick, on the right, was thrown into confusion, but reformed, supported by Burnside's reserves. Late in the day the Confederates pierced the Federal centre, pushing the Federals so far back as nearly to detach their right wing. At the close of the evening the advantage appeared to be on the side of the Confederates. A large number of prisoners were both lost and captured on both sides. Nearly the whole of the 7th Pennsylvania Regiment was taken by the Confederates, and Generals Wadsworth and Hays were killed, and Getty wounded. The Confederate Generals Longstreet and Pegram were severely wounded, and General Jenkins was killed. After the battle General Lee commenced a retreat during the night in good order by the direct road to take up another line of defence, and on the 7th General Grant, who had consolidated his lines, began the pursuit. General Hancock passed through Spottsylvania Court House on the 8th, and on the same day Grant's headquarters were 20 miles south of the battle field of the 6th. During these movements the firing was of a desultory nature, both armies manœuvring. Before night, however, the 5th Federal Army Corps were engaged three miles north of Spottsylvania Court House with General Ewell and part of Longstreet's corps, which had reached Spottsylvania by an inner road. The Federals held their position, but suffered heavily in killed and wounded. Grant was then reported to be two miles north of Spottsylvania Court House, with Lee in his front, Ewell holding the heights north of that place. Grant's losses up to that time were estimated at 27,000 men. On the 9th Lee made a stand at Spottsylvania Court House. Hard fighting occurred, but no general engagement ensued. General Sedgwick was killed by sharpshooters. Grant showed no signs of renewing the attack, being engaged in replenishing his stores from the supply train, in order to be able to advance without that incumbrance. Generals Getty, Talbot, Morris, Robinson, and Baxter were wounded. On the 10th General Grant fought another sanguinary battle with Lee, which lasted from the afternoon until dark. Grant's lines extended six miles along the north-east bank of the river Po, the Confederates occupying the south-east bank and the village of Spottsylvania. The attack was commenced by the artillery of Gen. Grant. Towards dark Burnside was ordered to charge the Confederate right flank, when it was discovered that Lee had advanced round the Federal right flank, and was moving down to break through Grant's lines, and had captured all his supply trains in the Fredericksburg plank-road. This checked Burnside's intended movement, but he held his ground, threatening the Confederate right, while the Sixth Corps charged the Confederate centre, driving the Confederates from their first line of rifle pits, and capturing 2000 prisoners. Meanwhile General Sheridan, chief of Grant's cavalry, destroyed eight miles of railway in Lee's rear, and effected the recapture of 500 Federal prisoners. In consequence of Lee's movement Grant placed his troops about, and having moved his trains to the rear, secured a new position for his artillery; but Lee did not follow up the movement. During the night he was reported to be moving. Grant's losses were then estimated to have reached 40,000 in killed, wounded, and missing, and General Warren was reported to be among the killed. Johnston's position at Resaca was found too strong for attack. There was no fighting on the 11th, but Gen. Grant reports that during the night General Hancock changed his position from the right to the left centre of the Federal line, and at half-past 4 o'clock on the morning of the 12th assaulted Lee's right, which he turned, capturing 25 cannon and 3000 prisoners, among whom were Generals Edward Johnson, Robert Johnson, and George Stewart. Subsequent official and other despatches show that Hancock's achievement was less decisive than at first represented; but two Generals, Edward Johnson and George Stewart, were taken prisoners. Of the cannon reported captured many remained on disputed ground on the night of the 18th, while it is not perfectly clear that a number of them were not recaptured by the Confederates. No success whatever attended the Federals at other points of the line, their assaults against Lee's centre and left being invariably repulsed with great slaughter, and at nightfall the Confederates maintained their position in front of Spottsylvania Court House. The carnage during the day is described as awful, and the men on both sides are said to have fallen like grain. No estimate of the losses on either side is given; but General Grant's losses are known to have been terrible in the eight days' fighting; and are now estimated at 45,000. The 9th New York Regiment has but 15 men left, and the 73d lost 620 out of 700. Robinson's division was almost annihilated, and many other organisations have suffered dreadfully. In addition to the Federal Generals Sedgwick, Wadsworth, and Hays, previously mentioned, Generals Rice, Owens, Stevenson, and Crawford, are among the killed. It is also said that General Lee was wounded in the last battle. On the 13th it was reported that during the night General Lee had withdrawn across the River Po, to occupy a stronger position on the North and South Anna rivers. This report, however, was untrue. General Lee's centre and left still maintain their positions in front of Spottsylvania Court-house. On the 13th inst. Meade announced to the Federal troops that they had captured 18 cannon, 22 colours, and 8,000 prisoners; but that their work was not yet over, and exhorted them to renewed courage and fortitude. No general engagement has occurred since the 12th. Heavy rains have prevented Grant from advancing; but it is believed that, in reality, he has been compelled to await the arrival of reinforcements. 50,000 are asserted to have been sent. An impression gains ground that General Grant's losses are larger, and the present condition of his army less favourable than was previously supposed. Southern papers state that all the damage done by the Federals to Lee's communications has been repaired. General Sheridan penetrated to the outer line of the Richmond defences, where he was attacked by Stuart's cavalry, and driven into Butler's lines at Turkey Island Bend, on James River, with the loss of upwards of 1000 men killed, wounded, and missing. He reports, under date the 9th, having destroyed portions of the Fredericksburg and the Virginia Central Railways, and a large quantity of rolling stock and stores. Confederate despatches of the 11th, however announce that the Virginia Central Railway had been restored to running order. Official despatches from General Butler state that on the 16th, during a thick fog, the Confederates surprised Baldy Smith's forces, and drove them from their position in great confusion and with heavy loss. The Federals subsequently rallied, and the Confederates returned to their defences. General Butler was also attacked at the same time, and forced to retire to his intrenchments, near James River. The Federal General Sigel has been attacked at Newmarket, in Shenandoah Valley, by Breckinridge, and driven to Strasburg, with a loss of nearly 1000 men and five cannon. General Beauregard, on the 11th, made a detour to the west of the Petersburg and Richmond Railway, marching in the direction of Richmond, and is believed to have joined Lee. Despatches from General Sherman state that, by a flank movement against Resaca, he has compelled Johntson to evacuate Dalton. An engagement between the armies of those Generals ensued on the following day, which was continued on the 15th. Sherman admits a loss of 3000 killed and wounded. At midnight Johnston's forces evacuated Resaca, retiring towards Rome. Sherman is reported to be pursuing. Letters from New Orleans of the 7th announce that General Banks is endeavouring to reach Brashear city with his army, his retreat from Alexandria via the Red River being cut off by the erection of Confederate batteries on the banks of that stream. A portion of his army has been compelled to march overland to the Mississippi River, fighting its way out. The steamers Ohio, Belli, Laurel Hill, Bella Donna, and Mittie Stephens, with supplies and reinforcements for Banks, have been sunk or captured below Alexandria. All Admiral Porter's gunboats are above the falls of the Red River, and, as the Confederates have turned the waters of the river into other channels, their capture is considered inevitable. The steamer Fulton, from Port Royal, reports a general engagement in progress between Admiral Dahlgren's fleet and Confederate batteries in Charleston, including Sumter, on the 15th. General M'Dowell has been appointed to the command of the military department of the Pacific, and will leave for California immediately. This step is supposed to have been taken in view of the possibility of a rupture with France on the Mexican question. The House of Representatives on the 11th adopted a resolution to drop from the army rolls all unemployed General officers, including Generals M'Clellan and Fremont, and has since passed the Bill giving to soldiers and sailors, both white and coloured, homesteads from confiscated Confederate estates. President Lincoln has issued a proclamation stating that sufficient was known of the Federal operations to give cause for special gratitude to God, and recommending all patriots to return thanks to Him. Congratulatory visits were paid by the Washington citizens to the President, when he made a speech, in which he said that, although Grant had met with stubborn resistance, he was not forced back from the line of operations on which he had started, but was advancing on the line he had marked out before the movement commenced. On the other hand General Lee has issued a report in which he thanks God that every advance of Grant had been repulsed. Some of the New York papers of the 18th publish a proclamation, purporting to be issued by President Lincoln on the previous day, which, after presenting the military situation in a most gloomy light, and appointing the 26th for fasting and prayer, concluded by calling for 400,000 fresh troops, for whom a peremptory draught was to be made immediately after the 15th proximo, if not furnished by that time by volunteering. It was ascertained in the course of the morning that the document was a forgery. The Governor of Kentucky has issued a call for 10,000 troops, to serve for six months, to come to the rescue of the country, finish the war, and save the Government. Newberg despatches of the 7th state that, in an attack upon the Confederate ram Albemarle, in Albemarle Sound, by seven Federal gunboats, the boiler of the Sacres was exploded by a shot from the Albemarle. One man was killed and several others injured by scalding. A number of men on the other gunboats were killed or wounded. The Albemarle was uninjured. The Richmond Whig of the 9th publishes despatches to Secretary Mallory, of the Confederate Navy Department, announcing the destruction by the Florida, in the West Indies, of the Huntsville and another Federal gunboat. The New York Chamber of Commerce has appointed a committee to receive subscriptions to pay the interest of the State debt to foreigners in coin. The Richmond Examiner of the 2d reports the death of the second son of the Confederate President Davis, aged 4 years. He fell from the portico of the house, a distance of 15 feet, fracturing his hip and injuring his head so severely that he died after lingering a day or two. The Message of President Davis to the Confederate Congress has been published. As so short a time has elapsed since the adjournment of the last Congress, the document is not very long. The following is a summary:—

"We see no prospect of an early change in the course heretofore pursued by the European Governments. It is enough to know that every avenue of negotiation is closed against us; that our enemy is making renewed and strenuous efforts for our destruction, and that the sole resource for us, as a people secure in the justice of our cause, and holding our liberties to be more precious than all other earthly possessions, is to combine and apply every available element of power for their defence and preservation." On the subject of the currency, the Secretary of the Treasury will ask Congress to relieve him of the power, which he supposes to be conferred by the existing law, of issuing currency to the full amount of all received into the Treasury, either by funding or exchange. The currency circulation, say 230,000,000 dollars, on the 1st July, is ample for the business requirements of the country, and the addition of 200,000,000 dollars would be attended by disastrous effects, and would "produce the speedy recurrence of the evils from which the funding law has rescued the country." The efficiency of our armies in the field is all that can be desired, and "the discipline and instruction of the troops have kept pace with their improvement in material and equipment." Various recommendations, contained in the report of the Secretary of War, are recapitulated by the President. Among the subjects referred to are an amendment of the law depriving officers in the field of the privilege of purchasing rations; an increase in the allowance of officers travelling under orders; provision for invalid officers resigned in consequence of wounds or sickness; the tenure of office of general officers of the provisional army; the organisation of the general staff of the army. The recent events of the war are highly creditable to our troops, exhibiting energy and vigilance combined with the habitual gallantry which they have taught us to expect on all occasions. We have been cheered by important and valuable successes in Florida, Northern Mississippi, Western Tennessee, and Kentucky, Western Louisiana, and Eastern North Carolina, reflecting the highest honour on the skill and conduct of our commanders, and on the incomparable soldiers whom it is their privilege to lead. A naval attack on Mobile was so successfully repulsed at the outer works that the attempt was abandoned, and the nine months' siege of Charleston has been practically suspended, leaving the noble city and its fortresses imperishable monuments to the skill and fortitude of its defenders. The armies in Northern Georgia and Northern Virginia still oppose with unshaken front a formidable barrier to the progress of the invader; and our generals, armies, and people are animated by cheerful confidence. The Message calls attention to the fact that the Congress, under the Provisional Government, held four sessions, and the first Congress of the permanent Government also held four sessions, and now the second Congress under the permanent Government is assembled at the time and place appointed by law: 'All these events have passed into history, notwithstanding the threat of our prompt subjugation made three years ago, by a people that presume to assert a title to govern States whose separate and independent sovereignty was recognised by treaty with France and Great Britain in the last century, and remained unquestioned for nearly three generations. Yet these very Governments, in disregard of duty and treaty obligations which bind them to recognise, as independent, Virginia and other Confederate States, persist in countenancing by moral influence, if not in aiding by unfair and partial action, the claim set up by the executive of a foreign government to exercise despotic sway over the States thus recognised, and treat the invasion of them by their former limited and special agent as though it were the attempt of a sovereign to suppress a rebellion against lawful authority."

Peru.—Advices from the Pacific report that in consequence of outrages on Spanish subjects the Spanish Admiral has commenced offensive operations against Peru. He has seized the Chincha Islands, and attempted the capture of the Peruvian fleet at Callao

HOUSE OF LORDS.

Monday.—The House met for the first time since the Whitsuntide recess. The Earl of Derby, referring to a speech of the Lord Chancellor upon the Greek Professorship Bill on a former night, in which the noble and learned lord charged the University of Oxford with a breach of faith in having failed to endow the professorship, contended that the university had strictly and honourably fulfilled all the engagements into which it had entered.—The Lord Chancellor readily exonerated the university from having committed a breach of any distinct undertaking, but censured it for having failed to discharge its obligations to make adequate provision for the Greek professor.—Earl Granville also condemned the course pursued by the university; after which the subject dropped.—The Lord Chancellor moved the second reading of the County Courts Acts Amendment Bill.—Lord Brougham was of opinion that the Bill required amendment in committee.—Lord St. Leonards said that this was a question of great social importance. By the existing law a debt was recoverable for a period of six years from the time of its contract, acknowledgment, or part payment, but the present Bill declared that no debt under 20*l*. should be recoverable after the expiration of a year from the time of its being due. He saw no reason for this reduction of the term of six years to one year, and he was certainly of opinion that the period within which small debts might be recoverable ought not to be less than three years. In his opinion, the Bill was one which would have as wide an operation as it was possible to conceive, and, if passed into law, it might fairly be called a Bill for stopping the credit of the labouring classes. He strongly objected to County Courts being turned into Courts of Equity.—Lord Chelmsford looked upon the Bill as involving a social question of the highest importance; it was a question which required the most cautious deliberation. He should not offer any opposition to the second reading of the Bill, but its future progress required to be watched very narrowly.—Lord Lyveden supported the Bill.—Lord Cranworth approved the material features of the Bill, and gave his cordial assent to the second reading. The Bill was read a second time. The Under-Secretaries Indemnity Bill and Common Law Procedure (Ireland) Act (1853) Amendment Bill were read a third time and passed. Their lordships then adjourned to Thursday.

Thursday.—Prussian Exactions in Jutland.—The Earl of Ellenborough called attention to the recent accounts of the state of Jutland, and said that the Prussians engaged, by the terms of the armistice, not to interfere with the commerce of the country, or to levy any war contributions. It could scarcely be said that either of these conditions had been complied with. He attributed the conduct of Germany to the decrease of the influence of England on the Continent, and protested against the principle that the wealth and power of this country were never to be employed in the defence of right against might. He suggested that our policy had been in some measure controlled by the natural prejudices of the Queen in favour of Germany, and urged the Government, whatever difficulties it might experience, to pursue a real English policy, and concluded by asking whether the recent proceedings in Jutland had been in conformity with the engagements of the armistice.—Earl Russell said the whole facts of the case had not been ascertained with sufficient certainty for any final decision to be formed on them. He understood the Prussian Government, having received evidence that the captures of German ships and cargoes amounted in value to 90,000*l*., ordered Marshal Wrangel to make a levy of an equal sum in the Danish province of Jutland. The noble lord also gave some details as to the contributions demanded in provisions. He defended the policy of the Government in declining to plunge England into war either for Poland or Denmark, quoting the useless sacrifices made in past wars as a warning against engaging in hostilities except in direct defence of the honour or interests of the nation. Whatever measures the Government had taken had been freely sanctioned by her Majesty. For anything, therefore, that had been done her Majesty's Ministers alone were responsible, and his share of that responsibility he was quite ready to meet.—Lord Brougham bore testimony to the unanimity of opinion, both in France and England, against the conduct of Prussia and Austria to Denmark. Earl Grey regretted that having determined not to go to war in behalf of Poland, the Government should have entered into an irritating and scolding correspondence with Russia. The subject then dropped.—The Duke of Buccleuch moved the second reading of the Scottish Episcopal Clergy Disabilities Removal Bill, the object of which was to repeal the present laws, which prevent persons ordained in the Scottish Episcopal Church from holding benefices or officiating in England.—Earl Granville doubted whether there was sufficient information before the House to warrant it in proceeding with the Bill. He would not, however, oppose the second reading, on the understanding that the measure would be referred to a Select Committee.—The Archbishop of Canterbury expressed his concurrence with this suggestion.—The Bishop of Durham moved that the Bill be read a second time that day six months. He opposed it on the ground that the doctrines of the Scottish Episcopal Church differed from those of the Church of England, and that it would tend to reduce the educational status of the clergy.—The Bishop of London and the Bishop of Oxford supported the Bill. After a short conversation the amendment was withdrawn, and the Bill was read a second time and referred to a select committee.—The Divorce and Matrimonial Causes Amendment Bill, and the Penal Servitude Act Amendment Bill, were read a second time. The Fish Tonds (Scotland) Bill passed through committee.

Friday.—School Inspectors.—Lord Brougham inquired if her Majesty's Government intended to appoint inspectors of middle-class schools.—Earl Granville replied that the subject had been under the consideration of the Committee of Council on Education, but they did not see their way clear to appoint inspectors of schools that did not receive support from the Government, but were simply private speculations.—Earl Stanhope called attention to the report of the Public Schools Commission, and especially to the course of inspection which is therein discussed, and inquired as to the intention of her Majesty's Government. He also moved for copies of any minute of the Treasury Board, or resolution of the Committee of the Privy Council respecting the recent report of the Commission. [Left speaking]

HOUSE OF COMMONS.

Friday.—China.—Mr. Baxter called attention to the state of affairs in China, and asked for explanations as to the policy of the Government in regard to that country.—Lord Palmerston, in reply, said that it was not the intention of the Government to direct interference with military or naval services in China beyond the protection to be afforded to the treaty ports. He defended the policy of the Government in reference to China, contending that it was in accordance with the wishes of the people and of the commercial classes especially. He also urged that we were bound to maintain our treaty rights for the protection of our own interests, and said that even if the Taepings were to obtain the upper hand to-morrow, they would be unable to form a Government, as their success would be but the prelude to widespread revolution and ruin. He hoped that the House would not extend its sympathy to a horde of ragamuffins who had perpetrated the greatest cruelties, and who had shown how utterly unworthy they were to accede to power by laying waste every district over which they had obtained temporary possession.—Mr. Liddell considered the answer of the noble lord to be most unsatisfactory, as it indicated that he was altogether unacquainted with the facts of the case. He warned the House how it proceeded in a line of policy which must eventually prove disastrous to British interests. After some observations from Lord Naas and Colonel Sykes and the other members, the subject dropped. The War with Ashantee.—Sir J. Pakington asked what causes had led to the war with the King of Ashantee; whether there was any prospect of her Majesty's troops being relieved from the destructive effects of that climate by a peaceful solution of the question; and whether the papers would be laid on the table.—Mr. Cardwell, having stated the origin of the war, and disavowed any ideas of territorial conquest, said that transports would be sent to the Gold Coast to remove all the troops who could not be accommodated by the ordinary means; that the troops would be withdrawn from the interior; that the stockades would be given up to the native chiefs to protect the River Prah; and that any stores which could not be conveniently removed would also be handed over to friendly natives. The House then went into committee of supply on the Miscellaneous Estimates, and the vote on account of ambassadors' residences abroad and one or two others were agreed to. At half-past 7 a member moved that the House be counted, and the Speaker having ascertained that 40 members were not present, an adjournment took place to Monday.

MONDAY.—Prussian Exactions in Jutland.—On the motion for the adjournment of the House over the Queen's birthday and the Derby-day, Mr. WHITESIDE again called attention to the forced contributions raised by the Prussians in Jutland three days after the news of the armistice had reached that place, and inquired whether it was not one of the terms of the armistice that these outrages should be discontinued.—Mr. LAYARD said that on Friday evening he had received from the Prussian Ambassador a communication to the effect that Count Bismarck had assured him that instructions had been given to the military authorities not to make any forced contributions after the 11th inst., and that if such had been made they would be restored. The terms of the armistice were clearly that all such exactions should be abandoned. In reply to Mr. D. GRIFFITH, Lord PALMERSTON said that, under the terms of the armistice, it was arranged that, from the day on which it was signed, the German troops were to pay for all the provisions they required from the subjects of the King of Denmark. The Iron Clads.—Lord C. PAGET stated, in answer to Sir J. HAY, that it was not true that the arrangements contrived by Mr. Reed for carrying heavy ordnance, as recently tried on board the Research, had reduced the vessel to a state of wreck; on the contrary, all the damage done on board the vessel was confined to the demolition of some crockery and bulk-heads. The motion for the adjournment of the House was then agreed to. On the order for the second reading of the Vacating of Seats (House of Commons) Bill, a brief discussion arose, and explanations were given by Sir G. GREY and the ATTORNEY GENERAL. The Bill was read a second time. The Pier and Harbour Orders Confirmation Bill, which stood for committal, was ordered to be referred to a Select Committee, as regarded certain objects of the Bill. The Army Prize (Shares of Deceased) Bill was read a second time. On the order for the second reading of the Beerhouses (Ireland) Bill,—Sir R. PEEL explained the objects of the measure, observing that it did not involve a question of revenue, but of morals and public policy.—After some remarks by Lord J. MANNERS, Mr. BAGWELL, Mr. SCLATER-BOOTH, and Sir G. GREY, Colonel DICKSON suggested that the Bill should be withdrawn, and another introduced of a wider scope. —Mr. HENLEY thought, if the object of the Bill was simply to prevent adulteration and check drunkenness, it should not be confined to Ireland. After some further discussion, the Bill was read a second time. The Limited Penalties Bill passed the Committee. The Chain Cables and Anchors Bill was recommitted, and received amendments. The Chief Rents (Ireland) Bill passed through Committee. Bank Notes in Scotland.—In a Committee of the whole House, Sir J. HAY moved for leave to bring in a Bill to authorise the Governor and Company of the Bank of England to issue their notes in Scotland, and to make such notes a legal tender there. After a short discussion the motion was agreed to. —Sir H. BRUCE obtained leave to bring in a Bill to alter the days for shooting Game in Ireland.—On the motion of Mr. DILLWYN, the Select Committee on the Patent-office Library and Museum was nominated.—Colonel FRENCH moved for copy of the award made by the Senate of Hamburg in the case of Captain Melville White, explaining the nature of the case.—Mr. LAYARD did not object, and the motion was agreed to.—The CHANCELLOR of the EXCHEQUER, after explaining the object he had in view, moved, in a Committee of the whole House, a resolution that it is expedient to enable certain Banking Co partnerships which shall discontinue the issue of their own bank-notes to sue and be sued by their public officer. The resolution was agreed to.

THURSDAY.—The Ionian Islands.—Mr. CARDWELL stated, in reply to Mr. SMOLLETT, that Thursday, the 2d June, was fixed for transferring the Ionian Islands from the protectorate of Queen Victoria to the sovereignty of the King of the Hellenes, and that Sir Henry Storks, the Lord High Commissioner, had not published any constitution for the islands. Poland.—On the motion for going into Committee of Supply, Mr. HENNESSY moved the following resolutions:—"That the negotiations of her Majesty's Government respecting Poland have not terminated in a satisfactory manner; that it appears from the papers laid before Parliament that the conditions on which the British Government agreed to acknowledge the dominion of Russia in Poland have not been fulfilled by Russia; and that this House is of opinion that Her Majesty's Government is no longer bound to recognise the sovereignty of Russia in Poland." After giving a history of the circumstances which led to the subjugation of Poland, he argued at great length that the conduct of Russia had disentitled her to any sovereign rights over that country, and that her violation of the stipulations of the Treaty of Vienna deprived her of the sympathy or countenance of European nations.—Lord PALMERSTON, although concurring in much that had fallen from Mr. Hennessy, was not prepared to give his assent to the resolutions. He agreed with the hon. gentleman in condemning that great European crime—the partition of Poland, and he was prepared to go with him in stigmatising the conduct of Russia. This was not, however, the question which the House had to decide. Her Majesty's Government had, during the last two years, made repeated representations to Russia in reference to her treatment of Poland, and the only alternative left them was to go to war, which would have been an act of insanity. If he were asked whether, in his opinion, Russia had not forfeited her sovereign claims on Poland, he would be inclined to agree with Mr. Hennessy that she had; but he contended that it would not be to the dignity of the House of Commons, nay more, that it would be ridiculous to agree to the resolutions unless it was also prepared to agree to an address to the Crown to follow up the sentence of forfeiture by execution. Some advantage had been gained for the Poles by the diplomatic admissions of Russia that she held Poland, not by the right of conquest, but by treaty obligations, and that when the revolution was quelled she intended to observe them. To pass the resolutions now proposed would have the effect of depriving the Poles of this diplomatic protection. He hoped, therefore, that the House would not agree to them, but would proceed with the committee of supply. After a few words from Mr. GRANT DUFF and Sir F. GOLDSMID, Mr. V. SCULLY expressed his intention to support the resolutions, which appeared to him to be couched in temperate language, and the substance of which the noble lord at the head of the Government had himself admitted to be true.—Mr. S. FITZGERALD was surprised at the language held by Lord Palmerston, who had, he said, merely thrown dust in the eyes of the House by contending that her Majesty's Government had done all in their power on behalf of Poland, whereas the correspondence proved that when Austria and France were ready to follow up diplomacy by other means, their action had been paralysed by her Majesty's Government. The noble lord had stated that it would be undignified and ridiculous to use strong language unless we were prepared to go to war, but this declaration came with a bad grace from the authors of the recent extraordinary correspondence on the subject of Denmark.—Mr. LAYARD taunted Mr. FITZGERALD with using strong language without the sense of official responsibility, and contended that public opinion had pronounced against plunging the country into war on account of Poland.—Mr. HENESSY expressed his intention to withdraw the motion, but some members objecting, it was ultimately negatived without a division.—Mr. A. SMITH moved that the Miscellaneous Civil Service Estimates, Class 2, be referred to a Select Committee to examine the same in reference to the past Expenditure for the Civil Services, and to report to the House any reductions, better arrangement, or other particulars, which in their opinion deserve the attention of the House when the said Estimates are under their consideration.—The motion was seconded by Sir J. SHELLEY, but the SPEAKER ruled that, after the result of the last motion, this question could not be put.—After a few remarks and explanations by Mr. F. PEEL in reply to Mr. SMITH, and an objection urged by Mr. W. WILLIAMS to voting money on account, Mr. FERRAND put a question regarding Superannuations in the Dockyards, which was answered by Lord C. PAGET.—The House then went into a Committee of Supply, when Lord C. PAGET entered into a very long and detailed explanation of the several heads of the Supplementary Navy Estimate, embracing the proposals of the Government for increasing the active pay, and a scheme of improving the retired allowances of various grades of officers of the Royal Navy, in consequence of the report and recommendations of the Select Committee of last year. He ended by moving the first vote of 55,266*l*. After a protracted discussion, this and the other votes were agreed to and ordered to be reported. The report on the Bank Acts was brought up and agreed to, and a Bill was ordered to be brought in. On the report of the Union Assessment Committee Act Amendment Bill, some new clauses were added. The Highways Act Amendment Bill was read a second time, and ordered to be referred to a Select Committee. The Vacating of Seats (House of Commons) Bill, and the Army Prize (Shares of Deceased) Bill passed through Committee. Other Bills were forwarded a stage.

FRIDAY.—The Prussians in Jutland.—In answer to Mr. D. GRIFFITH, Lord PALMERSTON said that the last accounts he had received stated that the Germans in Schleswig and Jutland were supplied not by the contributions of the people of the country, but by contracts made at Hamburg. Orders had been issued that all contributions, either in money or kind, from and after the date of the armistice, should be restored and refunded to the persons from whom they had been taken. The Banda and Kirwee Booty.—Sir S. NORTHCOTE moved an address to her Majesty praying the distribution of this booty. The motion raised the whole question of army prizes, the distribution of which was in a most unsatisfactory state. The commission on the subject fully justified the complaints that had been made as to the existing system.—Lord PALMERSTON admitted the necessity of an inquiry into this subject, but considered that it should be referred to the High Court of Admiralty as a more proper tribunal to deal with the question than that House. [Left sitting.]

Metropolis and its Vicinity.

THE QUEEN'S BIRTHDAY.—On Tuesday her Majesty's birthday was kept with all the old demonstrations of state and rejoicing, which have not been observed since the last public celebration of the day before the death of the Prince Consort in 1861. As usual, it was a strict holiday in all Government offices, and in many of the leading firms also. The usual salutes were fired from the Tower and the Park, flags were displayed on all public buildings and down the long tiers of shipping in the river, while from the steeples of the churches of the three Royal parishes of Westminster, Kensington, and St. Martin-in-the-Fields came peals of joy bells, both morning and evening. This revival of the old usages of the day was associated with another which has not now been observed for four years—the customary inspection of the Household troops on the Parade behind the Horse Guards. The Princess of Wales, accompanied by the Princess Mary of Cambridge and Prince Arthur, drove from Marlborough House to the Horse Guards soon after 10 o'clock, and took her seat in the centre window of the Horse Guards overlooking the Parade. The instant the Princess was recognised she was enthusiastically cheered by the crowds that had assembled to witness the ceremony. The Prince rode from Marlborough House with the Duke of Cambridge. His Royal Highness wore his uniform as colonel of the 10th Hussars, the Duke his uniform as colonel of the Grenadiers. Their Royal Highnesses were attended by a brilliant staff. The troops were drawn up in saluting line to receive the two Princes; every window which commanded a view of the ceremony was thronged with ladies, and the whole scene was, on a small scale, as brilliant and effective a military spectacle as is ever likely to be seen in London. The troops received their Royal Highnesses with the Royal salute, presenting arms and lowering colours with an instantaneousness of sound and movement which was marvellous in its precision. The usual inspection of the line was then gone through, with the trooping of the colours, and while this was done the combined bands were brigaded and played a well-chosen selection of marches. Indeed, throughout the whole ceremony the music never slackened, so that on the whole it may be said to have been quite as much a musical fête as a military display. The ceremony of inspection concluded with the marching past of the Guards at slow and quick time. After the marching past their Royal Highnesses returned as they had come upon the ground, everywhere receiving ardent proofs of the most affectionate respect. The Foot Guards, according to ancient custom, marched back to the Court of St. James's Palace, when the bands were again brigaded and gave an exquisite concert of military music, which lasted throughout the forenoon. In the evening the customary State banquets were given by the principal Ministers and great Officers of State, and at night the Ministers' houses, the Clubs, the Theatres, and Government Offices, with the shops of the leading royal tradesmen, were brilliantly illuminated, and the streets of the West End were crowded as usual on such occasions.

Launch of the Prince Albert.—On Monday another important addition was made to our iron-clad fleet by the successful launch of this fine vessel from Messrs. Samuda's yard at Poplar. The Prince Albert has a double claim to defensive strength, inasmuch as she is not only ironcased, but has her battery in cupolas, or circular iron turrets also. Her general principle of construction is almost precisely similar to that of the Warrior, Black Prince, and others of our armour ships. Extra strength is given by longitudinal bracings; there are wing passages along the broadside, which virtually make her a double ship, and instead of an external keel she has two bilge plates at each side, which are supposed to answer the same purpose in giving her stability. The plating, too, is the same as on the Warrior, 4½ inches of iron and 18 inches of teak, but is extended from end to end, instead of only over the broadside. At the extreme end of the bows and stern, however, the thickness of the armour is diminished gradually to 3 inches, and instead of going 5 feet below the water-line, as in other armour clads, it is only taken down 4 feet. Her upper deck is of pine, with a three-quarter inch iron deck beneath it to keep out shells. She is to be furnished with furnaces for heating shot and melting iron, and is to be driven by engines of 500-horse power nominal. Her tonnage is 2529, her length 240 feet, and her breadth 48 feet. The screw is to be four-bladed, and not to lift. On deck are to be four turrets or shields, as they are indifferently called, with an iron-plated pilot-house in the bows. Three of the turrets are 22 feet diameter and one of 20 feet. The pilot-house is a mere oval about 6 feet wide by 12 feet long, but plated, like the turrets, with 5½ inches of armour over 7 inches of diagonal planking. All these turrets, of course, are moveable, and are revolved on turn-tables worked from the main deck below. Two of the turrets, it is understood, are to carry two guns each, and two are to carry one each of the heaviest calibre that can be got. Her total armament is intended to throw a weight of metal of 1120 lb., against the Warrior's 884 lb., though the crew of the Prince Albert will be only 150, against the 700 men of the Warrior. All the turrets being placed amidships the bulwarks round the upper deck have to be moveable, and are accordingly made of light iron fastened by hinges to the deck, so as to be capable of being lowered at a moment's notice, leaving the guns free to fire anywhere. The ship was launched with the lower streak of armour on from end to end, and with the midship portion of her broadside entirely plated. The rest of her fitting and equipment will be proceeded with at Woolwich, but nearly, if not quite, a year is likely to elapse before she is commissioned and afloat an effective member of the Channel squadron.

A Royal Present from Australia.—The Customs' authorities at Southampton received an order from the Commissioners of the Treasury on Saturday to deliver duty free a magnificent gold casket, brought home last week by the Delhi, as a bridal gift from the ladies of New South Wales to the Princess of Wales. It measures about 8 in. in width by 4 in. in depth and across, and is lined with rich velvet. The casket is ornamented with wreaths of flowers, and the key represents an opossum on a tree, the whole being of solid gold. The workmanship is most beautiful, and the chasing very elaborate, the casket being altogether one of surpassing richness and beauty. It is valued at 700*l.*, and the duty upon it, at 17*s.* per ounce, would amount to quite 100*l.*

Westminster Abbey.—On Thursday afternoon the Prince and Princess of Wales attended divine service in Westminster Abbey, the Archbishop of Canterbury having undertaken to plead the cause of the Clergy Orphan Asylum. The service was held in the nave, and admission was by ticket. Long before the service began every part of the nave was crowded, and many persons remained standing for between two and three hours. The Prince and Princess arrived at the Poet's Corner at 3 o'clock, and were received by the Dean, who conducted them to seats on the Dean's left hand, the Archbishop of Canterbury and the Canons being on the right. Nearly all the Abbey clergy were present, and among the congregation in the reserved seats were the Bishops of Lichfield, Ripon, and Rochester, Bishop Chapman, of Eton College, the Dean of Windsor, Archdeacon Hale, Earl Cathcart, the Countess of Zetland, Lord and Lady Dynevor, the Earl and Countess of Longford, &c. Prayers were chanted by the Rev. S. F. Jones, and the lessons were read by the Dean. The music performed was as follows:—Responses (Tallis); Chant (J. Forster); Service (Turle, in D); Anthem, "Blessed be Thou" (Kent). Before the sermon, Psalm cxix., v. 9, "Wherewithal shall a young man cleanse his way?" Mr. Turle presided at the organ, and in the voluntary, which he played before service, introduced some unmistakable soupçons of "God Save the Queen." The Archbishop of Canterbury preached the sermon from Jeremiah, c. xlix., v. 11.—"Leave thy fatherless children; I will preserve them alive, and let thy widows trust in me." His Grace spoke of a special Providence watching over all poor children, of the unseen influences surrounding every one, of God's promise never to forsake His people, and then made a practical application of the subject by a touching appeal on behalf of the widows and orphans of clergymen. The collection amounted to 164*l.* After the service the Dean accompanied their Royal Highnesses to the Deanery, where refreshments were served to a select party of about 20 persons. The Prince and Princess Louis of Hesse joined the illustrious party at the Deanery. About half-past 5 o'clock the Royal carriages drove up to the Deanery, and much interest was shown as the Prince and Princess of Wales made their appearance, accompanied by the Dean and Lady Augusta Stanley. Their Royal Highnesses drove off amid the respectful salutations of the people.

National Rifle Association.—The May general meeting of this Association was held on Thursday afternoon at Willis's Rooms, the Duke of Cambridge, President of the Association, in the chair, supported by Lord Grosvenor, Lord Ducie, Lord Tankerville, the Marquis of Donegal, Lord Radstock, Lord Bolton, Lord West, Lord Elcho, M.P.; Lord Bury, M.P.; Hon. Arthur Kinnaird, M.P.; and numerous military and volunteer officers. Lord Elcho read a report stating that the Association was very prosperous. They were receiving additional favourable support, and two new county Associations, Cornwall and Northumberland, had joined them. They had 3673*l.* 4*s.* 5*d.* invested in good securities, a balance at the bankers of 744*l.* 18*s.* 7*d.*, and a sum of 222*l.* 13*s.* 5*d.* in the hands of the Secretary. The prize list showed a considerable increase. In 1863 the number of prizes competed for was 316, amounting in value to 4128*l.*, while this year they had 626 prizes to be shot for, of the aggregate value of 5173*l.* Altogether there were 1070 more prizes to be competed for by Volunteers this year than last year. The entrance fee for the Queen's prize had been increased to 20*s.*, giving corps more representatives to shoot for it. The change had already proved advantageous as there were 1675 entries as against 1145 last year. That gave a certain income to the Association of 1675*l.* to face the Wimbledon expenses. With regard to the prizes, he had the gratification of stating that the Earl of Derby and the Duke of Devonshire, as Chancellors of the Universities of Cambridge and Oxford, had presented a challenge plate. The Marquis of Tweeddale had given a prize to be shot for by gunmakers. Lord de Grey and Ripon had also given a 50*l.* prize. The Wimbledon Cup was also a new prize, it would only be second to the Queen's, and was intended for those who had distinguished themselves on former occasions. Then there was the Enfield Association Cup, Mr. Bass's, M.P., prize of 50*l.*, Mr. Dillwyn's, M.P., prize, value 25*l.* The City prizes would also be a feature; 520*l.* had already been collected through the exertions of Mr. Martin Smith, of the Victorias, and Major Oxley. They would be shot for by Volunteers in two classes. Among the donors were the Lord Mayor, the Bank of England, &c. Out of the 30,000 Volunteer artillerymen only 14 shot at Wimbledon last year, and to induce a greater number to compete, prizes this year would be given for their weapon—the carbine. The targets would be the same as those hitherto used. Last year it would be remembered that Mr. Hill's system of marking was adopted, but with considerable departures from his plan, resulting in accidents. Cardboard targets on the Swiss principle had been introduced to them, but would entail 500*l.* additional expenditure. They had seen Mr. Hill's system on his ground, and considered it safe, and therefore resolved, if possible, to use it. With a view of ascertaining if it was safe they had communicated with Lord Paulet, who sent down Captain Wigram, of the Coldstream Guards, to see the system in operation. That officer, in his report said that it was impossible for any accident to happen, and that the markers were safe. They would, therefore, adopt Mr. Hill's system of marking in its integrity. They would have a tramway laid down, horsed by the military train, which would be a great improvement and save competitors the fatigue of walking from one firing point to another. It would cost from 200*l.* to 300*l.*, but would soon repay itself. There would be a great many men in camp; four corps had arranged to pitch tents. Corps could have tents, provided that they had not more than 50 men on the ground, and not less than 20 men, two-fifths of whom must, however, be members of the Association. The distribution of prizes would take place at Wimbledon, and not at the Crystal Palace as heretofore. Lord Elcho concluded by announcing that the Duke of Cambridge had consented to review the Volunteers on the last day of the meeting. Captain Templer complained that a sufficient number of prizes was not given for competition by the breech-loader. A trial had taken place on Saturday at Harrow between the Prussian needle-gun and the long Enfield, which gave the palm to our weapon. Lieutenant Goodliffe, London Rifle Brigade, did not approve paper targets, and considered that "any position" should be allowed for the second stage of the Queen's Prize. Mr. Luxmoore said that the Volunteers were taught to fire kneeling, and that it would be unfair to have "any position" for the second stage of the "Queen's." After some further discussion, in which Captain Osgood, 3d City, recommended prizes for unknown distances at Wimbledon, the Duke of Cambridge said, as the owner of woods in rear of the butts, he must protest against prizes for unknown distances, as already, with known distances and good shooting, bullets found their way into his woods. After some further discussion, in which General Boileau, Colonel Bower, Captain Williams, Mr. Hemming, Mr. Martin Smith, Captain MacGregor, Lord Bury, Lieutenant Marriner, and others took part, the Speaker of the House of Commons was unanimously elected one of the trustees of the Association. The Duke of Cambridge then said that he hoped they would not be led away by the Prussian needle-gun. He hoped they would encourage breech-loaders. He had seen the needle-guns in the hands of troops, and there was a great escape of gas from them. He must remind them that in the question of ammunition they must bear in mind the replenishing the supplies and the difficulties in the way of so doing. He did not say that they would or would not come into use. As regarded the rules, everybody had his fear and fancy. He was sure the council were anxious to meet the views of everybody, but it was impossible to please all parties. Last year he had asked them not to overlook the claim of the national weapon, and he still had to do the same. As regarded the position for shooting, "any position" would give an undue advantage to one man over another. On the motion of General Boileau a vote of thanks was passed to the Chairman.

Pastoral by Cardinal Wiseman.—On Sunday the Trinity Sunday Pastoral of Cardinal Wiseman was read in all the Roman Catholic places of worship within the "Archdiocess of Westminster." In this Pastoral, after the usual greetings, the Cardinal exhorts his flock to contribute towards the fund for erecting Roman Catholic churches and schools in the archdiocess, and then proceeds to notice the recent scientific discussions on the antiquity of man, the "Essays and Reviews," Bishop Colenso's work on the Pentateuch, and the reception given to Garibaldi. He says:—

"We cannot shut our eyes to the aim or tendency of modern science, which is to demand, not equality, but supremacy; not a fair balance but a loaded scale, whenever it seems to come into competition with the claims of revelation. The moment the two seem to contend, in disagreement, for the belief of man, science at once exacts that all else should give way; and unfortunately too many yield at once and surrender at discretion. The stump of a fossil tree, the bones of an extinct animal, a broken skull found in some inexplicable place, but requiring a solution equally from our assailants; nay, a potsherd, a sea-shell, the piles of a lake village, the rudiments of stone instruments, all things—anything is heavy enough to turn the scale in favour of what is called reason. And we are ridiculed as fearing or opposed to science, as narrow-minded and hoodwinked bigots, for not at once adopting this confused mass of immature prognosy, and sacrificing, in honour of our acceptance, whatsoever has been to us venerable, whatsoever holy, whatsoever lovely, whatsoever of good fame, whatsoever true and just, whatsoever has been hitherto to us the light of our eyes or the joy of our hearts, what has made us and kept us virtuous, hopeful, consoled, happy through our dark or rugged way on earth, and has sustained our heads above the billows, and our souls above the troubles, the anxieties, and the anguishes of life. We pause in vain. We are calmly and composedly placing in the opposite scale many and dear considerations. We have before us a prescriptive authority in records of several thousand years ago, discussed, disputed, and always victorious, running down a channel that seems scooped out for it through primæval rivers, lined with monuments, beyond which man has left no articulate memorial—cuneiform or hieroglyphic; all marvellously attesting, by consenting and concurrent testimony, the accuracy of those sacred volumes; then interwoven with what the West considered ancient and the East modern, the annals of the Ptolemies and the Seleucidæ, till the stream of primitive history, with its evidence of prophecy, still in course of verification, drops silently into that deeper, nobler, and more magnificent reservoir, where it mingles with the pure and living waters of a new dispensation, whence it issues with all the new qualities—evidences, proofs, and applications which are concentrated here. Here we meet with such a strange superhuman overweight of proof as seems to master every possible objection, and to leave no alternative for a second solution. For, in addition to all that miraculous works and prophetic sayings, and new moral precepts, a fresh philosophy, theology, and social code issuing from illiterate men, in the midst of a most brilliant age,—and accepted; we have to throw into the balance the vastest empire ever known, subdued when at its greatest might; the entire world reformed, transformed into a new condition by a new legislature, promulgated by ignorant men, propagated by poor men; proved and pressed on acceptance by men in prison and in the stocks, under the scourge and the knife, on the rack and the gridiron; till the whole empire and the entire globe rolled spontaneously to the feet of a Galilean crucified on the Janiculum. Have we not a right to put all these grave and solemn considerations against a solitary cranium, an antiquated fish-bone, or a fragment of pottery? Yet while we are doing so, comes in the sarcasm and the jeer that we are unscientific, anti-progressist, superstitious, and behind the age; and sharper than a two-edged sword, and heavy like that of Camillus, it is thrown into the opposite scale, as sufficient to make ours kick the beam. But no: eternal truth will still prevail, when temporal science shall have revised its wisdom, and brought it into harmony with the moral evidences which surround and support revelation. Your strongest support and your sublimest aspirations were centred in this belief and hope that you were made to the image of God in Trinity. Science pretends to overthrow this belief, and so deprive you of your most ennobling and consoling principle of life and action. No, if science, as now read by too many, says true, there was no time when God could have created man; no moment in which he could have impressed on him His own Divine image. The human race, according to this version, springs from some scarcely organised rudiment of matter, which gradually went on, through millions of ages, unfolding means and powers of life; till having passed through the various brutish improvements, it reached the stage of existence which immediately preceded the human, providing for our inheritance—for the man and matured intelligence, for the woman the ripened graces, of the ape, or the baboon. God help us! that many should have allowed themselves to accept such an origin; while a whole host of proofs assigns to us that of revelation; makes man the bonding link between unthinking matter and the breath of God which made him sentient, reasoning, moral, and imperishable. Nay, which made him Godlike, and almost God. 'I have said, ye are Gods.' And now, perhaps, a second question awaits us. Has anything occurred to make these warnings especially requisite at this time, beyond the increasing tendency to liberalism in religion, and the ease with which are adopted conclusions of rationalism, that have been of late years spreading? Most certainly, dearly beloved children, there have been growing in the last few months alarming symptoms not merely of religious indifference, but of betrayals of the Faith, by those to whom the public will of this country had entrusted its guardianship, at least in what is broadly designated Christianity. Seldom, indeed, when addressing you in pastoral epistles, do we travel beyond the limits of our own Catholic interests and duties. But as we have already observed, a strong necessity compels us to raise our voice aloud, in solemn protest, and ecclesiastical self-guardianship. You all heard, that within a comparatively recent period, in the very body constituted by law, to preach and defend the doctrines of revelation, there has been slowly generated, but at last outwardly manifested, a canker of rationalism; which, if it spread must eat out vitality, and so extinguish life. Learned men, in high dignity, have lifted up, if they have not thrown off the cloak, which wrapped up in decent concealment the hideous sore. The inspiration of Holy Scripture, the eternity of torments for the wicked, are among the more prominent doctrines which these writings have been held most prominently to impugn, to the scandal of many. To their aid has advanced a scholar of peculiar learning and skill, of whom the people might naturally say, 'one that is a priest of the seed of Aaron is come, he will not deceive us.' In volume after volume he has denied, not without much apparent research, the truth of the Books of Moses, and consequently his account of the creation of the world and of man. Need we say, that, without our specifying other doctrines, there was enough in what we have mentioned, to evoke from long torpor, and bring into fearless activity, any power, preservative or curative, antidote or medicine, which lay in the hands of that body to which the bulk of the people look for religious teaching or for guidance in their own more humble inquiries? Answers, totally inadequate, have indeed appeared, from other contending scholars. But from those who hold, by law, the office which St. Paul describes as so full of corrective energy, there has been no active demonstration of consciousness of its possession; no 'being instant in season, and out of season;' no efficacious 'reproving, entreating, rebuking, in all patience and doctrine.' No Synod has been convoked to condemn doctrines more false and fatal than those of Arius; no sword of the Spirit drawn, if not to smite the blasphemers, to cut out his infecting sore; no combined assertion of 'It hath seemed good to the Holy Ghost and to us,' in fine no decisive, irrevocable, authoritative declaration or re-assertion of doctrine, on the two vital doctrines of Scriptural inspiration, and the eternity of punishment. May we not, therefore, conclude, that this supposed teaching body feels within itself that want of power to act outwardly, which instinct makes us feel, when in the presence of a wide chasm, that our frame would refuse to obey our will, if this impelled us forward over it; and that our attempt to leap it must end in an ignominious fall? In fact, so unreliant has it shown itself, now as ever before, on its own inborn, or Heaven granted, authority and success, that this most solemn and purely religious controversy has passed into the hands of laymen, from the hall of the priests to the tribunal of Cæsar. Now, this has given judgment, with the minute discrimination, the careful sifting, and the cold impartiality, which would have marked a decision on a conveyance of property, or the transmission of a legacy. And what is remarkable indeed, is that the judgment has gone forth, as valid, and inconcussible, in spite of assessors impugning it, who belong to the highest order of religious teachers recognised by the State. What is the consequence? Why, practically that henceforth the inspiration of any proposed portion of Holy Scripture may be safely denied, within the pale of the national religious Establishment; and thus falls what has been considered 'the pillar and groundwork' of its doctrine. 'And so may any one, securely, deny that eternal fire of the Judgment to come, which is more effectual for converting sinners than the reading of God's word, which terrified Felix in his powerful wickedness, and Simon Magus in his cunning impiety. And in this way, the great moral ground of divine fear is cut from under the feet of the unrepenting, who may now go on in their way rejoicing. When we see the foundations of revealed truth thus sapped and abandoned, after a short and ineffectual struggle, by those placed on its walls to defend them, must we not be anxious, and even weep? Must we not feel dismayed at contemplating the gulph of infidelity towards which the bark, abandoned by its steersmen, is evidently drifting? But still more, must we not speak out, believing as we do, and proclaim that to us is entrusted a true and terrible responsibility to uphold revealed doctrine? Must we not lift up our voice and protest, in the name of the Catholic Church, against any weak surrender of our sacred deposit, or any attempt to lessen it, by whomsoever made and by whomsoever coincided in! 'For Sion's sake I will not hold my peace, and for the sake of Jerusalem I will not rest.' And now, a more recent occurrence leaves us no alternative but to express our feelings,—an occurrence which cannot but afflict us, as most humiliating to Christianity itself. For, although we may not allow any spiritual power or ecclesiastical claims to those who took part in it, yet we must fully recognise their high civil position and the influence of their example, and the force of deductions from it on the bulk of the nation, which recognises in them a still more exalted and sacred position. Within these few weeks, a man of celebrity in his own country, only connected with this country by admiration on his side, and helpful co-operation with all his schemes here, paid England a visit. He was welcomed by many nobles with magnificence, and by multitudes with enthusiasm. With all this, we have nought to do. We are often warned not to presume to give an opinion on public matters, as beyond the sphere or above the capacities of churchmen. We leave, therefore, the deserts of this man to more competent authorities. We leave the military character of one who was made prisoner in battle against his own sovereign's troops, and who was wounded by a missile from his armoury, to those gallant men, who never paid such homage to a Napier or a Clyde, but who have ever considered that a soldier's loyalty and honour should be as spotless and as highly burnished as his sword. We leave to our statesmen of every party to pronounce on the place to be accorded in their ranks, to one who to-day advocates and perpetrates the destruction of thrones, and gives public rewards for the attempted assassination of kings, and to-morrow exhorts his fellow subjects to reject the constitutional government of his country, and centre all authority in a despotic dictatorship. But one thing, at least, there is on which we have a right to judge, to feel, and to speak. Touch religious matters with scorn and blasphemy, speak contumaciously of what we most reverence and love; and you touch the very apple of our eye, and we have a right to cry aloud, with pain, perhaps with shame. Some months before his visit, this soldier and statesman, assuming the highest possible position, addressed a letter 'To the English nation,' dated September 28, 1862. From it we extract the following passage:—'The initiative that to-day belongs to you, might not be yours tomorrow. May God avert this! Who more bravely took the initiative than France in '89? She, who in that solemn moment gave to the world the Goddess Reason, levelled tyranny to the dust, and consecrated free brotherhood between nations. After almost a century, she is reduced to combat the liberty of nations, to protect tyranny, and to direct her only efforts to steady on the ruins of the Temple of Reason, that hideous immoral monstrosity, the Papacy.' Many of you doubtless know what France, drunk with the spirit of irreligion and disloyalty, did to inaugurate the Goddess of Reason, and give her solemnly to the world. To those who do not, it may suffice to say, that whatever the Prophet and our Lord meant by the 'abomination of desolation, standing in the holy place,' this expression was verified most literally. The triumph of rationalism over Christianity was symbolised by 'a hideous, immoral monstrosity,' too detestable to be described. This representation by an act of sacrilegious solemnity of the victory by reason over revelation was thus eulogised in an address to the British nation, by the man to whom it is said English ladies knelt. Be it so. The French nation was extolled for that obscene worship, and is reprobated for having repented of its foolish wickedness. And in conformity with this praise and this blame must the religion of its utterer be considered to stand. Not in the common crowd, not mingled with Dissenting ministers in the general levées, but standing apart, elaborately separated, were the leaders, we will not say the representatives, of the Anglican clergy. Three and three from each highest class of the national hierarchy came forward, not as statesmen, not as soldiers, not as worldlings—but therefore as priests and bishops—to greet the man who has preached to them doctrines, and applauded to them practices, far beyond those in wickedness, to the proclaimers of which the Word of God forbids us to say, 'God speed you.' With one hand grasping the right hand of him who had called on them, indirectly at least, to install the Goddess of Reason on the altars of their ministers—for this was what France did—with the other feebly condemning the doctrines of that Goddess. Oh, pity, pity! at least, if not worse, that such a spectacle should have been exhibited to England, at the time, the moment, when every energy of every hand should be put forth, not to dally with, but to crush, the spirit, however embodied, of infidelity as well as disloyalty! And now, dearly beloved, must not we who value consistent truth—revealed truth, apostolic truth, the truth that rests on the teaching of the Church—boldly assert our rights to teach it, however others may either vacillate or shrink in its plain delivery? We stand on our own ground here, within our own holy place. And we ask you to co-operate with us in our effort this day to multiply the number of those churches and schools into which the spirit of irreligion will never creep, nor any tampering be allowed with the faith of our fathers."

STATISTICS OF ROMAN CATHOLICS IN ENGLAND.—At a recent meeting of the Statistical Society a paper on this subject was read by Mr. G. W. Lumley. The document first referred to the statement of Cardinal Wiseman at the Catholic Congress at Malines, that Catholicism in England was daily gaining ground; and to his comparison of the year 1830 with 1861, in order to show the large increase of both priests and churches in this country. It then proceeded by means of numerous tables, extracts from parliamentary papers, reports of the census committee, the Registrar-General, &c., to show that the statements of the Cardinal were not substantially correct, and that there was only a shifting of the members of this church from one place to another. All the tables tended to show that the Roman Catholic churches and chapels were found in the greatest numbers in the metropolis and in certain counties where there were large populations massed together; and that there were also found the greatest number of Roman Catholic poor schools, paupers and offenders. In conclusion, the author stated that there was not the smallest ground for any real alarm as to the progress of the Roman Catholic faith among the English people, or that the English nation was about to return to the control from which their ancestors released themselves centuries ago.

POLISH SICK FUND.—On Friday and Saturday a brilliant fête was given at the villa of the Duchess Dowager of Sutherland, at Chiswick, for the purpose of disposing of the various articles of jewellery which have been contributed by the Polish ladies of all ranks for the benefit of the sick and wounded of their fellow-countrymen. The collection included articles of jewellery of almost every kind—watches, bracelets, brooches, and rings, some of considerable value, and some of very modest worth, proving how extensively the Polish ladies of all ranks had sent in their mites in aid of a cause so holy as the relief of those who had suffered in their gallant struggle to achieve the independence of their country. The fête took place under the most distinguished patronage, and this, apart from its own peculiar claims to support, would of itself have sufficed to make the effort successful. All the saloons of the villa were thrown open on the occasion, and though the excessive heat kept the grounds empty till the close of the day, they then filled with a brilliant assemblage, which gave fresh animation to the scene. A large number of sales were effected among the articles of jewellery, at prices which must have fully realised the expectations of the promoters of the fête.

THE MACKAY GUN.—This gun was again tested on the Crosby Sands, near Liverpool, last week, with great success. The shots passed twice through a section of the side of the iron-plated ram Agincourt; and on being tested for range with a charge of 30 lb. of powder, made the first graze at a distance of 4500 yards. The second round was fired with only 21 lb. of powder, which propelled the 118 lb. shot a distance of 1095 yards.

THE OVERLAND ROUTE.—For some time past communications have been going on between the Treasury, the India Office, and Admiralty, respecting the transport of Indian reliefs by the overland route, for which the consent of the Sultan and the Pasha of Egypt has now been obtained. It is intended for this especial purpose to build five troop ships, two to be stationed on the other side of the Isthmus of Suez, and three at Aden, to convey the troops to their destination in India. The plan also embraces the return of invalid soldiers and those on furlough to their native country. The five troop ships are to be built by contract, and be ready by the end of the year. The expense will fall on the Indian Government. It is not intended to abandon the line round the Cape.

MR. SPURGEON.—A report has been extensively circulated that Mr. Spurgeon will shortly leave his church and congregation for several months, in order to visit the Holy Land and other places. On Sunday evening he contradicted the rumour in the most unqualified manner. He said that the time would come, perhaps, when he should require two or three months' relaxation, but certainly not this year. His object in thus publicly alluding to the subject just now was that as there were many visitors to London at this season of the year who came to worship with his people, his announcement would set aside all doubt. He intended to be absent not more than one Sabbath at a time at some period to come.

REGULATION OF GAOLS BILL.—At a meeting of the Court of Aldermen on Tuesday, strong opposition was expressed against the Bill introduced by Government to amend the laws relating to prisons, giving the Home Secretary power to override the authority of the magistrates in the arrangement and discipline of gaols, and, as it was stated, enabling him to introduce Roman Catholic chaplains into every prison, whether the magistrates liked it or not. It was agreed without a dissentient voice to oppose the Bill.

METEOROLOGIC OFFICE OF THE BOARD OF TRADE.—Admiral Fitzroy's blue book, containing his annual report, has just been issued, with an appendix of diagrams. With regard to the forecasts of weather it states that more confidence is now felt in drawing conclusions, and that demands have increased for cautionary notices of strong winds, especially from foreign Governments. It states that the other duties of the office have not been neglected; and shows what has been done as to naval logs, and fishery barometers on the coast. It states that it has now been proved experimentally that winds and weather may be foretold with general accuracy for two days at least in advance, and that persons will examine the daily newspaper reports occasionally, for some days together, they will be surprised at the close approximation to accuracy now to be found in them—even to the way winds are likely to veer or shift, often as they do so, in changeable weather during even one day and night. The negative evidence or the security against storm during a certain time which these two day tables show, will be highly appreciated in due time. It states also that one ready diagram is mentioned as being extremely useful practically, for either isolated or combined use—for the farmer, gardener, sailor, or any other observer. The form in the appendix shows that it is simply a sheet of paper, ruled, or printed, in small squares of about 10th of an inch—on the long side having dates; at one end a barometer scale, and on the other a range of numbers for temperature, two to each division. Daily observations—only once a day—between 8 and 9 o'clock in the morning, marked by dots, and lines drawn between them, are found to give a degree of insight into coming local weather that must be tried to be fully appreciated as it deserves. The character of the preceding traces, their angles with the square line, their approaches to almost vertical fall, or equally steep rise, their horizontal, gradual, or irregular tendency, in immediately preceding days, "say directly and plainly to the eye and mind what may next be expected."

THE NEW STREET FROM OXFORD STREET TO CHARING CROSS.—At a meeting of the Metropolitan Board of Works on Friday a discussion took place on the formation of a new line of street from Oxford Street to Charing Cross. The Hampstead and Charing Cross Railway has offered in consideration of their Bill being unopposed to make a street 40 feet wide. The committee of the Board insisted on a width of 60 feet. The company objected to the expense, but offered to carry out the plan if the Board would give them a site on the Thames embankment and a contribution of 75,000*l.* in money. This proposal, when referred to the Board, was rejected, and the committee was instructed to insist upon the 60 feet of roadway untrammelled by conditions.

THUNDERSTORMS.—A heavy thunderstorm burst over London on Friday night. The storm was at its height at 11 o'clock, and the rain fell in torrents. A second storm broke out at midnight, which, however, lasted only a few minutes. The lightning affected the telegraphic wires connecting the Houses of Parliament with various offices. The bells attached to the wires rung violently at the very moment when the most vivid flashes of lightning were seen. At 1 o'clock the storm had ceased, and at 2 the moon was shining in a cloudless sky. Liverpool, Birmingham, Manchester, and other provincial towns were also visited by heavy thunderstorms during the day.

THE LATE FRAUD ON THE CITY BANKS.—It will be remembered that some months ago a German named Dietrichstein absconded with upwards of 10,000*l.* in Bank of England notes which he had fraudulently obtained. He was traced to Pesth in Hungary, but the Austrian Government refused to deliver him up on the ground that his case did not come under the Extradition Treaty. Within the last few days the whole sum he took with him from London has been refunded, and the charges against him, are, therefore, abandoned.

THE PUBLIC HEALTH.—The Registrar-General's Weekly Return states that the deaths in London in the week ending Saturday, May 21, were 1421. The average number in the corresponding week of the 10 years 1854-63, corrected for increase of population, was 1243. The present return is therefore 178 above the average. During the week the births of 918 boys and 896 girls, in all 1814 children, were registered in London. In the 10 corresponding weeks of the years 1854-63 the average number was 1915.

ABERGELE.—During the thunderstorm on Friday, the electric fluid entered the church of Llanelian, and top of two of the arches of a three-light window in the north chancel, having burnt two holes through the lead at the apex of the arches. It knocked out some of the oak panelling of the chancel, scattering it about the church; it then passed to the roof, scorching and blackening the gilding of the chancel arch, and passed out at the top of the gable, shattering the wall, here about a yard thick, and raising some of the coping. The lightning struck the outer wall in several places about the window, and forced a passage for itself through a small hole in the leads, but at the same time divided and separated the strong stone mullioned arch at the top, and some strong stonework inside, above the glass, without breaking a single pane of the window. The hail which fell at the time was very large and mixed with triangular pieces of solid ice about an inch in diameter. The thunder cloud was very near, and the sound had a peculiar crashing, cracking effect. The noise of the falling hail was like the bursting of an immense water dam. St. Elian's Church is very high and in a most exposed situation. A man, a horse, and several pigs were killed in some neighbouring parishes. The storm occurred about noon.

Birkenhead.—In the Court of Exchequer on Thursday the Solicitor-General announced that the trial of the Attorney-General v. Laird and others, in the case of the Confederate Rams, had been withdrawn, and that the judgment of the Court would therefore pass for the Crown. It is understood that the rams have been sold to the British Government. This transaction has extinguished the hopes of those who expected that the trial at bar before the full Court of Exchequer would have the effect of furnishing the shipowners of this country with an authoritative exposition of the Foreign Enlistment Act which might serve as a guide for the future. On the other hand, the law officers of the Crown may congratulate themselves that they have got rid of the difficulty and anxiety which seemed destined to attend their efforts to overcome the devices of the Confederate agents to elude the law. The purchase money is 225,000*l*. The El Tousson and Monassir, will doubtless, under Christian names and the British pennant, do good service to the navy. The opinion of competent authorities has pronounced them the finest iron-clads afloat, and much satisfaction is expressed in naval circles that neither M. Bravay nor the Pacha of Egypt has carried off such important vessels.

Cambridge.—The arrangements for the approaching demonstration in honour of the visit of the Prince and Princess of Wales are now nearly matured. On Wednesday, June 1, there is to be a subscription concert at the town hall, under the conductorship of Professor Bennett. In the course of the day the Duke of Devonshire, Chancellor of the University, will arrive. On Thursday at noon the Prince and Princess will reach Cambridge, and will receive addresses from the town council and University. On leaving the railway station their Royal Highnesses will proceed down the Hill's Road, Downing Terrace, Trumpington Street, King's Parade, Trinity Street, to the gate in front of Trinity College. The presentation of the University address will take place in Trinity College, after which will follow the distribution of prizes to the University Volunteers. At 3 P.M. a Congregation will be held in the Senate house; in the evening there will be a private dinner at the Vice-Chancellor's, and later a ball at the Fitzwilliam Museum, at which the Prince and Princess will be present. On Thursday evening there will be an amateur dramatic performance. On Friday a Congregation will be held in the Senate house, a luncheon at King's College at 2 P.M., a boat procession, a horticultural fête at St. John's, an amateur dramatic performance, a private dinner at Trinity College lodge, and a ball at Trinity College. The following is a list of those upon whom the honorary degree of Doctor of Law will be conferred during the Royal visit:—The Prince of Wales, the Duke of Cambridge, Prince Louis of Hesse, Earl Granville, The Duke of Manchester, Earl Stanhope, Earl Spencer, Earl of Carnarvon, Viscount Palmerston, Viscount Eversley, Lord Alfred Hervey, Lord Leigh, Lord Harris, Sir Edward Lytton Bulwer Lytton, Sir William Page Wood, Sir Charles Eastlake, General Knollys, The Dean of Westminster, A. J. Beresford Hope, Esq., Dr. Watson, President of the College of Physicians, Monsieur Charles Gabriel Cobet, Dr. Hoffman, and Professor Wheatstone.

Clifton.—The main chains of the suspension bridge were completed last week, and the work of attaching the rods and girders and laying the roadway has been commenced. The scaffolding which has surrounded the piers is in course of removal. The bridge has now become of considerable weight, and its oscillation in windy weather has greatly diminished. The progress hitherto made is very satisfactory, and the completion of the bridge during the present year is confidently anticipated.

Derby.—The extraordinary will case which was decided a few months ago by the Lord Chief Justice and a jury refusing to believe that a Mr. Else could have found three different wills of his employer, Mr. Nuttall, in succession, each giving him more of the deceased's property, while by the last the relatives were ousted altogether, is once more before the public. More papers have been found, all tending to confirm the wills and codicils which the jury declared to be spurious. The papers were not found by Mr. Else, but by a man to whom he sold old Mr. Nuttall's bed, within some recess of which the papers were curiously concealed. This bed has been in Mr. Else's possession, and at his disposal, from the death of Mr. Nuttall till now. It is almost needless to say that the discovery has excited great speculation in the neighbourhood, and all kinds of exaggerated rumours are current. In the meantime the house and cellar have been locked up. It is said that the documents are written in a style closely resembling the running hand so often referred to at the trial as Mr. Nuttall's ordinary writing.

Grimsby.—According to statements made by the directors of the Trent, Ancholme, and Grimsby Railway, opened a few days since, the new line will bring this town nine miles nearer Manchester, 14 nearer the South Yorkshire coalfields, and 23 or 24 nearer the most densely populated portion of the West Riding, while the quantity of iron ore contained in the newly-found iron district is not less than 3,500,000,000 tons. Comparisons have been instituted between the new ironfield in Cleveland and the new one in Lincolnshire, to show that the northern one is insignificant in comparison with the one on the banks of the Trent, the total of the Cleveland being stated at only 500,000,000 tons.

Helston.—Mr. James Clarke, mayor of this town, was killed instantaneously on the evening of the 19th inst., by an accident on horseback. He was the Purser of Great Work Mine, and left Helston in the morning for Penzance on business. Returning homeward between 7 and 8 o'clock in the evening, he reached a point four miles on his way where two roads meet—one leading to Goldsithney, and the other to Helston. The horse turned suddenly towards Goldsithney, the place of its birth; Mr. Clarke checked it. It reared, planted its fore feet on the hedge, and the rider lost his balance. The horse then continued its course for 15 or 20 yards towards Goldsithney, Mr. Clarke gradually falling until he lost his hold of rein and stirrups, and, the back of his head dropping on the ground, his neck was dislocated. The horse stopped of its own accord within a very short distance, and Mr. Clarke was at once removed to the adjacent farm of Henfor. Medical aid was promptly on the spot, but it was of no avail. The deceased, who was 62 years of age, was much respected.

Liverpool.—Messrs. Curry, Kellock, & Co., shipbrokers, have been instructed to offer the Confederate screw steamer Georgia for sale by private treaty. Her crew has been paid off, and her stores were sold by auction on Tuesday at Birkenhead. There seems to be little doubt, therefore, that the Georgia's career as a cruiser is really at an end. She is simply an iron vessel, without armour or backing.

Manchester.—At a meeting of the Central Executive Committee on Monday, the hon. secretary reported that 1096*l*. 12*s*. 5*d*. had been received during the past three weeks, and that the balance in the bank was 113,565*l*. 4*s*. 5*d*. Mr. Commissioner Farnall reported that the number of persons receiving relief from the Boards of Guardians in 47 unions, showed a decrease on the 14th inst. of 13,916, as compared with the 23d ult.

Newark.—On Saturday an inquest was held on the body of Elizabeth Parker, who was shot by her son, Richard Thomas Parker, on the 29th of March, in the village of Fiskerton. The son had come home drunk, and had a quarrel with his father on account of his late hours, when he threatened his father with blows, and ultimately chased him round the house. The father took refuge in the stable, and the mother, seeing the son take a loaded double-barrel gun from the shelf, ran out of the house and called in alarm to the old gentleman to keep out of the way. The same instant Richard deliberately levelled the gun at his mother's head, firing through a pane of glass in the window as she stood in the room. The mother fell frightfully wounded, and the father ran to the stable door to see what was the matter. The son then took aim at him also, and lodged the greater part of the contents of the second barrel in his face and chest. The second shot passed through the adjoining pane of glass. Assistance being at hand, the unfortunate couple were taken into the house and surgical assistance was sent for. The father recovered, but the mother after lingering for some days died on Monday week. The father, who was examined at the inquest, tried hard to screen his son. He denied ever having seen his son shoot, and maintained that nobody could swear to the fact except himself. When questioned as to his own wounds, he said they might have been done by the scratch of a cat. He blamed himself very much for quarrelling with his son. The jury returned a verdict of Wilful Murder against the son, Richard Thomas Parker, who was committed for trial at the next Assizes.

Oxford.—A fatal accident has befallen a young gentleman named Edward John Templer, aged 16, a pupil at the Cowley Diocesan school, near this city. Contrary to the expressed wish of the Rev. Mr. Haveman, the master, who has 100 scholars under his care, several of them proceeded to bathe at a part of the Isis known as the Sandford Lasher, a dangerous spot from the great fall and velocity of the stream, where stands the obelisk erected to the memory of the son of the late Dr. Gaisford, Dean of Christ Church, and another gentleman, who were there drowned. John Ward, aged 16, fell over some sheeting into 20 feet of water, and being unable to swim, there seemed to be scarcely any hopes of his escape from a watery grave. The deceased, however, who was an expert swimmer, attracted by the cries of his school-fellow, gallantly rushed to his assistance, and landed him safely in a very exhausted condition, but the effort cost him his life. Immediately he parted with Ward he fell back powerless, and was carried away by the force of the stream, a considerable time having elapsed before his lifeless body was recovered. At the inquest a verdict of "Accidental Death" was returned, and the coroner delivered an appropriate admonition to the survivors who accompanied deceased to the water contrary to the cautions given.

Pontefract.—On the 16th inst. according to previous announcement, Lord Houghton was presented by his late constituents of this town with an elegant silver salver, bearing the arms of the noble lord and of the borough of Pontefract, in appreciation of the manner in which, for 25 successive years, he represented the borough in Parliament. Lord and Lady Houghton were invited to meet the Mayor of Pontefract, and some of the principal inhabitants, at the residence of the chief magistrate, and at about 11 o'clock a procession was formed there, and proceeded to the Town Hall, where the presentation was made.

Lord Houghton, in acknowledging the honour, spoke of the favourable auspices secured to him on entering public life by his connection with the borough. He said:—I am unfitted to represent a large constituency. I might have gone into Parliament with a much larger constituency, but I do not think I should have been likely to have retained it for anything like the period during which I have retained your representation. At the same time I am conscious of an inability—(it may be a matter of praise in some people's minds, and of dispraise in others)—which I think would have very much injured me if I had represented a large constituency—I mean the difficulty I have always had in believing my own side to be entirely in the right, and other people entirely in the wrong. It has been said of some lawyers, of Lord Denman and Lord Truro, that for a fee of 2*l*. or 5*l*. they really did bring them to think that their side was absolutely right and the other side absolutely wrong. I never had that faculty, and whatever may be the advantage to myself or my friends, I have never been able to throw myself into that full party spirit which in a country like ours is perhaps almost necessary for the prominent success of any public man. I remember Sir Thomas Fremantle, our whipper in in the House of Commons, coming to me and saying, 'Do try for once and make a speech in which you are not going to be candid.' I am not sure whether I succeeded, but at any rate I am perfectly conscious that this peculiarity of my mind, the inability to throw myself utterly and completely into any cause, would have unfitted me for representing any constituency moved by large waves of popular passion and excited into a condition of absolute confidence in themselves and absolute hatred of any one else. I am very thankful that the condition of this borough has been such as to enable me to preserve your confidence so long and also to enable me to act with so much independence." After contrasting the present with the time at which he entered Parliament, the noble lord noticed that "Country gentlemen are not so willing as they were 50 or even 100 years ago to come forward as members of Parliament. In large towns, commercial men, who are engaged in active business, and making a good deal of money, think twice (and very often abandon altogether the thought) before they give up their profitable occupations and business for the honour of a seat in the House of Commons, where, at least, they can make no money, and very often lose any reputation they have got. Country gentlemen, who are accustomed to be treated with some reverence by the people around them, shrink from going into an assembly in which, when they get up to speak, some very rough member immediately calls out 'Oh, oh,' and where, if he attempt any kind of joke which would be very well at his own home, he would very probably be coughed at and even hooted down. You see, therefore, that constituencies such as these have political uses, and though I call myself, and I still do call myself in the strongest sense, a Liberal statesman, nevertheless I have always felt that the existence of such boroughs as Pontefract is not only not injurious to the working of the constitution, but most beneficial to it, and most useful for our social welfare. After some other remarks, his lordship spoke of the present state of political affairs:—'The two political parties in the House of Commons,' he said, 'are placed in a position in which neither can say one word against the other upon this matter. Each of them has introduced a Reform Bill, and each of these Reform Bills has entirely failed. Upon that subject, therefore, they are on a par, and in the future, whatever is to happen, must be upon a clear, a new, and a positive basis. I shall hold, in the assembly of which I am now a part, the language which I have always held in this room, viz., that, without determining precisely how any change in the representation of this country shall take place, I nevertheless do think it would be most dangerous for any portion of the people of this country to think that they were absolutely and positively excluded for ever from any participation in the working of the constitution. The great point is, to keep the doors of the constitution open to the people. The regulations—how far they are to enter it, what circumstances are to debar them from doing so—are matters of judgment on one side, and of will on the other. Let it be clearly understood that it is neither the interest nor the desire of any class in this country to prevent the admission within the pale of the working of the constitution of any body of men who combine an earnest desire to possess that privilege with a determination to exercise that privilege honestly and independently—let that be once clearly understood and there is an end of all danger upon the question of reform. Let us have no positive exclusion; let us not say, 'These men shall not come within the pale of the constitution,' but this we may say, and we do say, that the suffrage is not a natural right to which every man is born; that the suffrage is not a privilege which is to be conferred arbitrarily and accidentally; that it is a solemn duty which the men of this country are called upon to perform, and that if their fellow-citizens believe they are qualified to perform those duties faithfully, honestly, and independently, then, and then only have they a right to demand and receive it. His lordship concluded by references to the punishment of death, the treatment of criminals, and other social questions, and promised in the House of Lords to pursue the course he had hitherto done, among other things, to pay attention to the local interests of the borough with which he was connected.'

Portsmouth.—The Select Committee of the House of Commons on the Royal Dockyards have made their first report. They have hitherto directed their special attention to the proposed extension of Portsmouth Dockyard, and they report on this subject as follows:—The present capabilities of the dockyard for repairing and fitting out ships consists of 11 docks (two only of which are of sufficient length and breadth, and one only of sufficient depth, to dock a first-class ship, with her weights on board), and of two basins—one the ship basin, containing 2 acres 12 roods 30 perches, with a depth of water at ordinary spring tides of 24 feet 6 inches over the entrance; the other, the steam basin of 7 acres, with 25 feet 6 inches depth of water. The evidence is unanimous that this accommodation is inadequate for the ordinary requirements of the navy, even in time of peace. Various opinions have been given as to the number of additional first-class docks required. Some witnesses consider that four, others that as many as eight are required. As to the extent of the additional repairing basins required, the evidence shows that from 20 to 30 acres are necessary; and it was urged by some of the witnesses that, instead of mooring the ships in ordinary in the harbour, economy and safety would be best secured by placing these ships in a basin devoted to that purpose. The factory establishment is stated to be capable (or nearly so) of effecting the repairs and refitting of the fleet. A site, the property of the Crown, but subject to certain rights of way, comprising about 93 acres, bounded by Fountain Lake, and covered at high water, immediately contiguous to the north end of the dockyard, is stated by unanimous evidence to be an excellent site for the proposed works. The subsoil is said to be of stiff clay, rendering piling foundations unnecessary, and of good quality for making bricks. A large convict establishment being contiguous, the Committee are informed that much of the work can be accomplished by convict labour, as is the case in similar works at Chatham Dockyard. The Committee have thought it right to ascertain whether the water on the bar of Portsmouth harbour can be maintained at a sufficient depth for the largest ships; and they have received conclusive evidence on this important matter, showing that no apprehension need be entertained of future inconvenience. From the foregoing evidence the Committee have come to the conclusion—1. That additional basin and dock accommodation at Portsmouth is required. 2. That the site recommended is well adapted for the purpose. The Committee proceed to report at once their opinion upon that branch of their inquiry which relates to Portsmouth Dockyard in order to enable the Government to bring in a Bill to authorise the diversion, stopping up, and appropriation of certain streets, roads, and landing places, preparatory to the extension of the yard.

SOUTHAMPTON.—It is in contemplation to pull down the only piece of the ballium wall of the ancient citadel of Southampton now remaining. It was built in the reign of King Stephen. The document in which the citadel was entrusted to a knight by Edward the Black Prince, while he went to fight the battle of Cressy, is in existence. The remains of the citadel belonged to the second Marquis of Lansdowne, who included it in a castle which he built. While he resided in it, Pether, the famous moonlight painter, and the Margravine of Anspach were his neighbours. The owner of the ballium wall has offered to let it stand for 100*l*., and an attempt is now making to raise the money by subscription. Mr. Pettigrew, of the Archæological Association, has writen to the Corporation, imploring them to save the relic. The Lansdowne Castle was sold and pulled down at the marquis's death.

SHEFFIELD,—All the pressing claims arising out of the destitution caused by the inundation in this town have been satisfied; and the local committee, which has received altogether some 48,000*l*., announces that no further subscriptions are required. Fever has broken out at Owlerton, a village which suffered greatly from the flood, and where large deposits of mud and filth have been allowed to lie ever since the disaster.

ST. LEONARDS.—Mrs. Seaton Kerr, widow of the late Mr. Andrew Seaton Kerr, for some time resident at 8, West Hill, in this town, has recently been residing in Geneva with her family, for the purpose of her sons acquiring the French language. On the 14th ult., the two sons and tutor went out for the purpose of fishing in a tank or reservoir, a short distance from Geneva, with a depth of eight feet of water. The eldest boy, Andrew, with a net having a handle, and whilst in the act of fishing, fell into the tank. The tutor, Mr. Jeanes, immediately plunged into the tank and lifted the boy to the top, the younger boy taking hold of the handle of the fishing net, and by this means was held up for more than half an hour. The tutor being seized by cramp or injured, sank to rise no more, although a good swimmer. The boy Andrew retained the most perfect consciousness during the whole time, imploring help; and at last, finding he could hold no longer, told the little boy to run for help, and to give his love to his mamma, and went to the bottom. The body arrived last week from Geneva, to be buried in the Hastings Cemetery, and has since been followed to the grave by his schoolfellows at the Rev. Mr. Tottenham's school, where he was to have returned in June.

YORK.—The Archbishop of York has addressed a pastoral letter to the clergy and laity of his province. His Grace remarks that the result of the proceedings before the Privy Council in the case of "Essays and Reviews" has brought him numerous letters and addresses, inviting an expression of opinion upon the great questions supposed to be involved, and which seem to compel him to some public and general reply, in order to remove misapprehensions, and to reassure the minds of some who have admitted in their first alarm the notion that the Church of England is falling away from the true faith. He states that his position as a member of the Privy Council necessarily limits him in discussing what is inaccurately called the judgment. He does not admit the doctrine which has been advanced that the clergy in general are forbidden by the oath of supremacy to discuss the reasons of the Committee of Privy Council for the advice it has tendered to the Crown. Those who took that view were perhaps unaware that the judgment (so called) which has excited so much discussion is an entirely different document from the report to the Crown upon which the real judgment is founded; that the so-called judgment is a statement for the guidance of the suitors and the public, upon which the advice to the Crown will be based, which statement never reaches the Crown at all; and that the report to the Crown happily omits the grounds of the advice, and confines itself to advising briefly what the judgment should be. His Grace then proceeds to speak on the theological topics involved, and to point out what is the effect of the judgment upon the position of the Church. He says—

"It is important to observe that a much wider scope is attributed to the judgment than it deserves for itself. The course of proceeding in the Court of Arches recognised a two-fold right of appeal. Either party may appeal, either on the admission of the articles of charge, or on the judgment being pronounced. An appeal at the former of these two stages would have raised the question, what passages in the essays impugned are heretical? An appeal at the latter stage is confined to the much narrower question, Do certain quoted passages deserve, as heretical, the penalty decreed by the Court below? Now, the appeal to the Privy Council was in this narrower form; it was an appeal against the judgment of the Court of Arches, and not against its order for the reformation of the articles of charge. It was an appeal against the penalty, and not an appeal upon the whole merits of the cases. If the judge of the Court of Arches was wrong in admitting or rejecting any passages as heretical, either party could have appealed, and so the opinion of the Privy Council would have been obtained as to the whole case, as to what passages in the whole essay were and what were not at variance with our articles and formularies. If the promoter thought that after the large changes directed by the judge to be made in the articles of charge the quotations still admitted would give a wrong idea of the unsound teaching of the defendant, he might have his remedy with the Court above, and might have there resisted the omissions and alterations ordered by the judge of the Arches. But in each case the promoter waived that right of appeal, and neither case came to the Court above, on appeal against the punishment. I purposely refrain from expressing any opinion as to the judgment of the Court below, because this is beyond the limit I have imposed on myself. I only say that whatever may be thought of that judgment upon the admission of the articles the promoter rested content with it, and thus narrowed the ground which the Committee of Council were permitted to travel over. And it follows that the Committee of Council has pronounced no opinion whatever upon the essays of the two defendants, but only upon some detached fragments of them. Nor can it be regarded as an injury to the faith of the Church that the Committee of Council has imposed on itself the strictest bounds in dealing with these fragments. The accuser is, for the purpose of the charge, confined to the passages which are included and set out in the articles as the matter of the accusation; but it is competent to the accused party to explain from the rest of his work the sense or meaning of any passage or word that is challenged by the accuser. We may infer from these words that the Court will not have regard to any other portion of the work in which the passages occur; but that if the accused resorts to other parts of his work to explain away the accusation, the accuser may follow him into the same ground to refute the explanation; that if after the parties have been heard, without having travelled beyond the passage, a doubt shall exist in the mind of the Court whether the passage in question be heretical, or be devoid of all sense and meaning, the Court is not to cast even a glance into the rest of the work, in order to clothe it with meaning, but is bound, if it be not clearly heretical in itself, rather to consider it as unmeaning altogether. This strict rule may narrow the functions of the Court unduly, and may be at variance with the practice of other Courts in the analogous case of a libel; but there is no peril to the faith of the Church where a passage escapes censure because the Court cannot see its meaning, and declines to seek assistance elsewhere. These remarks seem necessary, because, in spite of the explicit disclaimer in the judgment, many persons persist in treating it as an examination and acquittal of the whole work called "Essays and Reviews." There are only two points in the judgment to which these remarks do not apply, and about which, after all these limitations, the mind of the Church is unreasonably disquieted—I mean the inspiration and authority of Holy Scripture, and the eternity of the punishment of the wicked. Upon the former of these points, the authority of Scripture, I must not shrink from saying that a doctrine as to Holy Scripture has found some countenance from the judgment which no article or formulary of any church whatever has before adopted—namely, that the Bible is called the Word of God, not because it is, but because it contains the Word of God. One of the appellants maintains that the title, Word of God, cannot properly be applied to the whole Bible by Protestants, because it is not so applied in the Bible itself, and Protestants own no other authority than the Bible. He thinks that the doctrine of the Church on this subject is to be sought for in the sixth article, which he terms the 'pivot article,' and this doctrine he thus expresses, 'The Word of God is contained in Scripture, whence it does not follow that it is co-extensive with it.' The other appellant maintains in two passages that are certainly not free from obscurity that the Bible is the production of devout human beings, which other devout human beings are entitled to criticise freely—that seeing the Prayer Book speaks of the Church as inspired we ought not to shrink from attributing inspiration to 'true hearts' in all ages merely because they are fallible, but we ought rather to reduce our theory of the inspiration of prophets and apostles to the same level, and confess that those Israelites of old might be fallible also; and that the inspiration which guided the writers of the Bible is the same in kind as that which Luther and Milton, and other good men, have at different times enjoyed. Obscure as the words of this writer are I assume that they have a meaning, and this is the only meaning which I am able to attach to them. His Grace having compared the statements of the writers with the articles of the Church, adds, he had no doubt that both appellants were clearly shown, even under the narrow rule laid down by the Committee of Council, to have broken the law of the Church, and to have advisedly taught what was contrary to the doctrines of the Church in her articles and formularies. Being unable to concur in the advice to be given to the Crown, the two primates recorded their dissent from that portion of the judgment. The archbishop concludes his letter in the following terms:—"I have now touched upon the two great questions which have troubled men's minds—the authority of the Bible and the punishment of the unpenitent sinner. It would be vain to deny that this trouble of the Church has a real foundation. And yet, my brethren, there is no reason for immoderate fear. The Church of England depends for her teaching, not upon prosecutions and decisions of courts, but upon the solemn undertaking, freely made by her ministers, that they will teach the people, according to her articles and formularies. In her articles the paramount authority of Holy Writ is, to my mind, sufficiently established. The clergy will not subscribe the articles and teach out of the Prayer Book without explaining and declaring to the people that the Bible is for us the law of the Church, and the voice of God. From our northern province not one single case of doctrine has gone up to the Court of Appeal since the Court received its present constitution. It may be that many now fear that the assent given to the Queen might not in some future case be in harmony with the conclusions of the great mass of the clergy. Still it is not to be thought that our teachers have up to this time been kept straight by the fear of a tribunal which, in fact, we have never used. If one of us should be tempted to err from the faith, more powerful than such a fear will be the common sense of his people, who, with the Bible in their hands, and the Prayer Book that acknowledges the Bible, will refuse to be led off from its plain statements. More powerful will be the voice of his own conscience that tells him what he has freely undertaken to teach, and how far he may depart from it without ceasing to be a teacher in a Church that is founded on the Bible. The Church of England knows nothing of courts and prosecutions, and her stability and soundness in the faith rest upon a different and a far surer guarantee than our present perplexity make the ministers more zealous in teaching the pure word of God, and the people more ready to hear and obey the same Word. Already great zeal for the precious heritage of the Church has been called forth, and though clouds and darkness are round us, they do not wholly obscure the wider horizon, and we know that he who has brought the pure Gospel to us in safety through past ages of trouble is able to preserve it to us for the time to come."

THE ALBERT MEMORIAL.—The site of the Prince Albert Statue has been again the occasion of much discussion in the corporation of Dublin. During the absence of the Lord Mayor and the leading members of the council, a motion was carried which virtually rescinded the resolution granting the site in College Green, and referred the matter to a special committee for further consideration. At that time it was not known whether Her Majesty was pleased with the site or not, as no communication on the subject had been received by the Lord Mayor. At the last meeting of the council, however, the Lord-Lieutenant transmitted a letter which the Queen addressed to him on the subject so far back as February 24, in which Her Majesty approved of the site in College Green. It was then moved that this expression of the Queen's wishes should settle the question, but an amendment was carried by a small majority for sending the letter for the guidance of the committee to whom the matter had previously been referred.

THE DUBLIN EXHIBITION.—This Exhibition was opened on Wednesday by the Lord Mayor, in the absence of the Earl of Carlisle, who is indisposed, and was unable to attend the banquet in the evening. The Exhibition promises to be very successful.

THREATENING LETTERS IN COUNTY MEATH.—Two gentlemen near Slane, in the county Meath, have received threatening letters—Mr. Bolton, of Cullen House, and Mr. Finlay, steward to the Marquis of Conyngham. With reference to this matter the Marquis has published a letter in the Drogheda Argus stating that as Mr. Slane has received an anonymous letter, threatening his life if he did not take on two labourers, and as he has for years employed on his estate at Slane the same number of men, whether present there or not, he is prepared to shut up the house, and turn off every labourer on his estate, if the notices are repeated. His lordship asks how a country can prosper when men are base enough to anonymously threaten the life of an individual, and cowardly enough to be ever ready to hoot a man behind his back?

THE GENERAL ASSEMBLIES.—The annual sitting of the General Assembly of the Church of Scotland was opened on the 19th instant by Lord Belhaven, Lord High Commissioner, with the usual ceremonies. The retiring Moderator, Dr. Craik, of Glasgow, preached the sermon in St. Giles's Church, after which Dr. Forbes of Aberdeen, was unanimously appointed Moderator for the year ensuing. The General Assembly of the Free Church was opened on the same day, when the nomination of Principal Fairbairn, of Glasgow, as Moderator for the ensuing year, was carried by acclamation.

THE EDINBURGH MINISTERS' TAX.—A great meeting for the purpose of petitioning parliament against what is called the Clerico-Police Tax was held in Edinburgh on the 19th instant. Councillor Ford occupied the chair, and many well-known citizens, lay and clerical, were present on the platform. Resolutions were passed condemning the principles of the tax, the manner in which the bill had been passed, protesting against its enforcement, and pledging the meeting to demand its repeal from parliament.

A VESSEL SUCKED INTO A WHIRLPOOL.—About three weeks ago a sloop bound from Stornoway to Hull with a cargo of dried fish, while passing down the Sound of Jura, was drawn into the whirlpool of Corrywreckan. The crew, on finding that she was wholly under the power of the current, abandoned her in the boat, and reached Easdale islands, whence they proceeded to Oban on their way back to Lewis. About a week afterwards a steamer while on her way to the North observed the sloop, with all sail set, on shore in a small bay at at the entrance to the Gulf of Corryvreckan, and on her arrival at Oban reported the matter, and the crew of the smack, who were there waiting for the steamer to take them home, immediately returned to the vessel, got her off, and proceeded on the voyage. It was said that she was sucked in by the whirlpool, and, after being thrown out, drifted with the eddy tide and went ashore at the spot where she was found.

COURT OF CHANCERY: Corporation of London v. The Governors of St. Thomas's Hospital.—Vice-Chancellor Page Wood gave judgment on Thursday in a suit arising out of a controversy between the corporation of the City of London and the governors of St. Thomas's Hospital. The common seal of the hospital is by law in the keeping of the City Chamberlain, and the corporation assumed and acted on the assumption that this custody gave them the right to set the seal to documents affecting the interests of the hospital without asking leave of the governors. The governors, on the other hand, contended that the corporation could only use the seal at the direction and under the control of the hospital governors, and the Vice Chancellor adopting this view, granted an injunction restraining the corporation from their claim to use the seal at their own discretion, and ordered them to pay the costs of the suit.—Thornton v. Sir John William Ramsden—Tenant right in Huddersfield.—Judgment.—Vice-Chancellor Sir John Stuart gave judgment on Wednesday in the long-pending action between Sir John Ramsden, Bart., and one of his tenants in the neighbourhood of Huddersfield. The late Sir John Ramsden was in the habit of granting verbal leases, renewable in perpetuity, and the present baronet soon after he came of age proposed to put the leases on a new footing, and to raise the rents, which led to a dispute that finally issued in Sir John bringing an action of ejectment. The action was tried in the case of one of these tenants; and the Vice-Chancellor decided that the tenant had acquired a right to the land of which the owner could not dispossess him, but that the ground-rent ought to be doubled. Sir John Ramsden to pay the costs of the suit. This will decide several other cases that were pending.

COURT OF QUEEN'S BENCH: The Confederate Pirates.—The three men who were apprehended at Liverpool on the charge of being pirates in the Confederate service, for seizing a Federal ship bound from Matamoras to New York, were brought up on Monday on a writ of habeas corpus before this Court. Mr. Edward James, who appeared for the Confederate authorities, was heard against their being delivered up to the Federal Government; and Mr. Lush addressed the Court for the United States Government. The case on both sides was argued at great length, and on Wednesday the Court gave judgment. The Lord Chief Justice said that if the piracy was an act of piracy by the law of nations, it was within the treaty and the statute: and if there was a sufficient primâ facie case, the magistrate ought to commit them, with a view to their being delivered up to the Federal government. He could not say there was not evidence primâ facie upon which he ought not to commit them for the purpose of their being delivered up. His judgment therefore was in favour of the Federal government. Mr. Justice Crompton, Mr. Justice Blackburn, and Mr. Justice Shee differed from the Lord Chief Justice. They were of opinion that this was piracy jure gentium, and that the treaty had referred to a peculiar and restricted jurisdiction, and that therefore the prisoners were entitled to their discharge. The Lord Chief Justice said the prisoners would have to be discharged, and he added that the effect of the decision was, that a British subject who committed murder in America for which he might be tried in this country, could not be given up. He thought the legislature never intended to consent to anything so mischievous. The prisoners were immediately discharged, and in less than half an hour were seen walking up the Strand, showing less concern than might have been imagined in those who might be said to have just slipped from the hands of the executioner. Coe v. Wise.—The Middle Level Inundation.—Their Lordships delivered judgment in this action, brought by the occupier of certain land in the fen district, to recover compensation from the Middle Level Commissioners for damage sustained owing to the bursting of a sluice. The action was tried before Lord Chief Justice Erle at the Norfolk spring assizes in 1863, when the defendants contended that the commissioners were not liable for the negligence of their engineers or servants, and that even if they were, they were not liable officially, so as to charge the funds of the commissioners, which latter question was reserved for the opinion of the Court. The jury found that the commissioners' servants had been guilty of negligence in the maintenance of the sluice. Subsequently a rule was obtained to set aside the verdict on the ground of misdirection, and the point of law above reserved. Cause was shown against the rule, on the ground that the commissioners were liable for the damage sustained. The arguments, which occupied several days, were concluded last term, and the Court took time to consider its judgment. The written judgments were very lengthy, but being exclusively of a legal character the result need only be given for the information of the general reader. Mr. Justice Mellor observed that the commissioners were trustees for a public purpose, acting without reward, and deriving no tolls from the works, and they had no means of raising funds, except for the specific performance of the objects of their private act. After reviewing the facts, the law, and the cases cited during the arguments, he said he was of opinion that they were not liable, and that the rule must be made absolute. Mr. Justice Blackburn was of a contrary opinion. He thought the plaintiff had a right to his verdict, and that the rule should be discharged. The Lord Chief Justice said the commissioners were not charged with neglect with regard to the original construction of the sluice, but in the maintaining, &c., the sluice in a perfect state, and in providing remedies after the sluice had been washed away. The question was whether the commissioners were entitled to immunity from the rule of law laid down in such cases. It being admitted that public trustees or commissioners could not be made liable in their individual character, the fact that the legislature had appropriated the funds to a specific object, and not left any out of which to pay damages, it led to the belief that they could not be made liable in their aggregate or quasi-corporate character. The case appeared to him in all respects to fall within the decisions by which they were bound, and he was of opinion the defendants were not liable, and the rule must be made absolute. The Court then gave the plaintiff leave to appeal to the Court of Error without giving the usual bail for costs. There are 66 other actions to be tried on the same subject.

COURT OF COMMON PLEAS: Thelwall v. Yelverton—Major Yelverton's Case.—The plaintiff in this case was a merchant at Hull, and the defendant was the Hon. Major Yelverton. The plaintiff having furnished Mrs. Yelverton with board and lodging, subsequently sued Major Yelverton in Ireland, and recovered a verdict for 250*l*., and a judgment was signed for the debt and costs, making in all 730*l*. The plaintiff then issued a writ in the English Court of Common Pleas upon the Irish judgment against Major Yelverton; and on the production of an affidavit, that this writ had been served upon the major in Paris, in accordance with the Common Law Procedure Act of 1852, Mr. Justice Keating made the usual order that the proceedings should be continued. Last term, however, the Court granted a rule calling upon the plaintiff to show cause why the order of Mr. Justice Keating, and also the writ and service thereof, should not be set aside, on the grounds that the writ had not been issued to enforce a cause of action arising in England, and that, in fact, the writ had never been served upon Major Yelverton. The Major swore that the writ had never been served upon him, and that at the date when it was said to have been served in Paris he was some 200 miles from that city. The Court on Monday gave judgment to the effect that the writ was issued upon the Irish judgment, and not to enforce a cause of action or a breach of contract within the jurisdiction of the English courts. Rule absolute to set aside the order of Mr. Justice Keating.

WEDNESDAY (THE DERBY DAY).—Never since Diomed won the first Derby, or the day when the Earl of Derby's famous mare Bridget carried off the honours of the first Oaks race, has there been such a gathering as assembled to-day at Epsom to celebrate the great national holiday. The rail and road were as crowded as ever, the latter with the old motley grouping of vehicles, and the course presented the old vast and surging crowd. The fineness of the day added much to the enjoyment of the scene. The sport commenced with the Epsom Town Plate.—Mr. Whittaker's Pixie beat Vabalathus, Nucleus, Alea, Humphrey, and Merry Bird. 85th Derby Stakes.—Mr. W. I'Anson's Blair Athol beat General Peel, Scottish Chief, Knight of Snowdon, and 26 others. The favourite had the lead at Tattenham Corner, closely pressed by Scottish Chief, Cambuscan, Birch Broom, Historian, and Blair Athol, the latter biding his time until they crossed the road, when he ran past his horses and joined the General on the upper ground, followed by Scottish Chief to the distance, where the pair beat the latter, and gradually drew away to the enclosure; Blair Athol then, without the slightest effort, quitted his opponent, and won with ease by a couple of lengths, the General defeating Scottish Chief by three lengths for the second money, the latter being three-quarters of a length in advance of Knight of Snowdon, who was half that distance before Cambuscan, Birch Broom, Ely, and Historian finishing next, within a length of Cambuscan, close up with whom were Coastguard, Baragah, Paris, and Apennine. The others, who were pulling up as they trotted past the post, were widely distributed, the last of which were Warrior, Privateer, Surat, Master Richard, and Major, and a long way in their rear walked in among a dense crowd Dormouse. The race was run in 2 minutes 44 seconds, being within a second of the time in which it was run by Kettledrum, the fastest horse ever known on the Epsom course. The net value of the stakes was 6675*l*. — Manor Plate.—Colonel Martyn's Oberon beat Diomed, Loafer, and 5 others. Bentinck Plate.—Lord Westmoreland's Cœur de Lion beat Hawkshaw, Antidote, and 5 others. Burgh Stakes.—Mr. H. Obituary.

THE COUNTESS DE SEPTEUIL, eldest sister of the Earl of Essex, died on Sunday at Cashiobury Park, from an accident by fire on the previous night. It appeared that she had arrived on the previous Monday on a visit to her brother, and that on Saturday evening she was engaged at her toilet when her light dress took fire from a candle, and she was instantly enveloped in flames. She tried to extinguish the fire by rolling on the bed, but finding this to be ineffectual, she rushed down the stairs to obtain help. Lord and Lady Sydney, and other friends who were staying in the house at the time, alarmed by her cries, went into the cloisters to ascertain the cause, when they saw her approaching them enveloped in a pillar of fire. Help was instantly rendered and the fire was extinguished. The Countess, though enduring great anguish, calmly told them to take care of the house, and it would seem that her warning was not given in vain, for on going to the room which she had left it was found to be on fire. The flames were however soon subdued. After great suffering the unfortunate lady died on Sunday morning. The burns were of the most severe nature, only the face and feet having escaped the ravages of the fire. The body has since been removed to France for interment. The Countess, who was in her 59th year, was the daughter of the fourth Earl of Essex, and in 1851 married a French nobleman, Colonel the Count Achille de Septeuil, who died a few years since.

MAJOR GENERAL LAKE, C.B., died on the 19th inst., at Wellesley House, Shooter's Hill, in his 65th year, Kent. He commanded the Royal Horse Artillery of the Light Division in the Eastern campaign of 1854 and 1855, including the affairs of Bulganac and M'Kenzie's farm, the battles of Alma, Balaklava, and Inkermann, and the siege of Sebastopol. He received the war medal and four clasps for his services; was made a Companion of the Bath; an officer of the Legion of Honour, decorated with the Order of the Medjideh, and the Turkish medal. He attained the rank of major-general in 1863.

SIR ALEXANDER MURRAY TULLOCH, K.C.B., died on the 16th inst., after a short illness. He only left town a few days previously to see a newly-purchased property in Dorsetshire. He was educated at Edinburgh, and afterwards at the Military College of Sandhurst, where he obtained the highest honours. He entered the army as ensign in the 45th Regiment in 1826, and subsequently filled several important administrative offices in the War Department. For some time he was in charge of the statistical branch of the War Office, and was latterly assistant military superintendent of pensioners. He obtained the honour of a K.C.B. for his services, in conjunction with Sir John M'Neill, in the Commission sent out to the Crimea in 1855, on the management of the British army during the campaign in the East.

METROPOLITAN CATTLE MARKET.

MONDAY, May 23.

The number of Beasts is smaller and the demand has improved, consequently prices are better for all kinds. The supply of Sheep is also smaller. The great change in the weather has caused a much better demand for big fen Sheep. All descriptions are dearer. Good Lambs and Calves are in request at higher rates. From Germany and Holland there are 1180 Beasts, 5380 Sheep, 140 Calves, and 80 Pigs; from Spain 122 Beasts; from Scotland, 470; from Ireland, 40; and 2320 from Norfolk and Suffolk.

THURSDAY, May 26.

We have a few more Beasts than on Thursday last. The weather being good there is a fair demand, and prices are about the same as on Monday. Sheep are also rather more plentiful. They are, however, all sold at fully late rates. Choice Lambs and Calves are in request, but inferior qualities meet with a dull sale at lower rates. Our foreign supply consists of 520 Beasts, 1430 Sheep, and 403 Calves. Milch Cows, 85.

MARK LANE.—MONDAY, May 23.

The supply of English Wheat was short this morning, that of Barley, Beans, and Peas limited, with moderate arrivals of British Oats. English Wheat met a slow sale at about the rates of last Monday for best qualities; foreign was in limited demand, without any material change in prices. Town Flour was unaltered, and country marks sold on about former terms. Barley realised previous rates, with a steady demand for grinding samples Malt was taken slowly at late rates. Beans brought fully as much money. Peas unaltered in price. Oats met a moderate demand at the currency of last week for all sorts. Linseed was firm and saleable. Rapeseed steady.

FRIDAY, May 27.

A very limited supply of English Wheat was on sale in to-day's market, coastwise and by land carriage, but the general quality of the samples was fine. For both red and white parcels there was a fair inquiry, but compared with Monday no change took place in the quotations. We were tolerably well, but not to say heavily, supplied with foreign Wheat. Good and fine qualities sold to a moderate extent, at late currencies. All other kinds were very inactive, on former terms. Floating cargoes of grain realised previous quotations There was a fair sale for Barley, at late rates; for the time of year the supply was tolerably good. Malt, the supply of which was good, changed hands slowly. Factors, however, were firm in their demands. Good sound Oats commanded full prices, but low and heated parcels were very dull. We had less business doing in Beans, although the supply was very moderate. Peas moved off slowly on former terms. The show of samples was small. The Flour trade was steady at previous rates.

LIVERPOOL, May 24.—We have had a very fair attendance of millers and dealers at our Corn Exchange this morning. We have to report a more general demand for Wheat than of late, at full prices, and in many instances 1d. per cental advance was made on last Friday's quotations. Flour was saleable at a slight reduction, but anything choice brought previous rates. Indian Corn neglected, and must be called 3d. per qr. lower. Oats and Oatmeal dull. In Beans, Peas, and Barley no alteration. The market shows much firmness at the close.

FRIDAY, May 27.—There was a moderate attendance at market. Wheat a fair sale, and winter red 2d. to 3d. per cental dearer; other qualities unchanged. Flour steady at late rates. Indian Corn unchanged. Egyptian Beans, Oats, and Oatmeal unchanged.

News of the Week.

IN the House of Lords on Friday, in answer to Earl STANHOPE, the Earl of CLARENDON said that the Government did not propose to introduce any measure on the subject of Public Schools in the present Session. On Monday, in answer to Lord LYTTELTON, Earl GRANVILLE said that the Home Government had assented to the Suppression of the Rebellion Act and to the Confiscation Act, passed by the New Zealand Legislature. The Local Government Supplemental Bill and the Divorce and Matrimonial Causes Bill passed through Committee. On Tuesday, after a long discussion, the Penal Servitude Acts Amendment Bill was read a second time. On Thursday the Mortgage Debentures Bill passed through committee with amendments. The Ecclesiastical Courts and Registries (Ireland) Bill, and the Summary Procedure (Scotland) Bill were read a second time. A Bill for the protection and regulation of the Oyster Fisheries was read a first time.

In the Commons on Friday, in answer to Sir S. NORTHCOTE, Lord PALMERSTON said that the Government had determined to refer the question of the Banda and Kirwee booty to the Court of Admiralty. The Public and Refreshment Houses (Metropolis) Bill was read a second time. The Union Assessment Committee Act Amendment Bill, the Army Prize Bill, and the Chain Cables and Anchors Bill were read a third time and passed. On Monday, on the order for going into committee of supply, Mr. WHITESIDE moved a resolution that it was expedient to reduce the existing duties on spirits. The CHANCELLOR of the EXCHEQUER opposed the motion, and after a short discussion it was withdrawn. Mr. ROEBUCK called attention to the expulsion of Mr. HOME, the spiritualist, from Rome, and asked if any steps had been taken to obtain compensation for the losses he had sustained. Mr. LAYARD said that as Mr. HOME had infringed the law of the country, to which he was bound to conform, there was no ground for calling upon the Papal Government for redress. The House then went into a Committee of Supply on the Civil Service Estimates, and agreed to several votes, after much discussion. The proposed vote of 4000*l.* for a Lunatic Asylum in the Isle of Man was negatived on a division by 95 to 73. On the motion for the second reading of the Writs Registration (Scotland) Bill, Major HAMILTON moved as an amendment that the debate be adjourned. The amendment was ultimately agreed to. The Vacating of Seats (House of Commons) Bill was read a third time and passed. On Tuesday Mr. COBDEN moved a resolution that the policy of non-intervention by force of arms in the internal political affairs of foreign countries, which we professed to observe in our relations with the states of Europe and America, should be observed in our intercourse with the empire of China. The motion was opposed by the Government, and was ultimately withdrawn. Alderman SALOMONS obtained leave to bring in a Bill to facilitate the traffic of the metropolis by improving the communication across the river Thames. Mr. HANKEY obtained leave to bring in a Bill for defraying out of fees a portion of the expenses of carrying into effect the Charitable Trusts Act of 1853. Lord PALMERSTON moved the nomination of the Select Committee on Education (Inspectors' Reports), to consist of 15 members. Mr. CLAY moved, as an amendment, that it be referred to the General Committee of Elections to nominate a Select Committee of five members. After a long discussion, in which Lord PALMERSTON expressed his readiness to adopt the amendment, Mr. HENNESSY moved that the debate be adjourned. On a division, this motion was negatived by 64 to 30. Colonel DICKSON then moved the adjournment of the House, which was negatived on a division, by 62 to 32. The adjournment of the debate was then moved, and ultimately agreed to. On Wednesday, on the motion for going into committee on the Tests Abolition (Oxford) Bill, Mr. TREFUSIS moved as an amendment that the Bill be committed that day six months. After a long debate, the amendment was negatived on a division by 236 to 226. On Thursday Mr. ADDERLEY moved a resolution to the effect that the minute of Council of the 11th March last, on endowed schools, did not meet the objections made to the minute of the 19th May, 1863. The motion was opposed by the Government, and negatived on a division by 119 to 111. The adjourned debate on the nomination of the Select Committee on Education (Inspector's Reports) was resumed, and after a long discussion, Mr. CLAY'S amendment that the Committee consist of five members, to be nominated by the General Committee of Selection, was agreed to. The Court of Chancery (Ireland) Bill and the Court of Queen's Bench (Ireland) Bill were read a second time.

The Plenipotentiaries accredited to the Conference met on Saturday and again on Thursday, when it was resolved to prolong the armistice for 15 days, on the condition that no further extension shall take place unless the basis of a peace be agreed to. It is understood that the German plenipotentiaries demand the cession of Flensburg and Düppel, while the neutral Powers adhere to the line of the Dannewerke as the Danish frontier. It is reported from Copenhagen that public opinion in that capital is decidedly opposed to the division of Schleswig, and that a continuance of the war is considered preferable to such a settlement of the question.

From the United States we learn that General GRANT again attacked General LEE on the 18th ult., and after a desperate conflict was obliged to retreat, with a loss of 1200 killed and wounded. On the following day General EWELL gained the Federal rear, and attempted to capture General GRANT'S supply train. After an hour's fighting, in which the Federals lost more than 1000 men, the Confederates returned to their entrenchments. The Confederate surprise of General BUTLER on the 16th was completely successful, the Federals losing a whole brigade and several cannon. General BEAUREGARD, on the 20th, was in General BUTLER'S front, and preparing to assault his intrenchments at Bermuda. Mr. STANTON has announced that General GRANT has been reinforced by 25,000 veteran troops. The forger of the proclamation has been discovered and lodged in Fort Lafayette.

The King arrived from Cintra to receive him, and went off in the Royal barge to convey his Royal Highness ashore. The Racoon, with the Prince on board, will sail for Ireland when the weather moderates, calling at Spithead.

MARRIAGE OF THE COUNT DE PARIS.—On Monday Louis Philippe Albert d'Orleans, Comte de Paris, the eldest hope of the Orleans family, was married to his first cousin, the Princess Isabelle of Spain, in the presence of a most illustrious company, including not only English nobility and foreign Ambassadors, but many of the representatives of the old historic names of France who still adhere in loyalty and hope to the fallen fortunes of the Orleans dynasty. The marriage was celebrated in the Roman Catholic chapel at Kingston, The event caused no little excitement at Kingston, Claremont, and Esher, and was made a gala day for all the country round. Dr. Grant, Roman Catholic Bishop of Southwark, officiated on the occasion, and among those present were the ex-Queen Marie Amelie, the Duke and Duchess de Montpensier, the Prince and Princess de Joinville, the Duke d'Aumale, the Duke and Duchess de Chartres, the Duke de Nemours, the Count d'En, the Duke d'Alençon, the Prince de Condé, the Princess Christine of Spain, the Spanish Minister and Madame Comyn, the Belgian Minister and Madame Van de Weyer, the Italian Minister, the Austrian Ambassador and Madame Apponyi, the Prussian Ambassador and the Countess Bernstorff, the Bavarian Minister, the Portuguese Minister and the Countess Lavradio, the Saxon Minister, Prince Edward of Saxe-Weimar, the Marquis and Marchioness of Clanricarde, the Earl and Countess Russell, Prince Ferdinand of Coburg, Prince Philip of Wurtemberg, the Princess Amélie of Coburg, the Prince Auguste of Saxe-Coburg, Lord and Lady Stanley of Alderley, General and Lady Alice Peel, Lord Houghton, Lord and Lady Foley, Earl St. Germans, Baron Marochetti, the Countess of Waldegrave, Sir Robert Peel, Sir Roderick Murchison, Mr. Chichester Fortescue, and numerous members of the French and Spanish aristocracy. After the service the bride and bridegroom, with the Queen-Mother, the Duke and Duchess de Montpensier and the leading members of the family, returned to Claremont. The road was lined with the inhabitants for nearly the entire distance, and at the road leading to Esher station there was a triumphal arch with flags and banners, on one of which was inscribed "Long life to the Count and Countess de Paris." Esher village itself was decorated in a very tasteful manner, for there were two handsome arches, the bases of which were adorned with the choicest flowers, while aloft were shields bearing the fleur de lis and the Orleans arms. At Claremont House the Count de Paris and his bride were received with salvoes of artillery, and the music of several volunteer bands; but, as last year, on the occasion of the marriage of the Duke and Duchess de Chartres, the prettiest feature was the assemblage of gaily-dressed ladies and children, who covered the broad flight of steps leading to the mansion, and heartily welcomed the bride and bridegroom on their arrival. Shortly afterwards the Prince and Princess of Wales, the Prince and Princess Louis of Hesse, the Duchess of Cambridge, the Princess Mary of Cambridge, the Duke of Cambridge, and the Grand Duke and Duchess of Mecklenburg Strelitz arrived and were very cordially received by the French Princes. After the company had assembled, the Count de Paris appeared on the steps of the portico, and amidst enthusiastic cheers said in excellent English—

"Ladies and Gentlemen,—I thank you, in my wife's name and my own, for your sympathy. Nothing can be more gratifying to me than to see this happy day celebrated by those amongst whom I have spent many years of my youth. The feelings towards us that have grown up during those years to be at last so kindly expressed to-day are the more valuable because I may conceive that they are quite spontaneous. They have been to my family a great comfort during the trials of exile. Therefore you are welcome on the day of a great domestic joy, and I trust that your good wishes will prove for us both a happy omen."

This address was greeted with renewed applause, amidst which the Count retired to a déjéuner which had been prepared in an immense marquee erected at the rear of the house. The Prince of Wales led the ex-Queen Marie Amélie to her seat, while the Grand Duke of Mecklenburg conducted the Princess of Wales. At the conclusion of the déjéuner the ex-Queen rose and proposed a toast to the health of the newly-married prince and princess, which was most enthusiastically responded to. The Prince and Princess of Wales, the Duchess of Cambridge, the Princess Mary, and the Duke of Cambridge soon after took leave, and were loudly cheered on their return. The Count and Countess de Paris departed in the afternoon for Woodnorton, Worcestershire, the seat of the Duke d'Aumale, where they will pass the honeymoon. In the evening a grand ball was given by the Duke and Duchess de Chartres, at their residence, Morgan House, Ham Common, to about 300 guests, including the Prince and Princess of Wales, the Prince and Princess Louis of Hesse, the Duke of Cambridge, the Grand Duchess of Mecklenburg-Strelitz, and the Princess Mary of Cambridge.

STATE BALL.—The Lord Chamberlain, by her Majesty's command, has issued cards for a full dress ball at Buckingham Palace on the 27th inst.

THE CONFERENCE.—The Plenipotentiaries accredited to the London Conference met on Saturday at the official residence of the First Lord of the Treasury, in Downing Street, and sat two hours and a half. All the members of the Conference were present. The Conference met again on Thursday, and sat for nearly four hours, when it adjourned to Monday.

THE CABINET.—A Cabinet Council was held on Saturday at the official residence of the First Lord of the Treasury in Downing Street.

BRITISH MUSEUM.—The Right Hon. Robert Lowe, M.P., has been elected a trustee of the British Museum, in the room of the late Sir George Cornewall Lewis.

Foreign.

FRANCE.—The Session of the Corps Législatif was closed on the 28th. The President, the Duke de Morny, delivered the customary speech, of which the following is an abstract:—"I have always comprehended my duty as a duty of conciliation, and have invited all parties to observe conciliation one towards another. How greatly should we serve the interests of our country by uniting all our forces without distrust and without irritation; and how much better should we serve the cause of liberty if we rendered it more attractive by moderation and justice in the expression of our opinions." This speech was received with great applause. The deputies then separated with cries of "Vive l'Empereur!" The Moniteur gives the following particulars respecting the meeting of the Conference on Saturday:—

"Before separating, the Plenipotentiaries of the belligerents were invited by the neutral Powers, in the interest of humanity, and to further the negotiations now in progress, to solicit without delay instructions from their respective Governments for a prolongation of the suspension of hostilities, in order to be able to discuss that question at their next meeting."

The Constitutionnel, in a short article signed by M. Paulin Limayrac, gives the following summary of the proceedings:—

"The German Powers formally proposed the union of Schleswig and Holstein, to be connected with Denmark solely by the personal union. That proposal was registered. A counter proposition was made for the separation from Denmark of Holstein and the German portion of Schleswig, under the sanction of the populations, to be consulted by a vote. The Danish representatives stated that they must refer to their Government, but the German Plenipotentiaries expressed their willingness to entertain this scheme under certain reserves."

Another account states that the German Plenipotentiaries claimed the whole of Schleswig as well as Holstein; that the Danish Plenipotentiaries absolutely refused to entertain the proposal; and that England made an offer of mediation, which was accepted only ad referendum. It is also understood in Paris that the Prussians refused to allow the armistice to be prolonged unless the Isle of Alsen were given up to them. The Mémorial Diplomatique says that this dismemberment of the Danish monarchy will only be sanctioned by the neutral Powers in the event of the Danish plenipotentiaries rendering any arrangement impossible on the base of personal union, but that the definitive separation of the German from the Danish population of the Duchies appears certain to be the result of the deliberations of the Conference. Several evening papers assert also that England, Russia, and Sweden intend to propose to the Conference to stipulate that Kiel should not become a Federal port, nor Rendsburg a Federal fortress. M. Duruy, Minister of Public Instruction, has presented a report to the Emperor pointing out the abnormal position occupied by M. Renan, who by a measure of public order has been incapacitated for the last two years from fulfilling the duties of his Professorship at the College of France. The Minister says:—

"It is as contrary to the good administration of the public funds as to the dignity of a distinguished scholar that he should be compelled to submit to the anomaly of receiving salary without fulfilling his functions. Not being able to restore M. Renan to the chair, which he occupied on a single occasion, it is expedient loyally to terminate the present abnormal state of things by appointing M. Renan to other functions."

In consequence of M. Duruy's report an Imperial decree has been issued appointing M. Renan Assistant Curator of the Imperial Library.

SPAIN.—The Ministry have received news from Peru announcing that the Government of Peru was disposed to satisfy the demands of Spain. A Cabinet Council was held on Monday at Aranjuez, to discuss this question. Two Spanish frigates are about to start for the Pacific. The Progressist Committee, disregarding the differences prevailing between Señores Espartero and Olozaga, has resolved upon reorganising the party. It is asserted that Espartero has openly assumed the direction of a sub-division of the party, and that a modification of the Ministry will take place after the close of the session.

PORTUGAL.—The King arrived from Cintra on the 30th ult. to receive Prince Alfred, who had arrived on the previous day in the Racoon. A Bill to establish free trade in corn has been introduced to the Cortes. It is rumoured that the Portuguese Government is about to bring forward a new loan for 50 millions. Heavy gales were raging in the Tagus on Tuesday night, during which the British ship Freak and the Russian ship Arthur were capsized in the harbour.

DENMARK.—The Fädrelandet of the 29th ult. says:—

"We learn that it is extremely improbable that the Government will prolong the truce, unless a basis for peace should be submitted. In that case the truce would be replaced by an armistice upon different conditions from those on which the former has been concluded."

It is also asserted that public opinion at Copenhagen energetically demands a resumption of hostilities, the present season of the year being especially favourable to the Danes. In case of fresh delays arising, their naval strength could but be neutralised by the approach of the bad season. The Dagbladet of the 31st, in an article on the Danish question, says:—

"Should the London Treaty be annulled, and the German inhabitants of the monarchy themselves decide upon their destiny, the settlement of the succession will become void. The Danish inhabitants will then demand an equal right of choosing for themselves a monarchical or a Republican Government, and also decide whether they join Germany or Sweden."

The same paper of Wednesday expresses itself violently against England's proposal at the Conference for the division of Schleswig, and demands that the Government should meet it with a decided resistance. The Flyneposten, the organ of the Conservative party, likewise prefers war to the acceptance of this proposal. The latest advices from Jutland state that the Prussians continue to arrest Danish officials, and have subjected the local press to censorship. It is semi-officially denied that the contributions and confiscations ordered prior to the 12th of May, which were to be cancelled in consequence of the armistice, have been withdrawn by the Prussians. Intelligence from Aalborg announces that the Prussians are constructing entrenchments at that place.

THE DANISH DUCHIES.—The Duke of Augustenburg left Kiel on Tuesday evening for Berlin, and intends, it is said, to proceed thence to Vienna.

FRANKFORT.—In the sitting of the Federal Diet on Thursday, on the proposition of the United Committees, the Federal Governments were summoned to prohibit the export by sea of gunpowder and arms from North Germany.

PRUSSIA.—The semi-official Nord-Deutsche Allgemeine Zeitung of Saturday says:—

"It is incorrect that proposals for the division of Schleswig have been officially made by the British Cabinet. To the extent of our knowledge such a division has only been confidentially alluded to by the British Cabinet."

The same Journal of Monday says that England has given notice of her intention to propose that Kiel under no circumstances should become a Federal port. This presumption it says has been decisively rejected by the representatives of Prussia, Austria, and the Federal Diet. The same paper of Tuesday says that even if the neutral Powers had no objection to see the Holstein succession treated as a German question, they would nevertheless regard the succession in Schleswig as a question subject to international decision.

AUSTRIA.—The Presse of Vienna says that Count Apponyi, the Austrian Ambassador in London, has been instructed to propose at the Conference the candidature of the Duke of Augustenburg, and the complete separation of the Duchies from Denmark. The Ost-Deutsche Post of Monday publishes the following as having passed at the last sitting of the London Conference:—

"At the sitting of the 28th, Count Apponyi explained the principles upon the bases of which the allied Powers are disposed to make peace. These principles are complete separation of the Duchies from Denmark, and their constitution as an independent German State, under the government of the hereditary Prince Frederick of Augustenburg. The representatives of France presented a conciliatory project tending to incorporate Holstein and Lauenburg, with part of Schleswig, in the Germanic Confederation, and the other part of Schleswig with Denmark. The Earl of Clarendon supported this proposition, and stated at the same time what would be the line of division. The Plenipotentiaries of Austria, Prussia, and the Germanic Confederation pronounced against a partition of Schleswig, and declared the views of Denmark inadmissible. All the propositions made were accepted ad referendum to the respective Governments. The question of the armistice was not discussed. The Danish Plenipotentiaries presented no counter proposition."

ITALY.—The Pope resumed his receptions on Monday. The health of his Holiness is said to be completely re-established. Signor Minghetti, Minister of Finance, announced in the Chamber of Deputies on Monday that the 200 millions of the last loan have been issued upon conditions which he hoped would be found advantageous.

IONIAN ISLANDS.—Greek troops were landed at Corfu on Wednesday. On the following day the Greek flag was hoisted on the forts amid great enthusiasm. The protocol ceding the Ionian Islands to Greece was signed on the 28th ult., whereupon the Lord High Commissioner published a proclamation announcing the fact. His Lordship then received a vote of thanks from the Senate. The British Consulates have been informed that, in compliance with the wish of Greece, England will extend her protection over the Ionian inhabitants in their relations with the Turkish authorities for another year.

DANUBIAN PRINCIPALITIES.—The result of the general plebiscite in the Principalities is 713,285 votes for, and 57 against, the new constitution proposed by Prince Couza. There were 766,905 persons entitled to vote, out of which number 53,563 were either absent, ill, or abstained from voting.

TUNIS.—Intelligence from Tunis to the 25th ult. states that the Arabs having discovered that the Caid of the tribe of Medjees had betrayed the Bey set up by the insurgents, put him to death, together with 60 of his relations and servants. Eighteen vessels were in the roads of Tunis ready to take on board those Europeans who might desire to embark. As the Bey persisted in refusing to dismiss his Ministers, and as the Europeans on the coast were still compelled to remain on board the ships, the admirals had decided on disembarking troops for the protection of their countrymen against pillage and anarchy. The Italians were to occupy the principal ports of the Regency.

INDIA.—A telegram from Bombay, of May 14th, states that the Rev. Izambart Lowenthal, missionary to the Affghans, has been murdered at Pesbawur. The Viceroy has arrived at Simla.

CHINA.—The chief subject of interest in China is the Taeping rebellion. The China Mail has some details of the two disasters which Colonel Gordon's forces had experienced, in one of which the colonel was wounded. Capt. Gibbon was wounded and taken prisoner; Capt. Schinkoff, the same—since seen dead and cut open; Lieutenant Pratt, seen to have been speared by the rebels, supposed to have been killed; Lieutenants Polkson, Hughes, and Graves, and Captain Dowling, also wounded and made prisoners, besides from 150 to 200 men with their arms. Notwithstanding their temporary success, the rebels were, on the whole, losing ground, though they still had a force of 40,000 men in the field. Colonel Gordon was recovering from his wound, and was expected to be shortly able to resume active service.

UNITED STATES.—At daybreak on the 18th ult. General Grant again unsuccessfully assaulted General Lee's centre and left. After a desperate conflict, lasting throughout the forenoon, the Federals were forced to retreat, with the loss of 1200 killed and wounded. An attack by General Lee is stated to have been subsequently made upon Grant's front, and repulsed. On the 19th General Ewell gained Grant's rear, and attempted the capture of the Federal supply trains. The result is unknown; but after an hour's fighting, in which the Federals lost upwards of 1000 men, the Confederates returned to their intrenchments. Gen. Johnstone continues to draw Gen. Sherman away from his base. Official despatches from the latter announce his arrival at Kingston, 70 miles south of Chattanooga, and that he was still advancing and Johnston retiring. It has since been announced that he has reached Casseville, and that a great battle is imminent at Atlanta. The Federals have occupied Rome. The surprise of General Butler appears to have been completely successful. The Confederates under General Ransom captured General Hickman, with nearly his whole brigade and eight or ten cannon, and drove the whole Federal force to their intrenchments at Bermuda. The Federal loss in killed and wounded is admitted to be 2500. The latest news states that General Beauregard is in General Butler's immediate front, preparing to assault his intrenchments. Mr. Stanton, Secretary of War, announces that 25,000 veteran troops have been sent to reinforce General Grant. The Confederate steamer Florida left Bermuda on the 14th ult., it is believed for the track of the New York and Liverpool steamers. Mr. Howard, of the Brooklyn Daily Eagle, has been arrested as the author of the forged proclamation of President Lincoln, and sent to Fort Lafayette. He has confessed his guilt and implicated others, stating that it was concocted for speculating purposes. The Government had previously suppressed the World and Journal of Commerce for publishing the forged proclamation, and had handed over their printing offices to the possession of the military, but since the arrest of the author both journals have been released. The Secretary of the War Department has announced that it is the intention of the Government to maintain the national forces until the rebellion is overthrown; and to provide against inopportune reduction when the services of the 100 days' men expire, a draft to fill their places and all other reductions will be ordered on July 1st.

PERU.—The West Indian mail brings the following intelligence respecting the rupture between Spain and Peru:—On the 14th April, the Spanish squadron took possession of the Chincha Islands, hoisted the Spanish flag, made prisoners of the Governor and officers of the islands, and captured the Peruvian transport Iquique, with her officers. Thence the Spanish squadron proceeded to Callao, for the purpose of surprising the Peruvian squadron in that port. This was frustrated by the fleet getting up steam and moving under the protection of the guns of the castle. On the 16th the Spanish squadron again made their appearance in the Bay of Callao, with hostile intentions, but sailed again in the evening for the Chincha Islands. When the mail left the greatest excitement prevailed at Callao; and a large body of foreigners had placed themselves at the disposal of the Government to fight for the independence of Peru. Active preparations were making by the authorities to resist attack. The batteries in the forts were placed in fighting order, and boats equipped for service. The British, American, and Bolivian Ministers held a meeting at Lima and passed a vote of sympathy with the Peruvian Government, and resolutions to petition their respective Governments for intermediate intervention to secure an adjustment of the difficulties. Masters of foreign vessels applied to their respective Ministers for instructions how to act. The Spanish residents in Callao embarked on board Spanish vessels. The latest news announces that the loading at the Chincha Islands was not interrupted, and that the contracts were respected. Great excitement prevailed at Lima respecting the Spanish difficulty, there being no prospect of a settlement. The Government had been authorised to raise a loan of 50,000,000 dollars, to augment the army to 30,000 men, and the navy to 20 vessels.

HOUSE OF LORDS.

FRIDAY.—Earl STANHOPE called attention to the report of the Public Schools Commission, and especially to the course of inspection which is therein discussed, and inquired as to the intention of her Majesty's Government. He bore testimony to the care and labour with which the report had been drawn up, and especially approved of that portion which maintained the superiority of classics and mathematics as the foundation of a really liberal and comprehensive system of education; but he expressed his regret that at most of the schools, and especially at Eton, there was still a determination not to encourage English composition, or music, or drawing. At the same time he agreed with the most eminent schoolmasters that instruction in natural science, although in itself a most delightful and important study, was not compatible with the other courses of instruction, and with the leisure essential for recreation and athletic exercises. He was, however, of opinion that too much time and labour were wasted upon composition, more especially upon Greek prose and verse. He also objected to the proposal of the commissioners to appoint a council to advise the head masters of the great public schools, which he was certain would destroy the influence and responsibility of the head masters, and in other respects be productive of great evil.—The Earl of CLARENDON said that the commissioners had devoted the greatest attention, not merely to the system of instruction pursued in public schools, but to the manner in which the raw material of English intellect was formed, and the character of an educated and Christian gentleman developed in them. He was highly gratified at the concurrence of the noble earl in the necessity of classical education as the substructure of all learning, without which an intimate knowledge of English literature was impossible, but the commissioners did object to classics or mathematics monopolising the whole system of education, especially in the case of boys who had no chance of excelling in those studies, but who had developed an aptitude for other branches of learning. The great excellence of the system was that it turned out young men at eighteen not only high spirited and honourable, but well grounded, well disciplined, and, if not superior in any one branch, capable of directing their attention with advantage to any profession or pursuit. Still, it was objected that many of the boys did not devote their time to study, and consequently left school grossly ignorant. This was to be deplored, as also the circumstance that the head-masters showed a disposition to resist innovations in favour of modern languages. He believed the commission would have done great good if, in these days of increased intercourse with other countries, they had demonstrated the necessity of more attention being paid to modern languages, without which in the present day a man was really only half educated. With respect to natural sciences, he contended that they were most useful in developing certain kinds of intellect, and that they ought not to be excluded. The subject then dropped. The Bills on the table were advanced a stage.

MONDAY.—Public Schools.—The Earl of CLARENDON laid on the table a Bill to provide that any persons acquiring rights in reference to the governing bodies of public schools should hold those rights subject to any decision on the question of public schools which might hereafter be arrived at by Parliament.—Lord LYTTELTON called attention to the present state of the native population of New Zealand. He feared it had not improved in the last few years, and he described some of the causes of the deterioration. Among these causes was the destruction of all the old native authorities, without establishing anything else in their place. He made several suggestions for the better future government of the colony, and hoped, above all, that the Home Government would discourage the local wars by refusing to contribute from the Imperial Treasury to their expense.—Earl GRANVILLE adverted to the difficulty of the problem to be solved in New Zealand, and paid a high tribute to the manner in which the war had been conducted by our military and naval forces. He thought it was expedient to call upon our colonies to bear a considerable share of the expense of wars undertaken for their defence, and he believed it would be desirable to take measures for bringing the natives more immediately under the control of the Government, but how it should be done was a subject which required great consideration. The first thing, however, to do was to establish our authority over the natives. The Home Government had assented to the Suppression of the Rebellion Act and to the Confiscation Act passed by the local Legislature of New Zealand.—Lord LYVEDEN said the natives had been alienated from the Europeans, and did not believe their promises. The question was how the confidence that once existed could be restored. He believed the colony would never be at peace as long as the settlers could draw on the purse of Great Britain for the cost of wars of which the local expenditure was so profitable.—The Earl of CLANCARTY condemned in strong terms the act of the New Zealand Legislature for the suppression of the rebellion.—Earl GREY traced the difficulties which had arisen in New Zealand to the evils of self-government. The war, however, was now practically at an end, and it was necessary that the Government should consider what policy they would pursue. He regretted that they had not disallowed the Confiscation Act, and he censured them for not having taken steps to bring the whole question under the notice of the House. The Local Government Supplemental Bill and the Divorce and Matrimonial Causes Amendment Bill passed through committee.

TUESDAY.—Earl GRANVILLE moved the second reading of the Penal Servitude Acts Amendment Bill, which had come up from the Commons. He said that the Government had not deemed it expedient to carry out the recommendations of the Royal Commissioners for the revival of the system of transportation to Australia in the face of the excitement which that suggestion had occasioned in those thriving and populous colonies; at the same time they had not complied with the unreasonable demands of the wealthy eastern settlements that transportation should cease to Western Australia.—Lord HOUGHTON regarded the necessity of abandoning transportation as one of the greatest social misfortunates that had ever happened to this country. He approved of a penal system which would hold out inducements to reformation, but those inducements must not be such as to introduce an element of uncertainty into the execution of the sentence. He also deprecated any undue interference by the police with the holders of tickets of leave.—Lord CRANWORTH also regretted the abandonment of transportation, alike on account of the mother country, the convict, and the colonies. In his opinion transportation opened the only certain means of reformation. Penal servitude being a necessity, a remission of the sentence as the reward of good conduct was the only way in which to engender industrious and useful habits.—Lord TAUNTON was not surprised at the intense feeling with which the colonies had protested against the revival of transportation, and was glad that the Government had abstained from attempting to revive it. He wished they had also resolved to abandon it in the case of Western Australia.—The Earl of CARNARVON was in favour of short, sharp, and certain punishments; but, under the present system, they were neither sharp nor certain, though undoubtedly they were short. He entirely approved of the Bill, and considered that it was based upon sound principles.—Earl GREY feared that the measure did not make a sufficient change in the system of shortening the sentences passed by the Judges. The return of criminals to their old haunts, after a term of imprisonment much shorter than their sentence, was a great encouragement to crime. He denied the right of the other Australian colonies to object to transportation to Western Australia. The grievance they alleged was wholly imaginary, as the escape of convicts from Western Australia was impossible. The inhabitants of New South Wales did not object to the establishment of a penal colony by France in New Caledonia, though the passage from that island to the eastern coast of Australia was not so difficult as from the Swan River. He thought the Bill was marked by the same indecision that marked the policy of the Government in other respects. He would support an amendment, if moved, making seven years the minimum of a penal sentence instead of five.—The Earl of LICHFIELD concurred with Lord Grey as to the necessity of a longer term of imprisonment as the shortest sentence. The Bill was then read a second time.

THURSDAY.—Bristol Channel Defences.—Earl DE GREY and RIPON stated, in reply to Lord PORTMAN, that steps were being taken for the erection of defences in the Bristol Channel.—Lord STRATFORD DE REDCLIFFE called attention to the state of Circassia, and the excesses perpetrated by the Russians, and asked whether the Government would lay upon the table any information on the subject.—Earl RUSSELL said he would supply all the information in his power. The details were of a most painful character, and he feared that very great barbarities had been committed. The House went into committed on the Mortgage Debentures Bill, when Lord PORTMAN moved the omission of the 32d clause, which empowered trustees to invest trust moneys in the debentures while public companies would be authorised to issue under the Bill.—The Marquis of Bath seconded the motion.—The LORD CHANCELLOR suggested that the objection might be met by inserting words rendering the operation of the clause prospective only. The clause was struck out on the understanding that a new one should be brought up on a subsequent stage of the Bill, which was then passed through committee.—The Archbishop of ARMAGH moved the second reading of the Ecclesiastical Courts and Registries (Ireland) Bill, the objects of which are to reduce the number of these institutions from 26 to 12, to simplify the procedure in the Diocesan and Ecclesiastical Courts, reduce the number of vicars-general to 12, and remove appeals in the Irish Ecclesiastical Courts from the Court of Delegates to the Queen in Council. The Bill was read a second time. The Summary Procedure (Scotland) Bill was read a second time. The Local Government Supplemental Bill was read a third time and passed. The Marquis of CLANRICARDE brought in a Bill for the protection and regulation of Oyster Fisheries. The Bill was read a first time.

FRIDAY.—Jamaica.—Lord DUNSANY moved an address for a copy of all correspondence between the Colonial Secretary and the late Governor and Lieutenant-Governor of Jamaica, respecting the establishment of party Government or responsible Government in that island, and of various other papers relating to the island.—Lord STANLEY of ALDERLEY, on the part of the Government, assented to the motion.

HOUSE OF COMMONS.

FRIDAY.—The Banda and Kirwee Booty.—Sir S. NORTHCOTE moved an address to her Majesty praying the distribution of this booty.—Lord PALMERSTON said he was willing to refer the question to the High Court of Admiralty. On this understanding the motion was withdrawn.—Mr. SCULLY moved an address to her Majesty for a commission to inquire and report as to the best system for Registering Titles to Land in Ireland, and to frame a measure for that purpose; also to consider and report as to the creation of transferable debentures upon land in Ireland.—The ATTORNEY-GENERAL for IRELAND said that the subject had not escaped the attention of the Government, and that a measure was in preparation which they hoped to introduce either this session or early in the next. After some discussion the motion was withdrawn.—Mr. LONGFIELD called attention to the purchase, by the Law Life Assurance Company, of large estates in Ireland, and the results attending this acquisition of property, and moved an address to the Crown on the subject. He argued that all the evils of absenteeism were inflicted upon the extensive territory possessed by the company that evictions were numerous, that no encouragement was given to tenants, and that the accession of the estate by theCompany, was, in fact, a curse to that part of the country.—Lord J. BROWNE said that if the Company had not interposed at the sale of the estate in the Incumbered Estates Court during the famine year, the property would not have realised more than one-fourth of their claim upon it, and that since it had come into their possession it was managed better than the majority of estates owned by absentee landlords.—Mr. MURRAY defended the policy of that Company in the management of their Irish property, and said that they were willing to sell the estates at the valuation of any two respectable land surveyors.—Mr. GREGORY said he had received letters from most respectable gentlemen living in the counties of Galway and Mayo, corroborating all the charges which Mr. Longfield had made against the Company.—Sir. R. PEEL deprecated the discussion, as calculated to create unjust and angry feelings against the Law Life Assurance Company, who held the estates against their own will, in consequence of advances made by them to a man who had been unable to repay them. At first he was disposed to agree to the opinion expressed by Mr. Gregory, but upon a full and fair investigation of the whole case he honestly believed that the Company had not otherwise administered the property than in a manner conducive to the interests of the tenants.—After some remarks by Sir T. BURKE, Mr. MAGUIRE, and Mr. SCULLY, the motion was withdrawn.—Mr. WHALLEY brought under notice the instructions issued by the police commissioners as to the suppression of Public Meetings in the Parks, and to the power assumed by subordinate officers of the police force, pursuant to those instructions, in suppressing a recent meeting at Primrose Hill.—Mr. AYRTON thought it very desirable that the Government should state what in their opinion were the rights of the public in reference to the parks.—Sir G. GREY said that the parks were the property of the Crown, and were dedicated to the public use, subject to certain conditions and restrictions which were essential to the object for which they were given over to the public. With regard to the suppressed meeting at Primrose Hill, he regretted that the police had exceeded their duty by interfering, and the inspector had been reprimanded for his conduct on that occasion.—The House then went into Committee of Supply pro formâ, but progress was immediately reported. The Public and Refreshment Houses (Metropolis) Bill was read a second time. The Union Assessment Committee Act Amendment Bill, the Army Prize Bill, and the Chain Cables and Anchors Bill were read a third time and passed.—Sir C. O'LOGHLEN obtained leave to bring in a Bill to regulate and amend the law in relation to the keeping together and discharge of Juries in Criminal Cases.—The other business on the paper was then disposed of.

MONDAY.—The Steam Rams.—In answer to Mr. HODGKINSON, the ATTORNEY-GENERAL explained the terms on which the steam rams in the Mersey had been purchased by her Majesty's Government. He said that before the seizure of the vessels the Government made an overture for their purchase, which was declined, but subsequently M. Bravey, the French gentleman who claimed to be the owner, offered them at a price which, being regarded as in excess of the value, was declined. Subsequently an application came from the same quarter, and the Government having ascertained the value of the vessels, made an offer of 220,000*l.* (including the cost of completing the vessels), and this having been accepted they had passed into the possession of the Crown, thereby preventing the possibility of their being used by either of the belligerents. No condonation of the alleged misdemeanour formed any part of the arrangement, but it was quite impossible that any claim could be made by the defendants for compensation. In conclusion, he expressed a hope that it would not be found necessary to propose any new legislation on the subject, and added that the Government were as determined as ever to maintain the law, should any future infractions of it be attempted. The Spirit Duties.—On the order for going into committee of supply, Mr. WHITESIDE moved that it was expedient to reduce the existing duties on spirits. He urged that the increase of duty imposed in 1860 had resulted in a gradual and steady diminution of the manufacture and consumption of spirits in Scotland and Ireland, and in the enormous growth of illicit distillation. He therefore put it to the Government whether it was politic to continue a system of taxation which demoralised the people, while it affected their health by the substitution of a poisonous for a comparatively harmless stimulant.—The CHANCELLOR of the EXCHEQUER, in opposing the motion, contended that the equalisation of the spirit duties was the chief object which had influenced him in recommending that the duty be raised to 10*s.* in all parts of the United Kingdom. The reduction in the consumption was to be traced to several causes, including the large consumption of tea and beer, the condition of the country, and the decrease of population; while the increase of illicit distillation was to be traced to the low price of oats, which formed the raw material of whisky, and to the extraordinary vigilance of the constabulary as compared with that of the revenue police.—Sir S. NORTHCOTE recommended that the motion should not be pressed, as the select committee on the subject of the taxation of Ireland was now sitting, and would no doubt take into its consideration the effect of the recent financial legislation affecting that country.—Lord C. HAMILTON recommended the Chancellor of the Exchequer to retrace his policy, and reduce the duty on Irish spirits as soon as possible.—Mr. MONSELL maintained that there had been no general increase of illicit distillation in Ireland.—After a few words from Lord NAAS, the motion was withdrawn. The Case of Mr. Home, the Spiritualist.—Mr. ROEBUCK asked the Under Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs whether any steps had been taken to obtain compensation for Mr. Home, the spiritualist, who had been directed by the Papal Government to leave Rome within 48 hours, on the ground that he was in communication with spirits. This sudden dismissal had entailed considerable loss upon him, as he had just taken a studio in Rome, and was about to commence the profession of a sculptor.—Mr. LAYARD said that no substantial grievance of which the Government could take cognisance had been inflicted upon Mr. Home, who had not been imprisoned or deprived of his property. He had made himself obnoxious to the Papal Government, and they had exercised their undoubted right to order him to leave Rome.—Mr. HENNESSY and Mr. V. SCULLY defended the Papal Government, contending that persons who professed to read the past or the future, either by the medium of spirits or otherwise, were amenable to the laws of England as well as that of Rome. The House then went into Committee of Supply on the Miscellaneous Estimates. The following were among the votes agreed to:—26,000*l.* for the Public Record Repository, 20,000*l.* for Westminster Bridge approaches, 10,930*l.* for New Westminster Bridge, 3260*l.* for architectural designs, 4000*l.* for the Nelson monument in Trafalgar Square, 96,000*l.* for harbours of refuge, 57,875*l.* for Holyhead and Portpatrick harbours, 97,000*l.* for public buildings in Ireland, 18,000*l.* for new Record buildings (Dublin), 13,703*l.* for lighthouses abroad, and 17,000*l.* for Sheriffs' Court House, Scotland. On the motion that 4000*l.* be granted for an asylum for criminal and other lunatics in the Isle of Man, Colonel STUART moved the rejection of the vote, on the ground that the inhabitants of the Isle of Man, who were not represented in that House, had ample powers to tax themselves for local institutions. On a division, the vote was rejected by 95 to 73.—A vote of 53,000*l.* was agreed to for land, &c., at Kensington Gore; and at half-past 12 o'clock the chairman reported progress.—The LORD ADVOCATE moved the second reading of the Writs Registration (Scotland) Bill, explaining the object of the measure and the ground upon which it was proposed.—Major HAMILTON moved that the debate be adjourned. This amendment was seconded by Mr. SMOLLETT, and ultimately agreed to.—The Vacating of Seats (House of Commons) Bill was read a third time and passed. Other Bills were advanced a stage.

TUESDAY.—Spain and Peru.—Mr. LAYARD stated, in answer to Mr. NEWDEGATE, that the Government had received despatches from the British Minister in Peru, giving an account of the seizure of the Chincha Islands by a Spanish squadron. It appeared that the Spanish Minister had made a demand upon the Peruvian Government, which was not complied with; and thereupon, without further notice, the squadron took possession of the islands. He understood that the loading of guano for British subjects would not be interrupted; but he had not yet received any statement from the Spanish Government of the reasons which had led to these proceedings.—Mr. LINDSAY postponed his motion in favour of recognising the independence of the Confederate States until the 17th of June. Mr. Herbert's Picture.—In reply to Mr. GREGORY, Mr. COWPER stated that so soon as Mr. Herbert had completed the process by which he intended to cover his great picture in the robing-room of the House of Lords with a varnish of silicate of potass, measures would be taken to admit the public to view it. China.—Mr. COBDEN moved a resolution that the policy of non-intervention by force of arms in the internal political affairs of foreign countries, which we professed to observe in our relacions with the States of Europe and America, should be observed in our intercourse with the empire of China. He said that the state of our relations with China was of the most unsatisfactory character, especially so far as our commerce was concerned. China was the only foreign country where we had systematically endeavoured to force a trade by violence and war, and curiously enough it was the only country which formed an exception to the general progress which was apparent everywhere else. In the course of about 20 years we had had three wars with China, the object of which was to open up trade with that country, but the result had been that wherever there had been a war, our merchants, stimulated by the anticipation of extended markets, sent out large quantities of produce to China, and the result had been invariably disappointment, collapse, and reaction. The moral of all was that we could not extend our commerce by means of war and violence, and he recommended as the best method of getting out of our difficulties in China the establishment of a certain number of free ports on the coast, as we had already done at Singapore, where the population had increased in 40 years from 200 to 100,000. He objected to our persistence in a policy that was most costly alike to our national character and our material interests, and urged that the Government ought to restrain their representatives at the antipodes, revert to the policy enunciated by the Duke of Wellington, and terminate our direct relations with China; for it was the opinion of the Duke that we had no right to force our political connections or system on that country. He also recommended that early next session a select committee should be appointed to inquire into our commercial relations with China and Japan, and that we should endeavour to impress upon the commercial community that it was equally their duty and their interest to show to pagan nations the superior brightness of our Christianity and civilisation.—Mr. LAYARD in reply contended that our trade with China, so far from having fallen off, had increased to an enormous extent in the course of the last few years. With regard to the establishment of free ports, he reminded the House that Shanghai and Hong Kong were already free.—Mr. GREGSON defended the policy of the Government, and maintained the absolute necessity of defending the treaty ports.—Sir J. ELPHINSTONE warned the House against exhibiting any sympathy for the Taepings, who were the greatest ruffians on the face of the earth, and spread havoc and desolation wherever they went.—After some remarks by Mr. WHITE and Colonel SYKES, Lord PALMERSTON said the House ought not so much to consider the relations between the Anglo-Chinese force and the Taepings, as the large results which had followed the opening of diplomatic intercourse with the country. The expeditions under Capt. Osborn and Major Gordon had failed on account of the jealousy of the Chinese themselves; but her Majesty's Government would not have sanctioned their employment had it not been considered absolutely necessary to assist in putting down a state of civil war which threatened to compromise the commercial interests of this country. The object of England in establishing herself at the treaty ports was not to obtain territory; all she wanted was a basis for her commerce, and this could not be obtained so long as a revolutionary horde was in their neighbourhood. The attempt to obtain friendly and direct relations with the Government of China had been eminently successful, and had met with the approval of the country. The trade of the empire with China had increased enormously, and the Government were bound by all legitimate means to open up what appeared to be an inexhaustible field for British enterprise.—Mr. BRIGHT said that the policy of the Government had shattered the whole political and social system of an empire containing nearly one-third or one-fourth of the population of the globe. The noble lord at the head of the Government had laid much stress upon the importance of maintaining our commercial intercourse with China, but that trade was very small compared with the population to be served, and the cost of protecting it had far exceeded the profit obtained from it, because to maintain an export trade of only four millions per annum 40 or 50 ships of war had to be kept on the Chinese station. He recommended the noble lord religiously to abstain from all interference in the civil war in China, and to reverse the policy of the last 30 years, which has brought shame and discredit upon the name and fame of England. The motion was then withdrawn.—Alderman SALOMONS obtained leave to bring in a Bill to facilitate the purchase of Southwark and Waterloo Bridges by a rate on metropolitan property of one penny in the pound.—Mr. HANKEY obtained leave to introduce a Bill for defraying a portion of the cost of carrying out the Charitable Trusts' Act by means of fees.—Lord PALMERSTON moved the nomination of a select committee of 15 on the Education Inspectors' Reports.—Mr. CLAY moved as an amendment, that it be referred to the general committee of elections to nominate a select committee of five members.—After some discussion, Lord PALMERSTON intimated his readiness to accede to the amendment, but Mr. HENNESSY having moved the adjournment of the debate, the motion for the adjournment was negatived on a division by 61 to 30.—Colonel DICKSON then moved the adjournment of the House, which was rejected on a division by 62 to 32.—Major S. KNOX then moved the adjournment of the debate. After some further discussion this motion was agreed to.

WEDNESDAY.—The Steam Rams.—The ATTORNEY-GENERAL in reply to Mr. Tollemache, said that the proposal to purchase the iron-clads in the Mersey came from Messrs. Bravay, the owners of the vessels, and not from her Majesty's Government.—On the order for going into Committee upon the Test Abolition (Oxford) Bill moved by Mr. DODSON, Mr. TREFUSIS moved as an amendment that the Committee be deferred for six months. He urged that the Bill would introduce an entirely new principle into the University; that there was no demand for the measure, nor any strong sympathy outside the House in its favour.—Mr. LEATHAM ridiculed the objections to the Bill, founded upon a supposed danger to the Church of England, as obsolete and refuted by time and experience. The hostility to the Bill grew out of bigotry and intolerance, which represented what was regarded as a concession to Nonconformity.—Mr. C. CLIFFORD likewise supported the Bill, believing it to be impossible to check the growth of opinion. All our legislation of late had been in the direction of civil and religious liberty, and he was prepared to go further if need be.—Mr. MORRIS said that the principle of the Bill, which was now again discussed, had been already affirmed on the second reading. He was of opinion that the true policy of the Church of England was concession.—Sir S. NORTHCOTE denied that the principle of the Bill had been affirmed on the second reading; it was not determined what its principle really was, and he thought the House should not go into committee upon the Bill until it was presented in such a form that its principle and extent could be fully understood.—Mr. ROEBUCK said he objected to all tests which let the large flies through (such as Gibbon and Hume) and excluded the small ones.—Sir W. HEATHCOTE said that this argument was founded upon a transparent fallacy. Men must have some credit for honour and honesty. Tests were imposed to maintain in the University a certain tone of religious education.—Mr. SCULLY thought the proper course was to refer the Bill to a Select Committee.—Mr. MOWBRAY said he had voted for the second reading of the Bill; but he did not think it right that Nonconformists should have a voice in the governing body of the University, and, seeing no restriction of this kind proposed, he must vote against going into committee.—Mr. NEATE was in favour of going into committee upon the Bill, which he thought a very moderate measure.—Lord R. CECIL said that the Bill, instead of being a liberal measure, was one of a very exclusive kind. It substituted for the existing tests one of the most vague and indefinite character.—Mr. GÖSCHEN defended the Bill, the principle of which was, he said, to abolish the existing theological tests for academical degrees, providing another test.—Mr. C. FORTESCUE, as a churchman, objected to the bondage of subscription in the University.—Mr. HENLEY said that the doctrines propounded in that discussion made it plain that the supporters of the Bill regarded it as only an instalment. He should therefore vote for the amendment.—Sir G. GREY said as he had voted for the second reading of the Bill, he felt bound to vote for going into committee; but he thought it would be wise in those who had charge of the Bill, in order to relieve apprehensions, to amend it by providing that the governing body of the University should be connected with the Church.—After some observations by Mr. NEWDEGATE and Mr. BOUVERIE, the House divided, when the amendment was negatived by 236 to 226.—The House then went into committee upon the Bill, but the CHAIRMAN was ordered to report progress. On the order for going into committee upon the Election Petitions Bill, moved by Mr. HUNT, Mr. AYRTON said that this was a repetition of an effort made last Session to amend the law of election petitions, and moved, as an amendment, that a Select Committee be appointed to inquire into the expediency of amending the Election Petitions Act (1848), and the Act for the better discovery and prevention of Bribery and Treating at Elections.—Mr. COLLINS seconded this amendment. The debate was adjourned. The Servants Hiring (Scotland) Bill was read a second time.

THURSDAY.—The Education Minutes.—Mr. ADDERLEY moved a resolution that the House having considered the minute of Council of the 11th of March, 1864, on endowed schools, was of opinion that it did not meet the objections made to the minute of the 19th of May, 1863. The principal of these objections was that the latter minute would have swept the endowments of all schools into the Treasury, and that this proposal, being contrary to the feelings of the House, Mr. Lowe issued a new minute proposing to exempt from general and indiscriminate confiscation the small rural schools of the country, defined as schools of 1200 square feet; but with a proviso that even in the case of these small institutions, though they were not to have their endowments wholly confiscated, they should be so far taken from them that the Government grant and endowments together should not exceed 15*s.* a-head for the pupils. He submitted that this proposition was opposed to the former decision of the House, and set at naught its authority.—Mr. WALTER opposed the motion on the ground that these endowments ought not to be respected in the distribution of the Government grant, whether the amount was small or large.—Mr. H. BRUCE defended the minute, and urged that, as the contribution of the State was given to supply a need where it existed, the grant ought not to be made where such need did not exist. He did not deny that there might be abuses under the present system, and that some schools received money that were not entitled to it, and this was a matter to which the committee of council were directing their attention. On a division, the motion was negatived by 119 to 111.—The adjourned debate on the nomination of a select committee on the reports of the Inspectors of School's was then resumed, the point at issue being whether the committee should consist of 15 members, which was the original proposition of the Government, or of five members, to be nominated by the General Committee of Elections, as proposed by Mr. Clay, and in favour of which ministers had abandoned their own proposal.—The CHANCELLOR of the EXCHEQUER, Mr. BOUVERIE, Sir F. BARING, and Mr. BRIGHT supported the amendment of Mr. CLAY, which was opposed by Mr. DISRAELI, but was ultimately agreed to without a division.—On the motion for the second reading of the Court of Chancery (Ireland) Bill, Mr. LONGFIELD moved as an amendment that the Bill be read a second time that day three months. He argued at great length that Chancery reform had been introduced into Ireland many years before the courts of equity in England had been brought under its influence, and that it would be altogether premature to deal with the subject at the present time.—Mr. VANCE seconded the amendment.—The ATTORNEY-GENERAL for IRELAND defended the Bill, and reminded the House that it was the result of the deliberations of two Royal Commissions, who had reported in favour of its principal provisions.—Mr. WHITESIDE characterised the Bill as an unreasonable attempt to force the recommendations of the commissioners upon the profession and the public, and as one that ignored the official existence of the Lord Chancellor.—The ATTORNEY-GENERAL, Mr. SCULLY, and Mr. MONSELL supported the Bill; Mr. FITZGERALD opposed it. The amendment was finally withdrawn, and the Bill was read a second time. The Court of Queen's Bench (Ireland) Bill was also read a second time. The report of the Committee of Supply was brought up and agreed to.

FRIDAY.—Railway Companies.—Lord STANLEY moved that so much of the Standing Order as prohibited railway companies owning or using steam vessels, harbours, and docks be repealed. The motion was opposed by Mr. BARROW and Mr. CLAY, and supported by Mr. HORSMAN and Mr. M. GIBSON; and was ultimately negatived without a division. Abyssinia.—In reply to Mr. H. SEYMOUR, Mr. LAYARD said the Government had received indirect information that the King of Abyssinia had imprisoned her Majesty's consul and several missionaries. The French consul had also been imprisoned, but had been released. The question was under the serious consideration of the Foreign Office. [Left sitting.]

Metropolis and its Vicinity.

THE VOLUNTEER REVIEW.—On Saturday the Volunteers were reviewed by the Prince of Wales in Hyde Park in the presence of the Princess, the Prince and Princess Louis of Hesse, and such a concourse of spectators as has seldom before assembled within its precincts. As a military demonstration it was, of its kind, one of the most important; as a pageant it was one of the most brilliant it is possible to imagine. The Volunteers on the ground numbered 21,743, or 3000 more than they did in 1860, when they were reviewed by her Majesty. It is estimated there were about 50,000 persons present to witness the review, and all passed off without accident.

METROPOLITAN POLICE COURTS.—Mr. Cuthbert Ellison, formerly of the Home Circuit, now stipendiary magistrate at Manchester, has been appointed a magistrate of Worship Street Police Court, in place of Mr. Leigh, who has resigned.

GENERAL GARIBALDI'S DEPARTURE.—The Turin journals publish a letter from Garibaldi, in which he says:—

"I pray my friends to partake with me the deep gratitude I owe to all Englishmen whom I have known in their noble country. My friends know that I resolved to visit England to pay a sacred debt of gratitude, and I withdrew when I thought fit to do so, without ceding to any instigation. With regard to those from whom I received hospitality, I can never sufficiently acknowledge their immense courtesy, so splendidly lavished."

THE PUBLIC HEALTH.—The Registrar-General's Weekly Return states that the deaths in London in the week that ended Saturday, May 28, were 1234. The average number in the corresponding week of the 10 years 1854-63, corrected for increase of population, was 1233. The present return is therefore only 1 above the average. During the week the births of 1030 boys and 936 girls, in all 1966 children, were registered in London. In the 10 corresponding weeks of the years 1854-63 the average number was 1938.

CAMBRIDGE.—The Prince and Princess of Wales paid their promised visit to this University on Thursday. Their Royal Highnesses travelled from London by a special train of the Great Northern Railway, accompanied by the Duke of Cambridge, Lord and Lady Palmerston, and other distinguished personages. Great preparations had been made for their reception, and "town and gown" turned out in mass to meet them, and to escort them in triumphal procession to Trinity College. The University Volunteer corps did duty at the station, and the escort was formed by the Duke of Manchester's regiment of Light Horse Volunteers. The Mayor and Corporation presented an address to their Royal Highnesses on passing through the town, and on their arrival at Trinity, the Duke of Devonshire as Chancellor of the University, the Vice-Chancellor, the Heads of Houses, Professors and Members of the Senate, presented an address of congratulation, to which the Prince made a suitable reply. A procession of the Colleges in order of seniority followed, after which the Princess delivered the prizes to the Volunteers, all of whom wore rosettes of the Danish colours in honour of her Royal Highness. The Royal party then proceeded to the Senate House, when the Honorary Degree of LL.D. was conferred on the Prince of Wales, the Duke of Cambridge, Lord Spencer, Lord A. Harvey, Lord Harris, and General Knollys. The presentation of medals to the successful competitors in the recent examination then took place, followed by the recitation of the prize poems. In the evening the Vice-Chancellor entertained the Royal party and a distinguished company at dinner in the hall of Peterhouse. Their Royal Highnesses were afterwards present at a grand ball at the Fitzwilliam Museum. Yesterday, the honorary degree of LL.D. was conferred on the Duke of Manchester, Earl Stanhope, the Earl of Carnarvon, Viscount Palmerston, Viscount Eversley, Lord Leigh, Sir Bulwer Lytton, Vice Chancellor Wood, Sir Charles Eastlake, the Dean of Westminster, Mr. Beresford Hope, Dr. Watson, M. Charles Gabriel Cobet, Dr. Hoffman, and Professor Wheatstone.

PLYMOUTH.—A fatal accident occurred in the Sound on Monday in consequence of the artillery practice. Two watermen were proceeding from Hamoaze to the Channel squadron in the Sound, when an eight-inch hollow shot fired from the citadel struck their boat, hit one of them, George M'Coy, and caused a compound fracture of the pelvis. He lingered in a shocking condition for six hours, and died the same night. This is not the first accident of the kind which has happened, numerous boats crossing the Sound having been struck in a similar manner, some of them even having been sunk. Such frequent remonstrances have been made in vain to the military authorities, that great excitement has been occasioned in the town by the present accident.

COURT OF ARCHES: The Tamworth Church Rate.—This great church-rate dispute was further heard on the 23d ult., in this Court, and decided on the question of costs. The case had been pending some time. The rate was three-halfpence, and the inhabitants moved that it might be quashed, on the ground of its inequality. The church-wardens of the parish instituted a suit against a householder, to try the question affecting the whole parish, and after voluminous proceedings and considerable costs, Dr. Lushington decided that the rate was bad, and ordered it to be quashed, expressing an opinion that the law on church-rates was in a most unsatisfactory state, and that church-wardens had an arduous duty to discharge. His lordship, on the question of costs as to prebendal lands, reserved the point for the present occasion, and the same was discussed at some length, on the part of the parish and for the inhabitants. The Court refused to give the defendant costs on the prebendal land inquiry, but awarded them on the other point against the parish. No notice of appeal has been given in this long contested suit decided against the parish, and it is anticipated that the costs on both sides will not be much under 1000*l.*

POTATOS.—SOUTHWARK, Monday, May 30.

During the past week the arrivals both coastwise and by rail have been far greater than the demand; the trade is in a very bad state, and many cargoes have been stored to save demurrage. The following are this day's quotations:—Yorkshire Flukes, 30*s.* to 50*s.* per ton; do. Regents, 20*s.* to 30*s.*; Seedlings, 20*s.* to 30*s.*; do. METROPOLITAN CATTLE MARKET.

MONDAY, May 30.

We have a few more Beasts than on Monday last, but the demand has also increased, and prices are not lower. There are not quite so many Sheep, with a brisk demand, consequently prices on the average are better. Good Lambs are in demand at fully late rates. Calves are not quite so dear as they have been. From Germany and Holland there are 940 Beasts, 1860 Sheep, and 201 Calves; from Scotland, 550 Beasts; from Ireland, 60; and 2840 from Norfolk and Suffolk.

There are a few more Sheep; trade is not so brisk as on Monday; prices, however, are about the same. Choice Lambs are in demand. Calves are plentiful and rather cheaper. Our foreign supply consists of 620 Beasts, 2160 Sheep, and 586 Calves. Milch Cows, 90.

MARK LANE.—MONDAY, May 30.

The supply of English Wheat to this morning's market was short, that of Barley, Beans, and Peas limited, and the arrivals of British Oats were moderate. Of foreign grain the imports were tolerably good. English Wheat sold steadily at the full prices of last week for the best qualities; there was scarcely any demand for foreign Wheat, and materially prices were unchanged; 16,248 qrs. were imported. Town-made Flour was unaltered, and country marks were steady in price. Barley was in fair request, with a demand for grinding samples. Malt was unaltered in price. Beans were quite as dear. Peas supported prices. Oats were in good request at last week's full currency for all sorts. Imports, 16,382 qrs. Linseed was quite as dear. Rapeseed brought full prices. Floating cargoes were held with firmness, but there was no activity in the demand.

FRIDAY, June 3.

Our market was very scantily supplied with home-grown Wheat, but the quality of the arrivals was good. Both red and white samples were in moderate request, at prices equal to Monday, and at which a clearance was effected. The show of foreign Wheat was only moderate for the time of year. Selected parcels changed hands to a fair extent on former terms; otherwise the trade was heavy at late currencies. Scarcely any change took place in the value of floating cargoes. The demand was somewhat restricted. The supplies of both English and foreign Barley were by no means extensive. Malting samples were very dull, but other kinds were tolerably firm in price. Malt was in fair average supply and sluggish request, on former terms. We were but moderately supplied with Oats, which changed hands to a fair extent, at last week's prices. Beans were quite as dear as on Monday, with a steady inquiry. The show of samples was trifling. Peas moved off freely at late rates. The Flour trade was firm. In prices no change took place. The inquiry for all agricultural seeds was heavy. In cakes very little was doing.

LIVERPOOL, May 31.—We have had a very fair attendance of buyers at to-day's market; Wheat has obtained an advance of fully 1d. per cental on the quotations of last Friday, and we notice a more general inquiry. Flour is held with firmness, and if anything is more saleable. Indian Corn is offered sparingly, and must be quoted 5d. per qr. dearer. Oats and Oatmeal are still very difficult to move, the latter article especially. Beans, Peas, and Barley steady at previous rates. The market closes a degree more cheerful than of late.

FRIDAY, June 3.—There was a moderate attendance at market. Wheat met an improved demand, at 1d. to 2d per cental advance since Tuesday. Flour: French is more in request, and holders ask 6d. to 1*s* per sack advance; barrels are also 6d. dearer. Indian Corn steady at late rates. Egyptian Beans, Oats, and Oatmeal in steady demand; value unchanged.

The Furnishing of Bed Rooms.

HEAL AND SON have observed for some time that it would be advantageous to their customers to see a much larger selection of BED-ROOM FURNITURE than is usually displayed, and that to judge properly of the style and effect of the different descriptions of Furniture, it is necessary that each description should be placed in separate rooms. They have, therefore, erected large and additional Show Rooms, by which they are enabled not only to extend their show of Iron, Brass, and Wood Bedsteads and Bed Room Furniture, beyond what they believe has ever been attempted, but also to provide several small rooms for the purpose of keeping complete suites of Bed Room Furniture in the different styles.

Japanned Deal Goods may be seen in complete suites of five or six different colours, some of them light and ornamental, and others of a plainer description. Suites of Stained Deal Gothic Furniture. Polished Deal, Oak, and Walnut, are also set apart in separate rooms, so that customers are able to see the effect as it would appear in their own rooms. A Suite of very superior Gothic Oak Furniture will generally be kept in stock, and from time to time new and select Furniture in various woods will be added.

Bed Furnitures are fitted to the Bedsteads in large numbers, so that a complete assortment may be seen, and the effect of any particular pattern ascertained as it would appear on the Bedstead.

A very large stock of Bedding (HEAL & SON'S original trade) is placed on the Bedsteads.

The stock of Mahogany goods for the better Bed Rooms, and Japanned Goods for plain and Servant's use, is very greatly increased. The entire Stock is arranged in eight rooms, six galleries (each 100 feet long), and two large ground floors, the whole forming as complete an assortment of Bed Room Furniture as they think can possibly be desired.

Every attention is paid to the manufacture of the Cabinet work, and they have just erected large Workshops on the premises for this purpose, that the manufacture may be under their own immediate care.

News of the Week.

IN the House of Lords on Friday the Chimney Sweepers and Chimney Regulation Bill, the Naval Prize Acts Repeal Bill, and the Naval Prize Bill passed through Committee. On Monday the Earl of CLARENDON moved the second reading of the Public Schools Bill, the object of which is to render any new appointments to the governing bodies of public schools subject to future legislation upon the question. After a long discussion the Bill was read a second time. The Divorce and Matrimonial Causes Act Amendment Bill was read a third time and passed. On Tuesday the Union Assessment Continuance Act Amendment Bill was read a second time. In committee on the Penal Servitude Acts Amendment Bill, Lord HOUGHTON moved as an amendment the omission of the words requiring the holders of tickets of leave to report themselves once a month, but still leaving the obligation to report themselves on change of residence. On a division the amendment was negatived by 49 to 41. The Bill then passed through committee. On Thursday, in answer to the Earl of SHAFTESBURY and the Marquis of CLANRICARDE, Earl RUSSELL stated that at the sitting of the Conference on that day, it was agreed by all the Powers, on the proposition of Denmark, to prolong the armistice for a fortnight from the 12th inst. The Marquis of CLANRICARDE moved for papers relative to the enlistment of Irish emigrants and Canadians in the armies of the United States, and suggested that if the remonstrances of the Government against this system of recruiting were not attended to, it would be a question whether a declaration of war would not be justifiable. Earl RUSSELL in reply said that the Foreign Office and Lord LYONS had frequently remonstrated with the United States Government on the subject, and he thought it highly discreditable to the civil and military authorities of the United States that they had not fully investigated the representations that had been made to them. He admitted that the case was one of that class which did frequently lead to war; but we had just as much reason to complain of the conduct of the Confederates as of that of the Federals. The Government would continue their remonstrances, and he hoped they would be attended with success. In answer to the Earl of DERBY, the LORD CHANCELLOR said that he was prepared to agree to the amendment in the County Courts Act Amendment Bill reducing the period for the limitation of debts under 20*l.* in the first instance to three years, and to make the measure prospective, and not retrospective.

In the Commons on Friday Mr. CHILDERS, in answer to Sir JOHN HAY, described the reforms which the Government intended to introduce in the management of Greenwich Hospital. He said that in accordance with the recommendations of the commissioners, it was intended to abolish the double government of the Hospital, to appoint a chief officer to preside over its affairs, and to do away with the residential civil and military appointments at the end of five years, giving fair compensation to those who might then hold them. It was also proposed to increase the out-pensions of men who had reached a certain age, and to limit the admissions to the Hospital to those who were incapable, in consequence of age, infirmity, or loss of friends, of maintaining themselves outside its walls. These changes would effect a great saving of expense, and would be matured during the recess, in order that a measure on the subject might be brought before the House early in the next Session. Sir J. HAY, Sir J. PAKINGTON, and other members expressed their satisfaction at this statement. The Banking Copartnership Bill was read a third time and passed. On Monday, in answer to Mr. OSBORNE and other members, Lord PALMERSTON said that no arrangement had yet been come to with regard to the continuance of the armistice, and that the suspension of hostilities would expire on the 12th, if not previously renewed. No day had been fixed for the next Conference, as the members were waiting for instructions from their respective Courts; but there was no reason to doubt that the Conference would meet again before the expiration of the armistice. In reply to further questions, his lordship declined to state what had been the proceedings of the Conference, and said that to divulge from day to day what was taking place would be to endanger the results and absolutely imperil the peace of Europe. Lord PALMERSTON brought up two messages from the QUEEN, one recommending a grant of 20,000*l.* to Sir ROWLAND HILL, and the other a pension of 1000*l.* a year to the Countess of ELGIN. The House having gone into Committee of Supply on the Civil Service Estimates, Mr. COWPER moved a supplementary estimate of 10,000*l.* on account of a new National Gallery to be erected in the gardens of Burlington House, at a cost of 152,000*l.* Lord J. MANNERS moved the rejection of the vote, on the ground that the proper site for a National Gallery was in Trafalgar Square. After a long discussion the vote was rejected, on a division, by 174 to 122. The Government Annuities, &c., Bill was recommitted. On Tuesday, Mr. LINDSAY moved for copies of correspondence between her Majesty's Government and the Governments of France, Spain, and Portugal, relating to the abrogation of the discriminating duties still levied upon British vessels and their cargoes trading with those countries. Mr. M. GIBSON assented to the motion, which was agreed to. Mr. CAIRD moved a resolution that the collection and early publication of agricultural statistics of Great Britain would be advantageous to the public interest. He suggested that the necessary information might be collected by the persons engaged in the ordnance survey, at a cost not exceeding 3000*l.* per annum. Mr. M. GIBSON moved the previous question. On a division, the resolution was carried by 74 to 62. On Wednesday Mr. LAWSON moved the second reading of the Intoxicating Liquors Bill, the object of which was to provide that no licences to public-houses and beer-shops should be either granted or renewed in case two-thirds of the inhabitants of a parish were opposed to it. Captain JERVIS moved as an amendment that the Bill be read a second time that day three months. On a division, the amendment was carried by 292 to 35. A debate ensued on the motion for the second reading of the Valuation of Land and Heritages (Scotland) Bill, which was not concluded when the hour for adjournment arrived. On Thursday Lord PALMERSTON announced that the Conference had that day agreed to prolong the armistice for a fortnight. Lord PALMERSTON then moved that, in accordance with the recommendation of HER MAJESTY, the House should confer a pension of 1000*l.* a year upon the widow of the late Earl of ELGIN, in acknowledgment of his great public services. The motion was seconded by Lord STANLEY, and unanimously agreed to. On the order for going into committee on the Collection of Taxes Bill, Sir H. WILLOUGHBY moved that it was not expedient that the land, assessed, and income tax should be collected by officers of the Inland Revenue. The CHANCELLOR of the EXCHEQUER defended the Bill, and the motion was negatived on a division by 137 to 103. The House then went into committee on the Bill, and agreed to the different clauses. The LORD ADVOCATE withdrew the Writs Registration (Scotland) Bill, and the ATTORNEY-GENERAL withdrew the Church Building and New Parishes Acts Amendment Bill. On the order for the second reading of the Street Music (Metropolis) Bill, Mr. HANKEY moved that the Bill be read a second time that day three months. After some discussion, and a division on the question of the adjournment of the debate, which was negatived by 56 to 19, the Bill was read a second time.

Advices from New Zealand announce that two severe engagements had occurred at Maungatawhiri and Tarachi. The natives were defeated at the former place, which they abandoned, while at the latter our troops suffered a reverse. Our loss in killed and wounded in both engagements amounted to 80, including Captain RING 18th Regiment, killed; Captain FISHER, 40th Regiment, and Ensign CHAYTER, 65th Regiment, severely wounded. The probability of the close of the campaign is said to be still distant.

The latest news from the United States informs us that on the 20th ult. General GRANT again advanced, when General LEE, finding his right flank turned by General HANCOCK, abandoned his position at Spottsylvania, and took up another strong position between the North and South Anna rivers. It was reported in New York, at the departure of the mail, that General GRANT was moving towards the peninsula. General BUTLER is still besieged by the Confederates in his entrenchments. General BANKS has succeeded in reaching New Orleans, and General SHERMAN is advancing in Georgia, but without being able to come up with Gen. JOHNSTON, who is said to avoid a battle in order that he may transfer his troops to reinforce Gen. LEE.

Foreign.

FRANCE.—An Imperial decree was issued on Friday, permitting rice in grain and in straw to be henceforward imported into France from all countries and under any flag free of duty. The Pays, which is considered to be the organ of the Foreign Office, gives the following details of the proceedings of the Conference, "from its personal information:"—

"The German Plenipotentiaries announced that they had modified their claims on one point, and no longer required that the whole of Schleswig should be united to Lauenburg and Holstein, and formed into an independent State; but agreed that Schleswig should be divided, and that Denmark should retain possession of the Danish part, on the condition that a frontier line should be drawn from Flensburg, which would deprive Denmark of two-thirds of that province. The Cabinet of Copenhagen could not accept such conditions, and the German Powers, if really animated with a desire of restoring peace, should not persevere in pretensions which would render it impossible, but should accept a more equitable frontier. It will be for England, which has taken the initiative and is alone responsible for this proposal, to make such representations to the Germans as will induce them to accept her plan. When it has overcome the stubbornness of the Germans, her Majesty's Government will then have to obtain the assent of Denmark, which has hitherto refused to entertain the principle of its dismemberment. If the matter be not arranged it will be hard for England to avoid going to war, and we congratulate the Cabinet of the Tuileries on its caution, because if the war were to recommence it will not be bound to interfere in the struggle after the breakdown of the Conference, any more than it was before its meetings."

The Constitutionnel of Tuesday, in an article signed by M. Paulin Limayrac, says:—

"The Conference will reassemble before the 12th inst. There is reason to believe that the friends of a policy of moderation at any price will not be deceived in their hopes, and that we shall not see that war recommence which has already caused so many disasters."

The same journal of Thursday says:—"The replies of Austria and Prussia have arrived. These Powers are stated to consent to the prolongation of the armistice for a fortnight." The Court of Cassation last week rejected the appeal of La Pommerais, in accordance with the suggestion of the Procureur-Général. The jury subsequently petitioned the Emperor for a commutation of the sentence, and the father of the prisoner had an interview with his Majesty to entreat his compliance with their prayer. The Emperor however rejected the appeal, and La Pommerais was guillotined on Thursday morning at 6 o'clock, in the presence of 30,000 spectators. Imperatori and Scaglioni, who were sentenced to imprisonment for 20 years for having conspired to assassinate the Emperor of the French, are about to be removed from the prison of Mazas to a fortress where they are to undergo their punishment. Greco and Trabucco, who were sentenced to transportation, are shortly to be removed from Paris to the place of their destination, which is not yet announced. M. Renan has published a letter declining the post of Assistant Librarian, conferred upon him by the Government. He declares that it is his wish to retain the title of Professor of the Hebrew and Syriac languages, which he holds upon the double presentation of the College of France and as a member of the Institute. He says that he will continue to fulfil without salary the duties which this title confers upon him by lectures at his own house, and labour for the development of studies intrusted to his charge. The Moniteur of Sunday says:—

"The professors of the College of France have been requested to propose two candidates for the Professorship of Comparative Grammar. At a future period measures will be taken to fill the chair of the Hebrew, Chaldaic, and Syriac languages, vacant by the decree of the 1st of June."

The race for the Grand Prix de Paris, for 3-year-olds, 100,000f. and a work of art presented by his Majesty the Emperor, was run on Sunday, when Vermuth beat Blair Athol and Fille de l'Air, the winners of the Derby and Oaks, and won easily by two lengths. This result, as the victory of a French horse over an English one, has caused more excitement and delight in Paris than any event which has occurred for years. Official despatches from Algeria announce that the Marabout Si-el-Azerey had attacked General Lapasset, at Gueld-Bouzid, but was vigorously repulsed. General Rose arrived at Zamorah on the 3d without having experienced the least resistance. The province of Constantine has remained tranquil. General Jusuf has defeated the contingents of Djebel Amour, and the manœuvres of the troops daily render it more difficult for the Arabs to keep up the insurrection. It is said that General Deligny foresees the time approaching when the insurrectionists will be forced to disperse. The Emperor has sent the Count d'Espeuilles, one of his orderly officers, to Algeria, to send him an account of the military operations. The 12th battalion of Foot Chasseurs, now in garrison at Strasburg, has received orders to leave for Algeria.

SPAIN.—The Peruvian Consul in Madrid has announced to the Spanish Government that he is empowered to arrange all the differences between the two Governments. He has also written to the Epoca stating that he can prove by documents that Señor Mazaredo, the resident Spanish Minister in Peru, did not send an ultimatum to the Peruvian Government before acting. Admiral Piry will replace Admiral Pinzon on the Pacific station. The latter will proceed to San Domingo. A deputation from Cuba has arrived at Madrid to solicit the right of nominating deputies to the Spanish Cortes. It is asserted that General Serrano is about to visit France. The Queen returned to Madrid from Aranjuez on the 10th inst. General Espartero will be in the new Progressista Committee. Senor Olozaga has set out for France. General Prim is about to proceed to Vichy. The Bill regulating political meetings has been passed by the Cortes.

NORWAY.—On the 17th ult., the 50th anniversary of the proclamation of the Constitution was celebrated with great solemnity at Christiania. Several speeches were delivered, expressing warm sympathy towards Denmark, and regret that the Government should, under existing circumstances, have confined itself to a barren demonstration on behalf of a sister country.

DENMARK. — A despatch from Copenhagen states that, since there is a possibility of a renewal of hostilities, it was resolved at the Privy Council of State held on Saturday to convoke the Rigsraad (representative of Denmark and Schleswig). The celebration of the Constitutional fête took place on Sunday. In the afternoon there was a grand procession to the king. From Aarhuus, Randers, and Viborg, and from every place in Jutland, addresses have been sent to his Majesty in which the inhabitants state that war is preferable to the loss of Schleswig.

THE DANISH DUCHIES.—A meeting of 6000 North Schleswigers was held on the hills of Boeghoeved, near Hadersleben, on Monday, at which the following declaration was adopted:—

"The proposal of the French and English Plenipotentiaries at the London Conference to divide Schleswig is contrary to the most important vital interests of the country. We consider it the greatest misfortune that can befall us. We will never be cut off from Schleswig and never be incorporated with Denmark."

HANOVER.—In the sitting of the Chamber of Deputies on Monday, the Minister of Justice, in a speech on the Schleswig-Holstein question, said:—

"The Plenipotentiaries of Austria, Prussia, and the Federal Diet at the Conference are endeavouring to obtain the separation of the Duchies from the Danish Crown, and their indivisible union as an independent State, to be incorporated with the German Confederation under the hereditary sovereignty of the Prince of Augustenburg. Hanover concurs in these views, and confides in the strength of united Germany and in the sense of justice of the neutral Powers." The Minister concluded by expressing a hope that this object might be peacefully attained under acceptable conditions.

FRANKFORT. — A despatch from Frankfort says that according to reliable information, in the sitting of the Conference on Thursday the neutral Powers insisted upon the river Schlei being laid down as the demarcation line in Schleswig, and that no new fortifications should be constructed in the German portion of that province. That the frontier line should run through the town of Apenrade, as proposed by the German Powers, was rejected by the neutral Powers, and a proposition from the same source that under certain circumstances the inhabitants of the Duchies should be consulted was also rejected. On the question of the prolongation of the armistice, the Danish Plenipotentiaries said that they could only declare the intentions of their Government on Monday, should it appear probable that on that day a basis for the future conclusion of peace would be secured.

PRUSSIA.—The Emperor and Empress of Russia arrived at Potsdam on Thursday evening. They were received at the railway station by the King of Prussia. Their Majesties were welcomed at the Castle of Potsdam by the members of the Royal family and the Grand Duke and Duchess of Mecklenburg. A grand review was held yesterday morning in the Tempelhof field. In the evening a dinner was given in the Orangery House to the Imperial guests. Their Majesties will leave for Darmstadt this morning at 9 o'clock. Prince Frederick Charles has succeeded Marshal Wrangel as Commander-in-Chief of the Prussian army in Schleswig. The Duke of Augustenburg arrived at Berlin on Tuesday and took up his residence at the palace of the Crown Prince. He had previously visited Dresden and had an interview with the King of Saxony. The Duke has for the present given up his journey to Vienna. The semi-official Nord Deutsche Zeitung of Wednesday confirms the statement that the Czar has transferred to the House of Oldenburg all the claims of the Imperial family of Russia to the Holstein succession. The same journal says:—

"The great German Powers have not unconditionally rejected the eventual prolongation of the armistice for a fortnight, and the resumption of hostilities is, therefore, postponed for a short period.

The official Staatsanzeiger of Thursday, in announcing that Prussia has accepted the fortnight's prolongation of the armistice which was proposed at the Conference on Monday, adds:—

"It is possible that hostilities may be resumed on the 26th inst."

Austria.—The Vienna journals state that in the sitting of the Conference on Monday the German plenipotentiaries agreed to accept ad referendum the proposal for a fortnight's prolongation of the armistice, under the condition that should the line of demarcation not be settled within that period, hostilities would be recommenced at its expiration. It is asserted that Austria and Prussia will not insist upon the frontier line of Apenrade. The Oesterreichische Zeitung of Wednesday is of opinion that the allied Powers ought to accept the 14 days' prolongation of the armistice, but should make peremptory demands, and if the latter are not complied with by the 12th inst. they should attack the island of Fünen. Several of the Austrian men-of-war at Trieste have received orders to be in readiness for war, in order to join the squadron of the North if necessary. It is asserted that Baron von Poche, Governor of Mähren, will be appointed Minister of Commerce.

Venetia.—On Saturday the Austrians in Venetia commemorated the anniversary of their alleged victory at Magenta; 18,000 men were reviewed by General Benedek at Verona.

Italy.—A grand review was held at Turin on Sunday to celebrate the anniversary of the establishment of the Constitution. The anniversary was celebrated on Monday in every town of Italy. Similar demonstrations took place in Venetia and the Roman provinces, and the Austrian and Pontifical police were unable to prevent them. In the Chamber of Deputies on Monday the Minister of Public Works, in reply to a question respecting the rumour of the sale of the State railways, said that nothing had been settled up to the present. The Chamber would be consulted prior to any decision being taken. In the sitting of Thursday the Minister of Finance communicated the probable estimates of the revenue and expenditure for 1865. The ordinary expenses are estimated at 747,359,368 lire, and the ordinary revenue at 564,063,107 lire; the extraordinary expenditure at 106,470,266 lire, and the revenue from extraordinary sources at 61,437,611 lire. The deficit is less by 24 000,000 lire than that of 1864. A Bill against duels has been brought forward in the Senate. The Pope has received M. de Sartiges, the French Ambassador, who offered his congratulations upon his Holiness's restoration to health. The Prefect of the Congregation of the Propaganda has expressed to M. de Sartiges his satisfaction and gratitude for the constant marks of solicitude given by the Emperor's Government for the interests of the Catholic Church in the East.

Greece.—Intelligence from Athens states that the merchants have requested the Government to increase the garrison of that city, on account of the insecurity of the streets.

Ionian Islands.—King George I. arrived at Corfu on Monday, and was received with immense enthusiasm by the people. A Te Deum was chanted at the Cathedral.

Russia.—In anticipation of the events which are now taking place in the Danish Duchies, the Emperor of Russia has made over to his agnate, the Grand Duke of Oldenburg, the eventual rights of his Majesty, as head of the House of Holstein-Gottorp, over a part of Schleswig-Holstein. Baron de Meyendorff, the Russian Chargé d'Affaires at Rome, has been instructed to deliver to Cardinal Antonelli M. de Kisseleff's letters of recall, by which the mission of the latter as Russian Minister at Rome will be terminated. Besides this rupture of diplomatic relations with Rome, it is said that the Russian Government will reply to the last Papal allocution by the formation of Roman Catholic synods in Russia and Poland for the regulation of the affairs of the Roman Catholic Church, and that the Archbishops and Bishops will henceforth be nominated by the Emperor. The Government has sanctioned the free transit of goods through the Caucasus to Persia. An Imperial decree has been issued abolishing the duty upon goods exported from Russia and Poland for purposes of European commerce. The following articles are excepted:—Wood, potash, mats, leeches, rags, silkworms' eggs, and all kinds of bones, except burnt and ground ones. An imperial Ukase decrees the issue of three new series of paper money, to the extent of 3,000,000 roubles. It is asserted that a contract has been definitively concluded by Mr. Hope, the manager of the International Financial Company of London, with the Russian Government for the construction of the Moscow and Sebastopol Railway. The works are to be commenced in the course of this year.

Poland.—The official Wilna Courier announces the execution of Leon Szamkow, at Suwalki, and Y. Grigoraszozenko, at Kowno; and also of M. Michael Oskierko, at Mohilew, the latter for "having been in constant relation with the members of the Lithuanian Revolutionary Committee, and afterwards become chief of the palatinate of Minsk."

The Caucasus.—A despatch from the Grand Duke Michael announces that the war in the Caucasus is now terminated, and that no more tribes remain to be conquered.

The Principalities.—Great festivities took place at Bucharest on the presentation to Prince Couza of the result of the plébiscite. A Te Deum was chanted in the churches, and a review was held amid the enthusiastic cheers of the people. The Polish residents in the Principalities also presented warm congratulatory addresses to the Prince, who left on Sunday for Constantinople. The Sultan had sent a frigate to Kustenjee with his general Aide-de-Camp on board to receive him.

Turkey.—A despatch from Constantinople announces that Prince Couza has arrived in that city and received complimentary visits from the Secretaries of the English, French, Russian, Austrian, Prussian, and Italian Legations. It is said that the Porte has notified to the Prince that it considers his late measures as null and void, and has further expressed a hope that his presence in Constantinople would afford him an opportunity of explaining his reasons for violating the stipulations of the Paris Convention of 1856. The Porte has prohibited the export of cattle from Turkey. Five steamers have been ordered to be built for the Turkish Government in Germany.

Tripoli.—A powder magazine exploded last week near Tripoli Station. Fifty houses, including the hospital, a fort, the Custom House, and the adjoining factories have been destroyed. Ninety soldiers have been killed, 30 wounded, and 28 are missing. Of the inhabitants 47 are dead and 200 wounded. Great excitement prevailed.

Tunis.—News from Tunis announces the extension of the insurrection. The Europeans and Jews are leaving the place.

Cape of Good Hope.—The Colonial Secretary, Treasurer-General, Auditor-General, and a large number of members of Parliament left Cape Town on April 18 for Port Elizabeth, on their way to Graham's Town, for the opening of Parliament, which, as already announced, is to be held this session in the Eastern Province. H.M.S. Valorous arrived in Simon's Bay April 15, from the Mozambique, with Dr. Livingstone's little steamer, the Pioneer, in tow. She also brought down the Rev. Mr. Waller, and several of the native members of the Church mission. Mr. Waller was to return to England by the next steamer, and though he agreed that Dr. Livingstone was thoroughly justified four years ago in recommending the establishment of a mission on the Zambesi or the Shire, so great has been the depopulation since then, amounting to more than 90 per cent., that he thinks it would be a mere waste of effort to continue the occupancy of the field any longer. Bishop Tozer, with the Rev. Messrs. Allington and Steere, still remained at Mozambique, making inquiry as to what new fields for mission operations should be opened on the east coast. It was not improbable that ultimately they might be attracted to Captain Speke's urgent appeal in favour of the densely-populated countries visited by himself in the neighbourhood of Victoria Nyanza. Dr. Livingstone had left the Mozambique for Bombay with the Lady Nyassa, from whence he is probably now on his way overland to England. Dr. Duff's health had been greatly benefited by his sojourn in South Africa. The Bishop of Cape Town, in his capacity as Metropolitan, has gone up to Natal to take possession and make all the necessary arrangements for the diocese there, which he now considers to be vacant in virtue of the sentence of deposition passed upon Dr. Colenso. This it was expected would lead to fresh legal complications. The Narcissus, with Sir Baldwin Walker, was expected to leave for England before next mail.

China.—A despatch from Shanghai of April 22 says that Major Gordon has defeated the rebels at Waisoo, and expected that Nankin and Soochusuf would surrender shortly.

United States.—On the 26th ult. General Grant commenced moving his army to compel Lee to abandon his position at Spottsylvania. During the night Hancock's corps moved to Guinea's Station, on the Fredericksburg Railroad, advancing along the railway to Bowling Green. Another corps subsequently followed on the same line. Immediately after Hancock's movement Generals Longstreet and Ewell started south. General Grant reports that two of his Corps had reached North Anna River, and crossed at Jericho Ford with but slight opposition. Shortly afterwards they were furiously attacked, but repulsed the enemy. Hancock, with the 2d Corps, attacked the Confederates intrenched at another point on the North Anna. After a severe fight the Confederates withdrew across the river. The latest despatches from General Grant state that Lee has concentrated his army in a strong position between the North and South Anna Rivers. The latest accounts are contradictory. Some assert that the whole Federal army was three miles south of the North Anna River, and in possession of the Virginia Central Railway, and that Lee was within one mile of the South Anna; others as positively declare that Hancock was still north of the North Anna, prevented from crossing by Lee, who held a strong position between the river and the railway; and that Grant was moving towards the Peninsula. Secretary Stanton has published a statement that there were important movements in progress which could not be made public. Grant's base of supplies has been transferred to Tappahannock, on the Rappahannock. His wounded are conveyed to Port Royal, on the same river. The Federals evacuated Fredericksburg and Acquia Creek on the 26th. General Beauregard is closely besieging Butler at Bermuda Hundred, and in every attempt to extend his works or advance Butler has been driven back. A sanguinary engagement for the possession of some rifle pits has taken place, in which the Federals were defeated. The Confederates have commenced firing from the banks of the James River on General Butler's supply boats, and his position is considered extremely critical. Admiral Porter, by damming the Red River, has been enabled to float his remaining gunboats over the falls. General Banks has effected his retreat viâ the Atachafalaya River, and has arrived at New Orleans with the remnant of his army. The Federals are evacuating Texas. General Sherman has flanked General Johnston's position at Allatoona, on the Ettowah River. It is reported that Johnston will not fight, but will transfer his troops to reinforce General Lee. Pope is marching from the south-west with 6000 men to operate in the Shenandoah Valley. The blockade runners Tristram Shandy, Greyhound, Granite, City and Wave, have been captured by the Federals. The delegates to the Union State Conventions of New York, Ohio, and Illinois, have unanimously resolved to renominate Mr. Lincoln at the Baltimore Convention. Governor Seymour of New York has ordered the indictment of every person engaged in the seizure of the offices of the World and Journal of Commerce. The New York grand jury has indicted for kidnapping the officers who arrested Col. Arguelles, for the purpose of delivering him to the Cuban authorities, and Mr. Seward has consented to stay his surrender. President Lincoln on the 24th submitted to the House of Representatives the correspondence between Secretary Seward and Minister Dayton in regard to the resolutions of the House relative to the French in Mexico. Mr. Seward disclaims any intention on the part of the Senate or Administration to support the resolutions.

New Zealand.—Brigadier-General Carey attacked the Maori position at Araban, seven miles from le Aramuse, on the 31st of March. The enemy defended it for two days, when they retreated, with a loss of 101 killed and 33 prisoners. Our loss was 16, and 42 wounded. Captain Ring, 18th Regiment, was killed; Captain Fisher, 40th Regiment, and Ensign Chayter, 65th Regiment, were severely wounded. Colonel Warre subsequently drove the rebels from the formidable position at Kai Lake, near New Plymouth, without loss. General Cameron then commenced operations against a strongly intrenched position of the rebels at Mangatantan, on the Upper Waikato. The latest advices announce that two severe engagements had occurred at Maungatawhiri and Tarachi. The natives were defeated at the former place, which they abandoned, while at the latter the English troops suffered a reverse. The English loss in both engagements amounted to 80 killed and wounded. The probability of the close of the campaign is still distant.

San Domingo.—Advices from Havannah to the 21st of May announce that the Spaniards have taken Montecristi.

Parliament.

HOUSE OF LORDS.

Friday.—The Chimney Sweepers and Chimney Regulation Bill the Naval Prize Acts Repeal Bill, and the Naval Prize Bill passed through committee.

Monday.—Sir Rowland Hill and Lady Elgin.—The Lord Chancellor read a message from her Majesty, recommending their lordships to concur in enabling her Majesty to grant to Sir Rowland Hill the sum of 20,000*l*. The message also made a similar recommendation in respect of a grant of 1000*l* per annum, as a pension, to the Countess of Elgin, in consideration of the distinguished services of the late Earl. Case of Mr. Anderson.—Lord Campbell moved for copies of correspondence between the Government and the Cabinet of St. Petersburg relative to the imprisonment at Grodno of the Rev. Fortescue Anderson, a British subject, during the autumn of 1863, on suspicion of being in league with the Polish insurgents.—Earl Russell said that the question had been referred to the Queen's Advocate, who was of opinion that the case was not one that could be taken up by the Government. As soon however as they heard of Mr. Anderson's arrest they applied for his liberation, and found that he had been discharged before the application was made. The motion for papers was agreed to. Park Lane.—The Earl of Lucan called attention to the inconvenience of Park Lane in its present condition as a thoroughfare. A discussion ensued in which several suggestions were made as remedies for the evil complained of, but it was disputed whether the duty of carrying them into effect belonged to the Government, the Metropolitan Board of Works, or the parish of St. George.—Earl Granville said the matter was under consideration by the Metropolitan Board.—The Earl of Clarendon moved the second reading of the Public Schools

Bill, and said that the object of the measure was to provide that any person accepting office in a public school shall do so subject to any future legislation by Parliament. — Lord LYTTELTON, referring to the remarks of Earl Stanhope in the former debate, defended the recommendations of the Commissioners, asserting that on the evidence adduced they could scarcely have done less. After what has been done with the Universities it was quite impossible the public schools should escape inquiry, or be left to their own action to make the reforms required.—Lord DE ROS denied several of the allegations made as to defects in the system pursued at Eton, and contended that it would be dangerous to interfere too much with what had given satisfaction for so long a period. —The Earl of CARNARVON would not oppose the Bill, but thought some alterations would be required in committee. Injustice might be done in certain cases if the Bill were made operative from the date of its introduction. He also pointed out several objections to the changes proposed by the Commissioners in the course of studies.—Lord WODEHOUSE admitted that the Eton system had many good points, but agreed with the Commissioners that it required some alteration. He hoped the good sense of the masters would induce them to adopt voluntarily such of the recommendations as would remedy evils of which the existence had been proved. —The Earl of CLARENDON explained why the Bill had been made operative from the date of its introduction; but if this should be an objection he would propose it should take effect only from the date of its passing.—Lord BROUGHAM thought all the friends of education were deeply indebted to the Commissioners for the suggestions they had made.—The Earl of HARROWBY approved most of the changes proposed, and anticipated great benefit from them.—The Bishop of LONDON said there was every disposition on the part of the masters of the public schools to accept the suggested improvements. It would be necessary to do away with some of the present restrictions in the choice of masters, and give those appointed to the office more liberty of action. The best methods of instruction would then be adopted. — The Earl of DERBY thought many of the defects charged against public schools were really due to the very imperfect instruction given in private schools and by private teachers. Unless this evil were remedied all the subsequent labour in the public school must be thrown away.—The Earl of CLARENDON explained that this defect had been met by the suggestion of an examination before admission to a public school.—The Archbishop of CANTERBURY said the Commissioners had drawn up a most valuable report, and approved their recommendation of the study of foreign languages as a part of the regular course of instruction. Hitherto this had not been the case, and the attempt to teach French and German had therefore failed. The public schools were very valuable institutions, but they were capable of improvement. After some further discussion on points of detail, the Bill was read a second time. The Divorce and Matrimonial Causes Bill was read a third time and passed.

TUESDAY.—The Union Assessment Committee Act Amendment Bill was read a second time.—In committee on the Penal Servitude Acts Amendment Bill, Earl GREY proposed to amend the second clause by providing that criminals previously convicted twice, or oftener, shall receive a minimum sentence of seven years' penal servitude. The motion, after a brief discussion, was agreed to. On the fourth clause requiring a convict liberated on a ticket of leave to report himself once a month to the police of the district in which he resides, Lord HOUGHTON and Lord CRANWORTH opposed the clause on the ground that it gave no security to the public, and would be a great difficulty in the way of a man endeavouring to obtain employment.—The Earl of CARNARVON supported the clause, contending that some system of supervision was indispensable.—The LORD CHANCELLOR suggested that the words requiring the monthly report to the police should be struck out, and the clause so altered that the convict should report himself only when required to do so. It was agreed that this amendment should be printed and reserved for consideration.—Lord HOUGHTON then moved an amendment striking out the words "once a month," but it was negatived on a division by a majority of 8, the numbers being—for the amendment, 41; against, 49. The remaining clauses were then agreed to.

THURSDAY.—Attorneys and Solicitors.—The LORD CHANCELLOR laid on the table a Bill to amend the law relating to the Remuneration of Attorneys and Solicitors. The Armistice. — In answer to the Earl of SHAFTESBURY, Earl RUSSELL announced that the armistice between the Danes and the Germans had been prolonged for 14 days, and that the proposition had in the first instance come from the Danes. The Court of Justiciary (Scotland) Bill, which assimilates the law in Scotland relating to the alteration of the judges' circuits to that which now prevails in England, was read a second time on the motion of the LORD CHANCELLOR, and with the approval of Lord BROUGHAM. Federal Enlistments. — The Marquis of CLANRICARDE, in moving for correspondence and papers relative to the enlistment of Irish emigrants and Canadians in the Federal States of America, said that for the last two years the Government of Mr. Lincoln had displayed a deliberate intention to recruit its army from foreigners, and especially from her Majesty's subjects. He complained that while Ministers had permitted the Federals to obtain arms and munitions of war from this country without question, they had put the Foreign Enlistment Act in force the moment the Confederates evinced a desire to obtain ships of war from the same source. He understood that at this moment there was a regular depot in this country for the enlistment of Germans for the service of the United States, a proceeding which the Foreign Enlistment Act was directly intended to prevent. He had no wish to declare war against the United States, but he did wish the Government to make vigorous remonstrances on the subject; and if those remonstrances were not attended to, then it would be a question whether a declaration of war would not be justifiable. — Lord BROUGHAM regretted to say that he had reason to believe the Federal Government were inveigling poor Irish emigrants into a breach of our neutrality which would subject them in this country to punishment as criminals.—Earl RUSSELL replied that Lord Lyons had repeatedly remonstrated with the Federal States Government, and the Foreign Office had done all in its power to second those representations. There was no law that prevented the sale of arms and munitions of war to the Northern States, but all articles thus exported were liable to capture by the Confederates. The fitting out of ships of war for a belligerent Power stood upon a different footing, and was in direct breach of the Foreign Enlistment Act. He denied that Ministers were blameable for what had taken place in reference to Irish emigrants. He believed that the Irish peasantry had been led away by their own credulity, and had only themselves to blame. At the same time, it was highly discreditable to the civil and military authorities of the Federal States that they had not fully investigated the representations made to them by Lord Lyons. The noble marquis had suggested that if our remonstrances failed, the case was one for a declaration of war. Without going to that extent, he was bound to admit that the case was one of that class which did frequently lead to war; but we had just as much reason to complain of the Confederates as the Federals. Remonstrances would be continued, and he hoped they would be attended with success.—The motion for papers was agreed to.—In reply to the Earl of DERBY, the Lord CHANCELLOR said he had no objection to make the period for the recovery of small debts under the County Courts Bill three years instead of one, and that the Bill should not be retrospective in its operation. It was, therefore, intended that the period of limitation should be reckoned from the date of the last item supplied, or of the last part payment, or of any subsequent acknowledgment in writing of the debt after delivery.—Lord CHELMSFORD believed there would now be agreement among their Lordships on this subject.

FRIDAY.—The Chain Cables and Anchors Bill was read a second time. The report of amendments to the Insane Prisoners' Act Amendment Bill was brought up and received. The Chimney-sweepers and Chimneys Regulation Bill was read a third time and passed. The Court of Justiciary (Scotland) Bill passed through committee. Greenwich Hospital.—The Earl of HARDWICKE called attention to the state of Greenwich Hospital. He said that the income of the hospital amounted to 4,560,000*l.*, but the charity was sick, and the character of its sickness was that of a house divided against itself. He asked what had been done to improve the management of the institution, and to settle the differences which had occurred among the members of the board.—The Duke of SOMERSET said he shared in the desire that the funds of the hospital should be properly distributed. [Left speaking.]

HOUSE OF COMMONS.

FRIDAY.—Greenwich Hospital.—On the order for going into committee of supply, Sir J. HAY moved a resolution that it was desirable that the Admiralty adopt the recommendation of the Royal Commission of 1860, confirmed by the report of Sir Richard Bromley, one of the present commissioners, and by the letter of Admiral Sir James Gordon, the Governor of Greenwich Hospital, that the present system of double government be abolished, as a remedy for the abuses which had crept into the institution.—The motion was seconded by Mr. LIDDELL, who believed that the abolition of the double government would bring the affairs of the institution into harmonious working, and effect a considerable saving of expenditure. —Mr. ADAM supported the motion, urging that it was necessary either to get rid of the double (or rather treble) government, or to alter the character of the institution and make it more of an infirmary than an asylum.—Mr. CHILDERS said the income of the hospital amounted to 154,000*l.* a year, and the cost to 107,700*l.*, being at the rate of 70*l.* per head. The recommendations of the commissioners as to the comforts of the pensioners had been already carried out, and it was now intended by the Government to propose to limit admissions to the hospital to those who were incapable, in consequence of age or infirmity, of maintaining themselves outside its walls. Thus the institution would be an infirmary for the sick, and a receptacle for those whose out-pensions were insufficient for their subsistence. It was also proposed to add to the out-pensions of men who had reached a certain age, to abolish the double government and appoint a chief officer to preside over the affairs of the hospital, and to do away with the civil and military appointments at the end of five years, but not to do so without giving fair compensation. He indicated the probable effect of these changes in a financial point of view, and said that the plan would be matured in the recess and a measure brought before the House early in the next session.—Sir J. PAKINGTON expressed his satisfaction with the arrangements as shadowed out by the Government, but hoped that due regard would be paid to the interests of the officers of the navy.—In answer to Mr. CORRY Lord C. PAGET said that the hospital would in future be conducted in all respects like Haslar or any other naval hospital. The present governor of the hospital would be provided for, and the other persons occupying houses in the building would either be allowed to occupy them during life or would receive compensation for giving them up.—Sir J. HAY said that he was satisfied with these explanations, and withdrew the motion.—Sir J. FERGUSSON moved for a select committee to inquire how far the number of the members of the Administration charged with the conduct of the Affairs of Scotland, and having seats in Parliament, is commensurate with the requirements of that part of the United Kingdom.—Mr. CAIRD seconded the motion. — Mr. BOUVERIE opposed the motion, on the ground that there was no dissatisfaction either in Scotland or in the House of Commons at the present arrangement, and that no change was necessary.—The Lord ADVOCATE said that the hon. baronet had not proved the existence of any grievance, and it was not true that it was the custom of the Lord Advocate to devote the time which should be given to the public to his private practice. He described the various Scottish measures which had been carried through Parliament, and which, he said, amounted to 100 within the last ten years, all of which appeared to have given satisfaction to the people.—After some remarks by Mr. SMOLLETT, Mr. CARNEGIE, Mr. MUIR, and Sir W. DUNBAR, the motion was withdrawn. Epping Forest.—In answer to Mr. TORRENS, Mr. PEEL explained the nature of the rights of the Crown in Epping Forest and the encroachments still going on there.—Mr. P. WATLINGTON expressed his hope that the Government would take measures to preserve portion of the land for the recreation of the public; and advised the immediate issue of a royal commission.—Mr. PEACOCKE and Mr. Cox strongly deprecated the absorption of the few vacant spaces still left for the enjoyment of the inhabitants of the metropolis. Masters in the Navy.—Sir L. PALK moved that the House should upon Tuesday resolve itself into a committee to consider an address to her Majesty, to give directions for putting the staff captains, commanders, and masters of the royal navy upon an equality in pay, rank, and eligibility for receiving marks of distinction with any other class of officers in that service.—The motion was opposed by Lord C. PAGET and the CHANCELLOR of the EXCHEQUER, who warned the House of the necessity of resisting the claims which were being made by all class of officers in the public service.—Mr. CORRY hoped that if a Royal Commission were not appointed to inquire into the subject the Admiralty would undertake to re-consider it. After some discussion the motion was withdrawn. The motion that the Speaker leave the chair was carried at a quarter to 2 o'clock, but progress was immediately reported. The Banking Co-partnership Bill was read a third time and passed.

MONDAY.—New Zealand.—In reply to a question from Mr. AYTOUN, Mr. CARDWELL said that it was the intention of the Government to submit a proposal for a loan on account of New Zealand in the course of the present session. The Conference.—Mr. OSBORNE inquired whether the Conference had arrived at any decision respecting the maintenance of the Treaty of London, and if the suspension of arms between Denmark and the conflicting Powers had been prolonged.—Lord PALMERSTON replied that he could not with propriety state what had been the proceedings of the Conference. No arrangement had yet been come to with regard to the continuance of the armistice, but he hoped at the next meeting of the Conference that some arrangement would be made.—In reply to Mr. GRIFFITH, Sir L. PALK, and Mr. H. SEYMOUR, Lord PALMERSTON also stated that the suspension of hostilities would expire on the 12th if it were not previously renewed, and no day had yet been fixed for the next Conference, the representatives of the various countries awaiting further instructions from their respective Governments.—Lord PALMERSTON brought up two messages from the Queen, one recommending a grant of 20,000*l.* to Sir Rowland Hill, in recognition of his distinguished services at the Post Office; and the other a pension of 1000*l.* a year to the Countess of Elgin, widow of the late Governor-General of India. On the order for committee of supply, Colonel SYKES moved that the recent appointment or employment, except in urgent cases, of officers of the Indian Armies with regiments to which they do not belong, in suspension of the regimental right of the officers, or usages of those regiments, is contrary to the spirit of the Act of Parliament.—Mr. VANSITTART seconded the motion.—Sir C. WOOD defended the measure, and said that it had been carefully considered.—After some remarks by Mr. TORRENS, Captain JERVIS, and Sir W. FARQUHAR, the subject dropped. The Conference.—Lord H. LENNOX, referring to the question put by Mr. OSBORNE in an earlier part of the evening, on the subject of the Conference, inquired if he was satisfied with the answer he had received, and whether he would give an assurance to the House that he would call its attention to the subject.—Mr. OSBORNE confessed he was not satisfied with the answer. He was surprised, he said, at the reticence of the House on this subject. It was placed, he thought, in a most humiliating position if it submitted, day after day, to be put off by evasive answers.—Mr. DISRAELI said he was disappointed by the answer given by Lord Palmerston; he thought it would have been wise and politic to show more candour. The House and the country were not satisfied that the condition of Parliamentary reticence any longer existed. There were rumours calculated to disturb the House, and it would be satisfactory that to be informed by Lord Palmerston that the principles of policy which he had announced to the country as those on which the Government entered into the Conference had or had not a fair prospect of success. If that policy, which was to uphold the Treaty of 1852, and to maintain the integrity and independence of Denmark, had been changed, Parliament had a right to be informed.—Lord PALMERSTON said Mr. Disraeli had made a magnificent display of virtuous indignation, and an attack upon him to which he knew he could not reply; he knew that he was at that moment tongue-tied. Mr. Disraeli professed to have a policy. He challenged him to say what it was, and what he wanted the Government to do, and let him propose a vote to give effect to his policy. In spite of taunts he should not be induced to violate his duty and throw impediments in the way of the negotiation. Further observations were made by Mr. S. FITZGERALD, Lord R. CECIL, Mr. KINGLAKE, and Sir H. VERNEY, when the subject was allowed to drop. In answer to Mr. H SEYMOUR, Sir G. GREY said that the promised Ecclesiastical Registry Bill would be introduced by the Lord Chancellor in the present session. No opposition had been raised to the Bill by the bishops. The House then went into committee of supply on the Miscellaneous Estimates. On the question that 10,000*l.* be granted towards the expense of a New National Gallery at Burlington House, Mr. COWPER explained that it was proposed to expend 152,000*l.* in the construction of a gallery within the gardens of Burlington House, to consist of three spacious galleries, three hundred feet long by forty wide, all on one floor, to be intersected by three other galleries of similar dimensions, lighted from the top. Those apartments would give sufficient space for all the pictures now in the possession of the nation, and for any bequests that were likely to be made for the next 10 years.—Lord J. MANNERS opposed the vote. The advantages of Trafalgar Square as the site of a national gallery had been acknowledged by the highest authorities, and it was the best in every point of view. There was room enough there for the pictures at present, and would be for some years to come and additional space might be obtained when necessary. Not a word had been said by Mr. Cowper in regard to any stipulation with the Royal Academy, and he could not help thinking that the building in Trafalgar Square was to be handed over to the Academy without any engagement whatever. He urged the Committee to come to a clear and decisive resolution upon the question.—Mr. GREGORY supported most cordially the proposal of the Government.—Mr. A. SMITH opposed it.—Mr. COWPER said it was proposed, if the site of Burlington House was adopted for the National Gallery, to hand over the building in Trafalgar Square to the Royal Academy, but no arrangement had yet been made as to the terms.—Mr. S. BOOTH, Mr AYRTON, Mr. FERRAND, and Mr. H. SEYMOUR spoke against the vote; Lord ELCHO and Mr. WALTER in its favour.—Lord PALMERSTON explained the grounds upon which he had altered his views as to the site of a National Gallery, and argued that, considering the large expense which would attend the necessary alteration in Trafalgar Square, on the ground of economy there could be no question that the Government proposal was the preferable one.—Mr. OSBORNE reminded the House that in 1860 it had voted 17,000*l.* on the express ground that the building in Trafalgar Square was to be a permanent gallery for the reception of the national pictures. On a division, the vote was negatived by 174 to 122,—a majority of 52 against the Government.—Various votes having been agreed to, the CHAIRMAN was ordered to report progress. The Government Annuities Bill was recommitted, and received certain amendments. The Public and Refreshment Houses (Metropolis) Bill was committed pro formâ. Other Bills were forwarded a stage.

TUESDAY.—Navigation Laws.—Mr. LINDSAY moved for copies of any correspondence between the Government and the Governments of France, Spain, and Portugal, from 1850 to 1860 inclusive, relating to the abrogation of the discriminating duties still levied upon British vessels and their cargoes trading with those countries. He showed the success which had attended our free trade policy, from which our shipowners must have been large gainers, and said that all nations except France, Spain, Portugal, Holland, and the United States, had reciprocated our policy, while those he had named had adhered to that of restriction and discriminating duties. He pointed out the loss which France, in particular, suffered by persisting in the maintenance of her navigation laws, which inflicted injury upon her population as well as her shipowners. He thought, if these facts were brought by the Board of Trade or the Foreign Office prominently before those nations, they would abandon or relax their restrictive policy. Mr. M. GIBSON had no objection to the motion. He entirely agreed, he said, in the general sentiment expressed by Mr. Lindsay, who, however, had not made due allowance for the difficulties encountered by the Government of France from the interests connected with a protective policy, and the prejudices which it would require time to remove. Her Majesty's Government had lost no opportunity in pressing upon foreign Governments the advantage of relaxing their navigation laws, and in inviting them to reciprocate our policy.—After a few words from Mr. W. FORSTER, the motion was agreed to. Mr. CAIRD moved a resolution, that the collection and publication of the Agricultural Statistics of Great Britain would be advantageous to the public interest. He said that the interest of the public was concerned in our knowing, as speedily as possible, what supply of corn we should receive from foreign countries, and he urged the advantage which returns of agricultural results would be to our farmers and our shipping and commercial interests. He proposed that the returns might be obtained by the persons engaged in the ordnance survey at a cost not exceeding 3000*l.* per annum.—Colonel BARTTELOT believed that the returns could not be accurate, or nearly so, they would be inaccurate, and if not accurate, or nearly so, they would be worse than useless. The feeling among the farmers was decidedly adverse to the collection of agricultural statistics, which they believed would do them no good, and he hoped the House would not agree to the resolution.—Mr. PACKE likewise opposed the motion, which was supported by Mr. PAGET.—Lord HOTHAM retained the opinion he had before expressed, that, without more forcible means than the House would sanction, it would not be possible to procure returns with sufficient correctness, and unless correct the would produce an effect different from that desired, and do more harm than good.—Mr. DENT, Mr. HUBBARD, Mr THOMPSON, and Lord NAAS spoke in favour of the motion.—Mr. M. GIBSON said that there was no difference of opinion upon this point—that, if accurate agricultural statistics could be obtained, the returns would be of advantage, not only to the agricultural, but to the mercantile interest. It was, therefore, unnecessary to express any general opinion in the form of a resolution; the whole difficulty was how to do it. He pointed out the obstacles to the collection of accurate returns, and examined the plans suggested for making the collections; he agreed that correct returns were most desirable, but, unless the House was prepared to sanction some particular plan, there was not the slightest necessity for passing the resolution. He moved the previous question.—Sir G. GREY suggested that, as the whole question turned upon the means of effecting the object in view, the better course would be to bring in a Bill. On a division, Mr. Caird's motion was carried by 74 to 62. In a committee of the whole House leave was given to Mr. E. P. BOUVERIE to bring in a Bill to repeal certain clauses of the Act of Uniformity relating to fellowships.—Sir C. O'LOGHLEN obtained leave to bring in a Bill to compel Railway Companies in Ireland to run at least one train each way over their lines on Sundays.—Mr M'MAHON obtained leave to bring in a Bill to assimilate the law of Ireland to that of England as to the Qualification of Burgesses in municipal corporations; Mr. PAULL obtained leave to bring in a Bill to consolidate and amend the acts regulating procedure before Justices of the Peace out of quarter sessions in England; and Mr. VILLIERS obtained leave to bring in a Bill to provide superannuation allowances to Officers of Unions. The House was counted out at a quarter to 5 o'clock on the motion for going into committee on the Valuation of Rateable Property (Ireland) Bill.

WEDNESDAY.—Mr LAWSON moved the second reading of the Intoxicating Liquors Bill. He referred to the vast number of petitions, signed by upwards of 300,000 persons, in favour of the Bill, and replied to the objections urged against it, especially the suggestion that it was impossible to make people sober by Act of Parliament, which, he said, had not been suffered to obstruct other attempts at social and moral reforms. He described the grievance of which the advocates of the measure complained and said that it was acknowledged by persons of all classes.—Captain JERVIS moved that the Bill be read a second time that day three months. He said that the Bill would put an arbitrary power into the hands of two-thirds of the ratepayers of a parish. He was acquainted with the habits of the working classes, and he believed that drunkenness had diminished throughout the country, and not by penal enactment, but by education.—Mr. BRIGHT said every one must agree that the evil in question was a very grievous one, and that if any measure could be taken that would not violate the recognised principles upon which the House acted, some further help would be afforded to the efforts of those who were making great exertions in the cause of sobriety. The question then was as to the remedy. There were two modes; one, the improvement and instruction of the people; the other, special legislation. He looked to the first for a permanent remedy; but something might be done by special legislation. He disapproved, however, the machinery proposed by this Bill, which might excite a resistance to its honest and good object.—Mr. ROEBUCK opposed the Bill as a mischievous and unjust measure, and said that the House, by passing it, would abdicate its functions. It was mainly directed against the poor, and was, therefore, a cruel Bill.—Mr. W. MARTIN, Mr. HENLEY, Mr. W. E. FORSTER, and Mr. SCOURFIELD likewise opposed the Bill.—Sir G. GREY was decidedly of opinion that the remedy proposed by the Bill would be an intolerable tyranny over minorities and those who had no voice in the matter. Sympathising with the object of Mr. Lawson, he hoped that after the opinions which had been expressed in the House, he would not persevere in the measure. After some further discussion, the second reading of the Bill was negatived, on a division, by 292 to 35.—Mr. DUNLOP, in moving the second reading of the Valuation of Lands and Heritages (Scotland) Act Amendment Bill, explained its object, which was, he said, to remedy a great and grievous injustice. After some observations by Lord G. CAVENDISH, Mr. MACKIE objected that there was no necessity for the change in the system of assessment proposed by the Bill, and moved to defer the second reading for three months.—The discussion, in which Colonel PENNANT, Sir E. COLEBROOKE, Lord ELCHO, Mr. C. BRUCE, Sir J. FERGUSSON, the LORD ADVOCATE, and Mr. CARNEGIE took part, continued till the hour fixed for the close of the debate expired. The Railway Companies Powers Bill was read a third time and passed. The Chief Rents (Ireland) Bill was also read a third time and passed. The Sale of Gas (Scotland) Bill was read a second time.

THURSDAY.—The Egham Railway Accident.—In reply to Sir R. J. CLIFTON, Sir G. GREY stated that an officer from the Board of Trade had been directed to attend the inquest on the bodies of the persons killed by the late accident on the South-Western Railway at Egham.—Lord C. PAGET brought up the supplemental estimate for the purchase of the Steam Rams in the Mersey.—Mr. DARBY GRIFFITH inquired what had been done at the Conference that day.—Lord PALMERSTON said he was happy to be able to report that a prolongation of the armistice for a fortnight from the 12th inst. had been agreed to. Pension to Lady Elgin.—The House having gone into committee, Lord PALMERSTON moved, in accordance with the message of the Queen, that the House should confer a pension of 1000*l*. a year upon the widow of the late Earl of Elgin, in acknowledgment of his public services. He said that the Indian Department had resolved upon settling a similar annuity upon the countess. Having enumerated in eulogistic terms the services of the late earl in Canada, in China, Japan and India, his lordship expressed his confident hope that the House would honour the memory of the deceased nobleman, and acknowledge his services by cordially concurring in the vote.—Lord STANLEY, in seconding the motion, said the proposal met the entire concurrence of his side of the House, which also thoroughly agreed in the estimate which the noble lord had expressed of the public character and services of Lord Elgin. Those services had been rendered, not to a party, but to the State, and, consequently, it was the duty of all parties to unite in their recognition. The motion was then agreed to unanimously. On the order for going into committee on the Collection of Taxes Bill, Sir H. WILLOUGHBY stated his objections to the measure, and moved that it was not expedient that the land, assessed, and income taxes should be collected by officers of the Inland Revenue. The motion was seconded by Mr. PACKE and supported by Mr. HUNT, who protested against throwing upon the Commissioners of Taxes the odious task of deciding whether the Bill should be put in operation in their several districts or not.—After some further discussion, the CHANCELLOR of the EXCHEQUER said that if the Bill were not agreeable to the views of the community and its representatives, it was right that it should not pass, but the system it proposed was in operation in Scotland where it worked economically and to the general satisfaction. Constant complaints were now made of the existing system, the incivility, officiousness, defalcations, and irregularities of collectors, but over these officers the executive Government had no control whatever, inasmuch as they were appointed by independent parties, to whom alone recourse for a remedy could be had. He explained that the reason for omitting the metropolis from the provisions of the Bill was that there were no stamp distributors employed there; consequently, as it was meant to combine the duties of collector of taxes with those of stamp distributors, the appointment of a new and expensive staff of officers for this special purpose would become necessary. With regard to the objection founded on the permissive character of the Bill, he considered that the permissive principle was absolutely essential, and that no other was likely to receive the assent of the House.—Mr. HENLEY felt persuaded that the measure would not work any good, and was consequently prepared to vote for the amendment.—Lord J. MANNERS also supported the amendment. On a division, the amendment was negatived by 137 to 103. The House then went into committee upon the Bill, and the several clauses were agreed to. The adjourned debate on the second reading of the Writs Registration (Scotland) Bill was then resumed.—Sir J. FERGUSSON contended that a case had not been made out for the introduction of the Bill at that period of the Session, and moved that it be read a second time that day three months. The amendment was seconded by Mr. BAXTER, who denounced the Bill as a centralising measure for the benefit of lawyers.—Colonel SYKES, Mr. AYTOUN, Mr. DUNLOP, Mr. CARNEGIE, Sir F. COLEBROOKE, Mr. CRAUFURD, Mr. KINNAIRD, and Mr. BOUVERIE likewise opposed the Bill.—Mr. MURE and Mr. BLACK supported it.—The LORD-ADVOCATE said that the Bill was a most important reform for the landed interest of Scotland, and he expected it would have received a more vigorous support. Under the circumstances, however, he thought he was bound to give more time for the consideration of the measure. The amendment having been withdrawn, the order for the second reading of the Bill was discharged, and the Bill withdrawn.—On the order for the second reading of the Church Building and New Parishes Acts Amendment Bill, the ATTORNEY GENERAL said that the object of the Bill was to consolidate and simplify the law, and would not affect any controversial subject, more especially church-rates. As, however, the measure had been misinterpreted, and, if pressed, was likely to give rise to a good deal of opposition, he deemed it more desirable to move that the order for the second reading be discharged.—Mr. WARD HUNT expressed his regret that the Attorney-General should have yielded to the pressure of a small section of Government supporters who were opposed to the Bill. It was a weak, unworthy, and dishonourable concession to the clamour of a minority who entertained extreme views on ecclesiastical questions. The Greek Loan.—On the motion of the CHANCELLOR of the EXCHEQUER, a resolution was agreed to authorising the Queen to relinquish in favour of the King of the Hellenes, during his reign, the sum of 4000*l*. a year, and to that extent to release the Greek Treasury from the arrangements concluded at Athens in 1860 in reference to the Greek Loan. Leave was then given to bring in the Bill. The Railway Construction Facilities Bill was recommitted, but little progress was made when the House resumed. On the order for the second reading of the Street Music Bill, moved by Mr. BASS, Mr. HANKEY moved as an amendment that the Bill be read a second time that day three months. He contended that the invasion of German bands is rather an attraction than a nuisance.—Mr. HUNT, Sir R. PEEL, and Sir G. GREY spoke in favour of the necessity of some legislation to abate the nuisance of mendicant musicians.—The CHANCELLOR of the EXCHEQUER, Mr C. BENTINCK, and Mr. BUTT, on the other hand, defended the nuisance. Ultimately the House divided on a motion for adjourning the debate, which was negatived by 56 to 19. The Bill was then read a second time.

FRIDAY.—The Belfast Improvement Bill was read a third time and passed. The Dublin Improvement Bill, after two divisions, was considered and ordered to be read a third time. The Conference.—In answer to Mr. DISRAELI, Lord PALMERSTON said that the period to which the suspension of hostilities applied had not been agreed to upon any condition, and was the limit of the extension which the Danish Government were willing to agree to. Private Bills.—On the order for going into Committee of Supply, Lord R. CECIL moved that the duty of ascertaining the facts upon which legislation in respect to Private Bills was to proceed should be discharged by some tribunal external to the House. There was the strongest necessity for such an alteration. [Left speaking.]

Metropolis and its Vicinity.

MR. GLADSTONE ON REFORM.—The Chancellor of the Exchequer has published as a pamphlet his recent speech on the Bill for the Extension of the Suffrage, with the following preface:—

"In this speech will be found the expression of an opinion that the Legislature should exclude from the franchise on two grounds only. First, it should exclude those who are presumably in themselves unfitted to exercise it with intelligence and integrity. Secondly, it should exclude those with respect to whom it might appear that, though no personal unfitness can be alleged against them, yet political danger might arise from their admission; as, for example, through the disturbance of the equilibrium of the constituent body, or through virtual monopoly of power in a single class. General statements of principle, advanced in debate, if they are such as, in the view of candid minds, to require explanation, ought to find it in the context of the speech which contains them. Objection has been taken, and even alarm expressed, with respect to the breadth of the particular statement now in question. I cannot make any other reply than to publish it, as it was delivered, together with its context, and to leave it, subject only to equitable allowance for faults of hasty expression, to the discerning consideration of the reader. Another objection I could more readily have conceived—namely this, that a proposition, apparently of wide scope, is reduced by large and scarcely definable exceptions within rather narrow limits. Still, the exceptions appeared along with the proposition, and formed part of it. If, indeed, I am asked whether it was a deliberate and studied announcement, I reply that it was not; it was drawn forth on the moment by a course of argument from the opponents of the measure, which appeared to assume that the present limitations of the franchise, disavowed as they have been by such an accumulation of authority, required no defence from their newly-risen advocates, and were to be accepted without inquiry, as in themselves, at least presumptively, good and normal. But I am aware that this circumstance, if the opinion be blameable, will afford no apology. Further, I spoke with reference to the present, or rather, indeed, with a view to retrieving arrears of the past, and neither time, nor, as I think, reason, permitted me to attempt the solution of problems of real intricacy which belong wholly to the future, and which are little likely to become practical except for another generation. If I regret the manner in which my declaration has been interpreted, it is chiefly because of its tendency to produce in other quarters an exaggerated estimate, likely, when brought down to the dimensions of fact, to cause disappointment. The question is whether the statement be a gratuitous and startling novelty, or whether it is rather the practical revival of a strain which, five years ago, was usual and familiar; which had then derived abundant countenance from the very highest organs of political articulation, and which now only sounds strange because within that period it has fallen into desuetude. As the opinion of an individual, the whole matter is of trifling consequence. But the consistency of parties and of Parliaments is a subject of weight and moment, for upon this depends that store of public confidence which is of such inexorable necessity and of such inestimable value for the maintenance of our free and happy Government."

BLACKFRIARS BRIDGE.—On Tuesday evening the approaches to old Blackfriars Bridge were intercepted on both sides of the river by barricades, and the pavement for a short distance was taken up, with a view to prevent the passage of traffic over the bridge, preparatory to its destruction, which commenced on Wednesday morning.

SOUTHWARK BRIDGE.—The Chairman of the Southwark Bridge Company has addressed a letter to the Lord Mayor, stating that the directors are prepared to propose to the corporation and to conclude a negotiation for opening the bridge to the public for a limited period on terms to be agreed upon, or to effect a sale for the sum of 200,000*l*. The proposal has since been submitted to the consideration of the Court of Common Council, who have referred it to the Bridge House Estates committee for consideration and report.

SITE OF THE FLEET PRISON.—The Court of Common Council have entered into an agreement with the London, Chatham, and Dover Railway Company to sell them the site of the late Fleet Prison for 60,000*l*.; and upon that large piece of ground, which has lain waste for the last 20 years or more, and been wholly unproductive to the corporation, the company intend forthwith to erect the London terminus of their line with convenient approaches.

MURDER AT THE NEW CATTLE MARKET.—On Thursday morning Frederick Charles Bricknell, aged 23, under waiter at the Lion Tavern, Islington, murdered his fellow servant, Jane Jeary, by stabbing her in the breast with a knife. It appears that he had been paying his addresses to her, and that his jealousy had been excited by finding that she had been visited by her cousin, and that an attachment existed between them. A quarrel took place between them on the subject, when the man, having a large carving-knife in his hand, plunged it into the body of the girl, stabbing her through the lungs to the heart, causing immediate death. The murderer was taken before the magistrate at Clerkenwell Police Court, and at once confessed his guilt. After some evidence had been taken he was remanded. At the inquest, which was held yesterday, the jury returned a verdict of Wilful Murder against the prisoner, who was committed to Newgate to take his trial.

THE PUBLIC HEALTH.—The Registrar-General's Weekly Report states that the deaths in London in the week that ended Saturday, June 4, were 1213. The average number for the corresponding week of the 10 years, 1855-63, corrected for increase of population, was 1169. The present return is therefore 44 above the average. During the week the births of 919 boys and 974 girls, in all 1893 children, were registered in London. In the 10 corresponding weeks of the years 1854-63 the average number was 1·30.

Provincial.

BANGOR.—The Archbishop of Canterbury has decided the appeal under the Church Services in Wales Bill, by confirming the Bishop of Bangor's nomination of a minister to perform English services at Caerdeon Chapel. The practical effect of this decision will be that the Rev. W. E. Jelf's private services will henceforth be open to the public, so that the English in the neighbourhood will have the enjoyment of the service, of which they have been deprived for 16 months.

CAMBRIDGE.—On Friday their Royal Highnesses began the day by attending Divine service at King's College Chapel, and afterwards went to the Senate House, where the honorary degree of LL.D. was conferred on the Duke of Manchester, Earl Stanhope, the Earl of Carnarvon, Viscount Palmerston, Viscount Eversley, Lord Leigh, Sir Bulwer Lytton, Vice-Chancellor Wood, Sir Charles Eastlake, the Dean of Westminster, Mr. Beresford Hope, Dr. Watson, Dr. Hoffman, and Professor Wheatstone, all of whom on being presented for the degree were loudly cheered, except Dean Stanley, who was received with a storm of mingled hisses and cheering, which lasted some time. The Prince and Princess afterwards witnessed the procession of boats on the river, and attended a horticultural fête in St. John's College, at which the prizes were distributed to the successful students of the School of Art. In the evening their Royal Highnesses dined with Dr. Whewell at Trinity Lodge, and afterwards went to a ball given by the members of Trinity. On Saturday they visited Madingley Hall, where the Prince reviewed the Duke of Manchester's cavalry. They returned to Cambridge about 3 in the afternoon, and taking luncheon with the Master and Fellows of Magdalene College, returned to London by the Great Eastern and Great Northern to King's Cross.

ETON.—At a special meeting of the Provost, Vice-Provost, and Fellows of Eton College, on Monday last, the Rev. Francis Edward Durnford was unanimously elected Lower Master, in the room of the Rev. W. A. Carter, recently elected Fellow of the College. The Rev. Mr. Durnford's appointment has given universal satisfaction to the school, and the announcement of his election was loudly cheered by the students.

LEICESTER.—About 180 lads are now confined in St. Bernard's Reformatory, Whitwick, and their conduct for a long time past has been such as to cause great uneasiness to those entrusted with their management. On the 22d ult. four criminals made their escape by cutting up the sheets belonging to their beds and letting themselves down from the dormitory windows. They afterwards broke open the tailor's shop, and having each selected a suit of clothes and dressed, they made off, but were ultimately apprehended at Derby, brought back to Ashby-de-la-Zouch, and committed to take their trial at the Assizes. On the 24th, a general meeting took place; the inmates, to the number of 180, refusing to obey the officers of the establishment. In the afternoon about 50 of them went off towards Bardon, a neighbouring village, armed with knives, sticks, and stones. Some bricklayers and labourers who were at work—knowing something of the occurrence, attempted to capture the lads. The latter, however, drew their knives, and showered stones upon them. One of the men, essaying to arrest some of the boys, was severely injured. Out of the band seven were captured, and taken back at once to the reformatory. In the evening some of the party who had returned went out from the institution on a pleasure trip: a number of them took it into their heads to return and to taunt and defy the officers, became dominant, and even ordered and were supplied with what they required. They then went to bed. During the afternoon of the 25th, a farmer, who had rendered some assistance the previous day, was seen by the lads to pass a field where they were at work. Eighty of the lads determined to punish him for his trouble, left their employment, and pursued the man to Forest Rock Inn, and insisted upon the landlord turning him out of doors. Their demand was refused by the host. The whole band without at once opened an assault upon the house and smashed the windows, the damage in glass being 1*l*. 5*s*. The son of the landlord managed to escape and run to Whitwick, and secured the services of some police constables. Two of the boys were found in a wood, and four others straggling in different directions. They were conveyed to Ashby, and on the 26th were tried and committed by the magistrates to Leicester house of correction, for 14 days with hard labour. On the 27th there was a general revolt. The inmates refused again to obey any orders, and the assistance of the police was again brought into requisition. After a struggle 30 of the offenders were got out by 11 o'clock and locked up. It became evident that more policemen would be needed, as there were signs of a general and formidable uprising. A messenger was despatched to the head-quarters at Leicester for seven constables, and Inspector Ward hurried off during the night to obtain additional men from his own division. There was an available anti-riot force of police of 19 officers and constables at the reformatory by daylight next morning. Ten of the worst boys were taken to Ashby; 22 of the offenders were also brought out of the cells, tied up to the triangles, and severely flogged in the presence of their mates, who were drawn up in the form of an open square to witness the proceedings, the police being of course in attendance. On the 28th other offenders were taken to Ashby, and they were severally sentenced to terms of imprisonment from 14 days to two months. On the same day 41 more boys were "birched" by the discipline master, and ordered to be kept on bread and water for a week. It may be remembered that Lord Berners brought the condition of this reformatory under the notice of the House of Lords, and a promise was made that the matter should be investigated on behalf of the Government.

LEIGH.—At the petty sessions, held on the 23d ult., Bridget Hughes, a married woman, with an infant at her breast, was summoned for having sworn several profane oaths at Westleigh, on the 17th ult. The complainant was next-door neighbour to defendant, and the offence was alleged to be committed during a quarrel between the two women. A witness was called, but did not corroborate the complainant's statement as to the profanity. Defendant denied using the language imputed to her, but the magistrates convicted her in the penalty of one shilling and costs, or in default 10 days' imprisonment. The woman and her infant are now lodged in Kirkdale House of Correction. The chief penalty in such cases is the costs, which are comparatively heavy, often as much as twelve or sixteen shillings; in a recent case they amounted to twenty-two shillings.

OXFORD.—The Encœnia, or Commemoration of Founders and Benefactors to the University, took place on Wednesday in the Sheldonian Theatre, with the usual ceremonies and the customary demonstrations on the part of the undergraduates. Convocation having been formally opened, the Vice-Chancellor submitted in Latin the names of the distinguished personages on whom the University proposed to confer honorary degrees. Dr. Travers Twiss then, in appropriate Latin addresses, presented them in the following order:—1. The Most Rev. Dr. Beresford, Archbishop of Armagh, Primate of all Ireland, and Prelate of the Order of St. Patrick. 2. The Earl of Bandon, M.A., Oriel College. 3. Lord Overstone, M.A., Trinity College, Cambridge. 4. M. Amédeé Thierry, Member of the Imperial Senate and of the Institute. 5. Sir Rowland Hill, K.C.B. 6. Arthur Helps, Esq., M.A., Trinity College, Cambridge, Clerk of the Privy Council. 7. Arthur Cayley, Esq., M.A., F.R.S., F.R.AS., Sadlerian Professor of Mathematics in the University of Cambridge. The reception of Sir Rowland Hill was of a more enthusiastic character than usual, and loud and prolonged cheering greeted him as he took his seat on the left of the Vice-Chancellor. On the conclusion of the ceremony, Captain and Adjutant Foxcroft Jones, of the Oxford University Rifles, was presented by the Public Orator for the honorary degree of Master of Arts, and was received with enthusiastic applause. The Creweian Oration and the Prize Essays and Poems were then delivered, and the business of the day terminated with a musical fête in the gardens of St. John's College and a masonic ball in the Corn Exchange.

WILLENHALL.—A young policeman named Lyons, in the Staffordshire force stationed at this town, died a few days since from the effects of injuries sustained at the hands of six men. He was attacked at midnight, while upon his beat in a low part of the township, by four of the prisoners, whom he had ordered home because they were riotous. He arrested two or three of his assailants, but their comrades rescued them. After he had been beaten to the ground and kicked by his assailants, he was dragged along the road by his staff which was attached to his wrist. Whilst being jolted along with his head striking upon the stones, he slipped the thong, and was thus deprived of his only weapon. During the struggle one of the prisoners was wielding a large open clasp knife, and a civilian who attempted to take it from him had his hand cut. Towards the end of the struggle another of the prisoners dashed a broken brick upon the left side of the officer's head as he lay upon the ground. He then became insensible, and was carried bleeding into the residence of a gentleman living near. He was afterwards conveyed to the police barracks, where he lingered in great pain until his death. On account of the large number of prisoners and of the great efforts that were made to save deceased's life, the event occasioned a large amount of painful interest throughout South Staffordshire. The inquest was adjourned, to enable the medical men to make a post mortem examination, and after hearing the results of the examination the jury returned a verdict of Wilful Murder against five of the prisoners.

YORK.—A few days since St. Wilfred's, new Roman Catholic Church, which has been erected under the "shadow" of York Minster, was opened by Cardinal Wiseman. It has cost about 10,000*l*., and has been built on the site of a chapel which had been used for many years by the Roman Catholics. The new church will afford accommodation to about 700 persons, and as it is so near the Minster that Cardinal Wiseman some months ago spoke of the growing church as a fresh shoot from the old roots of the parent tree, the Cathedral. Cardinal Wiseman in his sermon referred to what had been done in York through the piety and liberality of our forefathers in the erection of the noble Cathedral, asking those present not to be sorrowful or dejected when they compared the one church with the other, but to consider for whom their forefathers built that church of St. Peter. In Heaven they had only one thought, on earth only one blessing. That blessing was that the truth which they did their very best to spread might progress on every side, and that they might return to Peter, who ruled over the whole of the flock which Christ had raised. After the service a déjeûner was served in the concert-room to about 300 persons, including the Cardinal, bishops, priests, and laity. Lord Herries presided. The chairman, in proposing "The Health of the Pope," alluded to what he termed the recent visit of a revolutionist, stating that it would have been better if the members of the Government and others who had taken a part in his triumph had shown more respect to the feelings of five or six millions of Catholics. The chairman then proposed "The Health of the Queen," which was drunk with all the honours. The healths of Cardinal Wiseman, the chairman, and others were also drunk.

Railways.

FATAL ACCIDENT TO AN ASCOT TRAIN.—On Tuesday evening a fearful accident occurred on the South Western Railway. One of the long trains returning from Ascot races, heavily laden with holyday-makers and such as are only seen at race times—ran into another train at the Egham station, destroying two carriages, killing five passengers almost on the spot and more or less seriously injuring between 20 and 25 others. The accident occurred at about a quarter to 8 o'clock to the train which had left the races a little after 7, and which was followed soon afterwards by another train equally long and heavy. The first train arrived at Egham shortly before 8 o'clock. Tickets were collected there, and while this was going on a complaint was made to the station master of some card-sharpers being in a carriage. An altercation arose about their removal, which delayed the train two or three minutes more. During this interval the next train from Ascot came up, just as the first was moving off. The inevitable collision was so clearly seen that those in the station called to the passengers in the last carriages to jump from them. The guard was in the break-van, the last of all, and an experienced eye needed no warning as he looked out and saw the next train coming on. He jumped out at once, though not a moment too soon, as the crushed fragments of his van caught his coat skirts and tore them off. The collision was very violent, owing to the immense weight of the second train. It crushed the guard's-van to splinters, crushed a second-class carriage next to it, and partly crushed another beyond. The usual scene of confusion and dismay succeeded. Assistance was at once telegraphed for from London and Ascot, and the work of succouring those injured instantly began. There was a horrible scene beneath the ruins of the broken-up second-class carriage. From out of the wreck the bodies of four passengers were removed. A fifth died as he was carried to the bank, and a sixth was so injured as to leave little hope of recovery. About 20 other passengers sustained concussions, dislocations, or broken bones. But even the most serious of these it is hoped will not be likely to prove fatal, as, with the exception of the one mentioned as believed to be mortally injured, all were in the course of the night enabled to come up to town and either proceed to their own homes or were taken to the hospitals. Among 26 passengers thus came to Waterloo, all more or less alarmed and shaken, many weak and faint, and with their clothes covered with blood. At 12 at night the person who sustained the most serious injuries was brought up on a stretcher-bed in a guard's van, attended by a surgeon, and was removed to Charing Cross Hospital. His name is Mr. E. Trigg, publican, of Market Street, Brighton, who had his leg and ribs broken, and sustained some severe internal injuries. The line was cleared in the course of about an hour, and passengers went on as usual; but up to Wednesday morning the inquiries were anxious and incessant at Waterloo from those who had friends and relatives missing to know the names of those killed and wounded. All the bodies have been identified. Their names are Mr. Clegg, landlord of the Harp, Jermyn Street; Mr. John Coppard, the confidential agent of Mr. Padwick, the well-known racing man; Mr. William Winfield, gardener to Mr. Bracebridge, Sherbourne, Warwickshire; Mr. Edwin Hall, corn-chandler, Duke Street, Manchester Square; and Mr. Robert Wilkie, publican, Globe Inn, King's Road, Chelsea. The bodies were all removed to the Railway Inn, close to the station at Egham. They were not much mutilated, death apparently having arisen from concussion. Another person was conveyed to the Railway Inn in a very dreadful state, having had both his legs so much shattered that amputation of both feet was performed by Mr. Fergusson on Wednesday. He is a young man called Louis Ray, an apprentice to M. Francatelli, the chef de cuisine in the establishment of the Prince of Wales. The inquest was opened on Thursday, and after some formal evidence was adjourned to Tuesday next.

OPENING OF THE BLACKFRIARS RAILWAY STATION.—The new terminus of the London, Dover, and Chatham Railway on the south side of Blackfriars Bridge was opened last week for traffic. Very little progress has yet been made with the waiting rooms, and the workmen are still employed on the roof and other parts, but the station, when finished, will be replete with every convenience, and will afford ample accommodation. The line runs from Blackfriars to the old station at the Elephant and Castle, and so through to the coast. The suburban passengers are conveyed to the Elephant and Castle in 3 minutes, and to Herne Hill in 15. Throughout the day the West End Branch and Metropolitan Extension line was well patronised; and altogether this addition to our means of railway travelling seems to be popular. The terminus is approached by the new temporary bridge across the Thames, which was also opened on the same day. The new railway bridge, which will place this line in direct communication with those running north of the Thames, is fast approaching completion: the last spans are almost half completed, and the arches across Earl Street into Ludgate Hill are ready for turning. When this length is finished, a station will be opened in Bridge Street, to and from which trains will run from 6 A.M. till 12.30 at night, at rather less than half the fares of the cheapest omnibuses. The Ludgate Hill viaduct will be in its place in another month. The design for this bridge has been made by Mr. Cubitt himself, and it is said that it will be the handsomest in London.

OPENING OF A NEW RAILWAY.—On Wednesday week a short but important branch line from Liverpool to Garston, opening up a new route of communication with London and Manchester, by the Manchester, Sheffield, and Lincolnshire and Great Northern Railways, was formally opened for traffic. It is 3¾ miles long, and has a tunnel of considerable length.

On returning to scale an objection was made by Mr. Merry to the winner, on the ground of the bad riding of the jockey of the winner, the fact being that both he and Crisis repeatedly "cannoned" against each other from sheer distress, and in that light the Stewards viewed it, for the race was awarded to Mr Longfield's horse. The Fern Hill Stakes.—Marquis of Hastings' Attraction beat Le Méchante, Mr Merry's f., and 6 others. Arabama, Molly Carew, and Gibraltar walked past the stand. New Stakes.—Mr. Merry's Liddington beat Grinder, Advance, and 15 others. A Plate.—Marquis of Hastings's Redcap beat Bosh, Tool Tool, and 5 others.

Markets.

COVENT GARDEN, June 11.

Outdoor produce of nearly every description is now abundant. Grapes and Strawberries are sufficient for the demand. Of Pine Apples there is also a fair supply. SITE OF THE FLEET PRISON.—The Court of Common Council have entered into an agreement with the London, Chatham, and Dover Railway Company to sell them the site of the late Fleet Prison for 60,000*l*.; and upon that large piece of ground, which has lain waste for the last 20 years or more, and been wholly unproductive to the corporation, the company intend forthwith to erect the London terminus of their line with convenient approaches.

MURDER AT THE NEW CATTLE MARKET. — On Thursday morning Frederick Charles Bricknell, aged 23, under waiter at the Lion Tavern, Islington, murdered his fellow servant, Jane Jeary, by stabbing her in the breast with a knife. It appears that he had been paying his addresses to her, and that his jealousy had been excited by finding that she had been visited by her cousin, and that an attachment existed between them. A quarrel took place between them on the subject, when the man, having a large carving-knife in his hand, plunged it into the body of the girl, stabbing her through the lungs to the heart, causing immediate death. The murderer was taken before the magistrate at Clerkenwell Police Court, and at once confessed his guilt. After some evidence had been taken he was remanded. At the inquest, which was held yesterday, the jury returned a verdict of Wilful Murder against the prisoner, who was committed to Newgate to take his trial.

THE PUBLIC HEALTH. — The Registrar-General's Weekly Report states that the deaths in London in the week that ended Saturday, June 4, were 1213. The average number for the corresponding week of the 10 years, 1855-63, corrected for increase of population, was 1169. The present return is therefore 44 above the average. During the week the births of 919 boys and 974 girls, in all 1893 children, were registered in London. In the 10 corresponding weeks of the years 1854-63 the average number was 1·80.

BANGOR.—The Archbishop of Canterbury has decided the appeal under the Church Services in Wales Bill, by confirming the Bishop of Bangor's nomination of a minister to perform English services at Caerdeon Chapel. The practical effect of this decision will be that the Rev. W. E. Jelf's private services will henceforth be open to the public, so that the English in the neighbourhood will have the enjoyment of the service, of which they have been deprived for 16 months.

CAMBRIDGE.—On Friday their Royal Highnesses began the day by attending Divine service at King's College Chapel, and afterwards went to the Senate House, where the honorary degree of LL.D. was conferred on the Duke of Manchester, Earl Stanhope, the Earl of Carnarvon, Viscount Palmerston, Viscount Eversley, Lord Leigh, Sir Bulwer Lytton, Vice-Chancellor Wood, Sir Charles Eastlake, the Dean of Westminster, Mr. Beresford Hope, Dr. Watson, Dr. Hoffman, and Professor Wheatstone, all of whom on being presented for the degree were loudly cheered, except Dean Stanley, who was received with a storm of mingled hisses and cheering, which lasted some time. The Prince and Princess afterwards witnessed the procession of boats on the river, and attended a horticultural fête in St. John's College, at which the prizes were distributed to the successful students of the School of Art. In the evening their Royal Highnesses dined with Dr. Whewell at Trinity Lodge, and afterwards went to a ball given by the members of Trinity. On Saturday they visited Madingley Hall, where the Prince reviewed the Duke of Manchester's cavalry. They returned to Cambridge about 3 in the afternoon, and taking luncheon with the Master and Fellows of Magdalene College, returned to London by the Great Eastern and Great Northern to King's Cross.

ETON.—At a special meeting of the Provost, Vice-Provost, and Fellows of Eton College, on Monday last, the Rev. Francis Edward Durnford was unanimously elected Lower Master, in the room of the Rev. W. A. Carter, recently elected Fellow of the College. The Rev. Mr. Durnford's appointment has given universal satisfaction to the school, and the announcement of his election was loudly cheered by the students.

LEICESTER.—About 180 lads are now confined in St. Bernard's Reformatory, Whitwick, and their conduct for a long time past has been such as to cause great uneasiness to those entrusted with their management. On the 22d ult. four criminals made their escape by cutting up the sheets belonging to their beds and letting themselves down from the dormitory windows. They afterwards broke open the tailor's shop, and having each selected a suit of clothes and dressed, they made off, but were ultimately apprehended at Derby, brought back to Ashby-de-la-Zouch, and committed to take their trial at the Assizes. On the 24th, a general meeting took place; the inmates, to the number of 180, refusing to obey the officers of the establishment. In the afternoon about 50 of them went off towards Bardon, a neighbouring village, armed with knives, sticks, and stones. Some bricklayers and labourers who were at work—knowing something of the occurrence, attempted to capture the lads. The latter, however, drew their knives, and showered stones upon them. One of the men, essaying to arrest some of the boys, was severely injured. Out of the band seven were captured, and taken back at once to the reformatory. In the evening some of the party who had returned went out from the institution on a pleasure trip: a number of them took it into their heads to return and to taunt and defy the officers, became dominant, and even ordered and were supplied with what they required. They then went to bed. During the afternoon of the 25th, a farmer, who had rendered some assistance the previous day, was seen by the lads to pass a field where they were at work. Eighty of the lads determined to punish him for his trouble, left their employment, and pursued the man to Forest Rock Inn, and insisted upon the landlord turning him out of doors. Their demand was refused by the host. The whole band without at once opened an assault upon the house and smashed the windows, the damage in glass being 1*l*. 5*s*. The son of the landlord managed to escape and run to Whitwick, and secured the services of some police constables. Two of the boys were found in a wood, and four others straggling in different directions. They were conveyed to Ashby, and on the 26th were tried and committed by the magistrates to Leicester house of correction, for 14 days with hard labour. On the 27th there was a general revolt. The inmates refused again to obey any orders, and the assistance of the police was again brought into requisition. After a struggle 30 of the offenders were got out by 11 o'clock and locked up. It became evident that more policemen would be needed, as there were signs of a general and formidable uprising. A messenger was despatched to the head-quarters at Leicester for seven constables, and Inspector Ward hurried off during the night to obtain additional men from his own division. There was an available anti-riot force of police of 19 officers and constables at the reformatory by daylight next morning. Ten of the worst boys were taken to Ashby; 22 of the offenders were also brought out of the cells, tied up to the triangles, and severely flogged in the presence of their mates, who were drawn up in the form of an open square to witness the proceedings, the police being of course in attendance. On the 28th other offenders were taken to Ashby, and they were severally sentenced to terms of imprisonment from 14 days to two months. On the same day 41 more boys were "birched" by the discipline master, and ordered to be kept on bread and water for a week. It may be remembered that Lord Berners brought the condition of this reformatory under the notice of the House of Lords, and a promise was made that the matter should be investigated on behalf of the Government.

LEIGH.—At the petty sessions, held on the 23d ult., Bridget Hughes, a married woman, with an infant at her breast, was summoned for having sworn several profane oaths at Westleigh, on the 17th ult. The complainant was next-door neighbour to defendant, and the offence was alleged to be committed during a quarrel between the two women. A witness was called, but did not corroborate the complainant's statement as to the profanity. Defendant denied using the language imputed to her, but the magistrates convicted her in the penalty of one shilling and costs, or in default 10 days' imprisonment. The woman and her infant are now lodged in Kirkdale House of Correction. The chief penalty in such cases is the costs, which are comparatively heavy, often as much as twelve or sixteen shillings; in a recent case they amounted to twenty-two shillings.

OXFORD.—The Encœnia, or Commemoration of Founders and Benefactors to the University, took place on Wednesday in the Sheldonian Theatre, with the usual ceremonies and the customary demonstrations on the part of the undergraduates. Convocation having been formally opened, the Vice-Chancellor submitted in Latin the names of the distinguished personages on whom the University proposed to confer honorary degrees. Dr. Travers Twiss then, in appropriate Latin addresses, presented them in the following order:—1. The Most Rev. Dr. Beresford, Archbishop of Armagh, Primate of all Ireland, and Prelate of the Order of St. Patrick. 2. The Earl of Bandon, M.A., Oriel College. 3. Lord Overstone, M.A., Trinity College, Cambridge. 4. M. Amédeé Thierry, Member of the Imperial Senate and of the Institute. 5. Sir Rowland Hill, K.C.B. 6. Arthur Helps, Esq., M.A., Trinity College, Cambridge, Clerk of the Privy Council. 7. Arthur Cayley, Esq., M.A., F.R.S., F.R.AS., Sadlerian Professor of Mathematics in the University of Cambridge. The reception of Sir Rowland Hill was of a more enthusiastic character than usual, and loud and prolonged cheering greeted him as he took his seat on the left of the Vice-Chancellor. On the conclusion of the ceremony, Captain and Adjutant Foxcroft Jones, of the Oxford University Rifles, was presented by the Public Orator for the honorary degree of Master of Arts, and was received with enthusiastic applause. The Crewean Oration and the Prize Essays and Poems were then delivered, and the business of the day terminated with a musical fête in the gardens of St. John's College and a masonic ball in the Corn Exchange.

WILLENHALL.—A young policeman named Lyons, in the Staffordshire force stationed at this town, died a few days since from the effects of injuries sustained at the hands of six men. He was attacked at midnight, while upon his beat in a low part of the township, by four of the prisoners, whom he had ordered home because they were riotous. He arrested two or three of the assailants, but their comrades rescued them. After he had been beaten to the ground and kicked by the assailants, he was dragged along the road by his own which was attached to his wrist. Whilst being [illegible] along with his head striking upon the stones, he slipped the thong, and was thus deprived of his only weapon. During the struggle one of the prisoners was seen with a large open clasp knife, and a civilian who attempted to take it from him had his hand cut. Towards the end of the struggle another of the prisoners dashed a broken brick upon the left side of the officer's head as he lay upon the ground. He then became insensible, and was carried bleeding into the residence of a gentleman living near. He was afterwards conveyed to the police barracks, where he lingered in great pain until his death. On account of the large number of prisoners and of the great efforts that were made to save deceased's life, the event occasioned a large amount of painful interest throughout South Staffordshire. The inquest was adjourned, to enable the medical men to make a post mortem examination, and after hearing the results of the examination the jury returned a verdict of Wilful Murder against five of the prisoners.

YORK.—A few days since St. Wilfred's, new Roman Catholic Church, which has been erected under the "shadow" of York Minster, was opened by Cardinal Wiseman. It has cost about 10,000*l*., and has been built on the site of a chapel which had been used for many years by the Roman Catholics. The new church will afford accommodation to about 700 persons, and as it is so near the Minster that Cardinal Wiseman a few months ago spoke of the growing church as a new shoot from the old roots of the parent tree, the Cathedral. Cardinal Wiseman in his sermon referred to what had been done in York through the piety and liberality of our forefathers in the erection of the noble Cathedral, asking those present not to be sorrowful or dejected when they compared the one church with the other, but to consider for whom their forefathers built that church of St. Peter. In Heaven they had but one thought, on earth only one blessing. That blessing was that the truth which they did their very best to spread might progress on every side, and that souls might return to Peter, who ruled over the whole of the flock which Christ had raised. After the service a déjeûner was served in the concert-room to about 300 persons, including the Cardinal, bishops, priests and laity. Lord Herries presided. The chairman, in proposing "The Health of the Pope," alluded to what he termed the recent visit of a revolutionist, stating that it would have been better if the members of the Government and others who had taken a part in the triumph had shown more respect to the feelings of five or six millions of Catholics. The chairman then proposed "The Health of the Queen," which was drunk with all the honours. The healths of Cardinal Wiseman, the chairman, and others were also drunk.

Railways.

FATAL ACCIDENT TO AN ASCOT TRAIN.—On Tuesday evening a fearful accident occurred on the South Western Railway. One of the long trains returning from Ascot races, heavily laden with holiday-makers and such as are only seen at race times—ran into another train at the Egham station, destroying the carriages, killing five passengers almost on the spot, and more or less seriously injuring between 20 and 25 others. The accident occurred at about a quarter to 8 o'clock to the train which had left the race-course a little after 7, and which was followed soon after by another train equally long and heavy. The latter train arrived at Egham shortly before 8 o'clock. Tickets were collected there, and while this was being done on a complaint was made to the station master of some card-sharpers being in a carriage. An altercation arose about their removal which delayed the train two or three minutes more. During this interval the next train from Ascot came up, just as the first was moving off. The inevitable collision was so clearly seen that those in the station called to the passengers in the last carriages to jump from the train. The guard was in the break-van, the last of all, and his experienced eye needed no warning as he looked back and saw the next train coming on. He jumped out at once, though not a moment too soon, as the crash and fragments of his van caught his coat skirts and threw him off. The collision was very violent, owing to the immense weight of the second train. It crushed the guard's-van to splinters, crushed a second carriage next to it, and partly crushed some beyond. The usual scene of confusion and alarm succeeded. Assistance was at once telegraphed for from London and Ascot, and the work of succouring those injured instantly began. There was a horrible scene beneath the ruins of the broken second-class carriage. From out of the wreck the bodies of four passengers were removed. A fifth died as he was carried to the bank, and a sixth was so injured as to leave little hope of recovery. About other passengers sustained concussions, dislocations, broken bones. But even the most serious of these are hoped will not be likely to prove fatal, as with the exception of the one mentioned as believed to be mortally injured, all were in the course of the evening enabled to come up to town and either proceed to their own homes or were taken to the hospitals.

26 passengers thus came to Waterloo, all more or less alarmed and shaken, many weak and faint, and with their clothes covered with blood. At 12 at night the person who sustained the most serious injuries was brought up on a stretcher-bed in a guard's van, attended by a surgeon, and was removed to Charing Cross Hospital. His name is Mr. E. Trigg, publican, of Market Street, Brighton, who had his leg and ribs broken, and sustained some severe internal injuries. The line was cleared in the course of about an hour, and passengers went on as usual; but up to Wednesday morning the inquiries were anxious and incessant at Waterloo from those who had friends and relatives missing to know the names of those killed and wounded. All the bodies have been identified. Their names are Mr. Clegg, landlord of the Harp, Jermyn Street; Mr. John Coppard, the confidential agent of Mr. Padwick, the well-known racing man; Mr. William Winfield, gardener to Mr. Bracebridge, Sherbourne, Warwickshire; Mr. Edwin Hall, corn-chandler, Duke Street, Manchester Square; and Mr. Robert Wilkie, publican, Globe Inn, King's Road, Chelsea. The bodies were all removed to the Railway Inn, close to the station at Egham. They were not much mutilated, death apparently having arisen from concussion. Another person was conveyed to the Railway Inn in a very dreadful state, having had both his legs so much shattered that amputation of both feet was performed by Mr. Fergusson on Wednesday. He is a young man called Louis Ray, an apprentice to M. Francatelli, the chef de cuisine in the establishment of the Prince of Wales. The inquest was opened on Thursday, and after some formal evidence was adjourned to Tuesday next.

OPENING OF THE BLACKFRIARS RAILWAY STATION.—The new terminus of the London, Dover, and Chatham Railway on the south side of Blackfriars Bridge was opened last week for traffic. Very little progress has yet been made with the waiting rooms, and the workmen are still employed on the roof and other parts, but the station, when finished, will be replete with every convenience, and will afford ample accommodation. The line runs from Blackfriars to the old station at the Elephant and Castle, and so through to the coast. The suburban passengers are conveyed to the Elephant and Castle in 3 minutes, and to Herne Hill in 15. Throughout the day the West End Branch and Metropolitan Extension line was well patronised; and altogether this addition to our means of railway travelling seems to be popular. The terminus is approached by the new temporary bridge across the Thames, which was also opened on the same day. The new railway bridge, which will place this line in direct communication with those running north of the Thames, is fast approaching completion: the last spans are almost half completed, and the arches across Earl Street into Ludgate Hill are ready for turning. When this length is finished, a station will be opened in Bridge Street, to and from which trains will run from 6 A.M. till 12.30 at night, at rather less than half the fares of the cheapest omnibuses. The Ludgate Hill viaduct will be in its place in another month. The design for this bridge has been made by Mr. Cubitt himself, and it is said that it will be the handsomest in London.

OPENING OF A NEW RAILWAY.—On Wednesday week a short but important branch line from Liverpool to Garston, opening up a new route of communication with London and Manchester, by the Manchester, Sheffield, and Lincolnshire and Great Northern Railways, was formally opened for traffic. It is 3¾ miles long, and has a tunnel of considerable length.

Evelina was first favourite, Beverley and Crisis being the only others at all in demand. There was the usual large field, but not the usual amount of false starts, the whole 34 being despatched at the first attempt. Won by a neck, Crisis being three lengths before the favourite, who finished a head in front of Balham fourth, Carnival fifth, Exchequer sixth, Gardevisure seventh, Bradford eighth, with Amelia, Odine, and Gavia next, close up, a wide interval separating these from the jostling up horses, the last of whom were Lytham, Cadiz Sequence, Sackbarometer, Beverley, and Jockey. On returning to scale an objection was made by Mr. Merry to the winner, on the ground of the foul riding of the jockey of the winner, the fact being that both he and Crisis repeatedly "cannoned" against each other from sheer distress, and in that light the Stewards viewed it, for the race was awarded to Mr Longfield's horse. The Fern Hill Stakes.—Marquis of Hastings' Attraction beat Le Mélange, Mr Merry's f., and 6 others. Won easily in a canter by six lengths; Lord Zetland, three lengths behind Little Stag, was third; and 50 yards in the rear of the Duke of Beaufort's horse came Wingrave, The Ranger, and Lord Clifden, the latter of whom trotted in. Alabama, Molly Carew, and Gibraltar walked past the stand. New Stakes.—Mr. Merry's Liddington beat Grinder, Advance, and 15 others. A Plate.—Marquis of Hastings's Redcap beat Bosh, Tooi Tooi, and 5 others.

MR. W. J. FOX, formerly M.P. for Oldham, died on the 3d inst. at 3, Sussex Place, Regent's Park, after a short illness, in his 78th year. He was born in Suffolk in 1786. His father, who was in the first instance a small farmer, afterwards became a weaver at Norwich. In early life Mr. Fox entered the Congregational ministry, but afterwards became a Unitarian preacher in Finsbury Place. He was one of the lecturers of the Anti-Corn Law League. He was elected M.P. for Oldham in 1847, and represented that Borough, with the exception of two brief intervals, until his retirement from public life. He published several volumes in his earlier life, including a series of lectures to working men. The first of his writings which attracted notice were signed "A Norwich Weaver Boy."

LIEUT.-COLONEL TORRENS, F.R.S., died on the 27th ult. at his residence at Craven Hill, in his 84th year. He was well known many years ago for his works on political economy and similar subjects, and for his exertions in connection with the newspaper press.

He subsequently went through the campaign of 1815, and was at the Battle of Waterloo and the capture of Paris; and, commanding the advanced guard of his corps, was its first officer to enter that capital. He was severely wounded in the left arm at Vera, and slightly in the breast at Waterloo. He had received the war medal and one clasp for the Peninsula, and the Waterloo medal.

MR. ANDREW MORTIMER DRUMMOND, the principal partner of the old established banking house of Messrs. Drummond, of Charing Cross, died on the 31st ult. at Tile House, Denham. He was a collateral member of the noble Scottish family of Strathallan, was born in 1785, and married in 1808 Lady Emily Charlotte Percy, fourth daughter of the first Earl of Beverley, and sister of the present peer.

MR. NATHANIEL HAWTHORNE, the distinguished American writer, died at Plymouth, N.H., on the 19th May. He was travelling in search of health, in company with Mr. Franklin Pierce, and was found dead in his bed. His writings, including "The Scarlet Letter" and "The House of the Seven Gables," are well known in both Europe and America. METROPOLITAN CATTLE MARKET.

MONDAY, June 6.

We have an unusually large supply of Beasts. The demand is moderate, and prices for the choicest qualities are not much lower, but on the average there is a considerable reduction. The number of Sheep is very much larger. The warm weather causes a bad trade for the big fat Sheep, and for all kinds lower prices are taken. Lambs and Calves are rather lower. From Germany and Holland there are 1450 Beasts, 6340 Sheep, 344 Calves, and 80 Pigs; from Spain, 350 Beasts; from Scotland, 720; from Ireland, 30; and 3110 from Norfolk and Suffolk.

THURSDAY, June 9.

We have a large supply of Beasts, and the warm weather makes buyers very cautious. Trade is dull, and it is difficult to maintain Monday's quotations for choice descriptions. Several remain unsold. The number of Sheep is also large and the demand small. We retain Monday's quotations, but a clearance cannot be effected. Lambs and Calves are selling about the same as on Monday. Our foreign supply consists of 740 Beasts, 2830 Sheep, and 559 Calves. Milch Cows, 55.

MARK LANE.—MONDAY, June 6.

The supply of English Wheat was moderate, that of Barley, Beans, and Peas limited, and of Oats the arrivals were to a fair extent. English Wheat sold steadily at last week's prices for the choicest qualities. Secondary sorts were dull and easier to purchase. There was a retail demand for foreign Wheat. Imports, 13,925 qrs. Town-made Flour remains unaltered. Country marks were taken quietly on former terms. Barley was in moderate request at former currencies for grinding samples. Malt was steady in value and demand. Beans were about the same as last week. Peas supported prices. Oats were in fair demand at quite as high rates for good corn. Imports, 8113 qrs.

FRIDAY, June 10.

The weather since the 3d of June has been fine. The effects of the frost upon the Wheat plant have now become visible, but as it is the flag which is chiefly affected we do not apprehend any injurious results therefrom to the produce. The improvement we noted last week in the value of Wheat has been sustained during the present, but the tone of the trade is less buoyant, and as usual is affected by the fine summer weather. Former prices of spring corn have been generally well supported. Flour of fine brands has been in demand for export, and for such a slight advance has been realised. Since Friday last 67 grain-laden vessels have been reported arrived off the coast. The floating grain cargo trade has been firm in tone but not active, although the supplies have been better. Wheat was generally held at prices which were above buyers' notions, and hence there has been hardly anything done up to yesterday, when eight cargoes changed hands. Maize is in increased demand but not dearer. Barley quiet. Rye scarce. The arrivals of foreign Barley and English Oats this week have been good, of all other grain small, and of barrel Flour moderate. To-day's market was thinly attended, and the English Wheat left over from Monday has been cleared off at the prices of that day. Foreign is neglected and prices nominal. Spring Corn was unaltered in value, but there was rather more demand for Oats.

LIVERPOOL, June 7.—Although we have had a good attendance from the country at to-day's market, Wheat has only moved slowly, and the buyer has had just the advantage. Flour is held at Friday's prices, but sellers find it difficult to make the recent advance. Indian Corn meets a fair consumptive inquiry, and from the small quantity offering mixed American is the turn dearer. Oats and Oatmeal dull but not lower. Beans scarce, but 6d. per qr. higher. Peas and Barley unchanged. Market closes without activity.

FRIDAY, June 10.—There was a fair attendance. Wheat in limited demand, and prices in favour of buyers. Flour: Western Canals in better demand at 19s. 9d. to 20s.; French quiet. Indian Corn steady; mixed, 28s. Egyptian Beans, Oats, and Oatmeal dull.

On Monday Earl GRANVILLE moved, that in accordance with HER MAJESTY'S Message, a pension of 1000*l.* per annum should be granted to the Countess of ELGIN, with an additional 1000*l.* per annum from the Exchequer of India. The motion was agreed to. Lord WHARNCLIFFE moved an address to the Crown praying that the late decision of the Privy Council for the removal of the West Riding Assizes from York to Leeds, instead of to Wakefield, be reconsidered. The motion was opposed by Government, but was carried on a division by 80 to 54. The Public Schools Bill and the Scottish Episcopal Clergy Disabilities Renewal Bill passed through committee. The Admiralty Lands and Works Bill and the Court of Justiciary (Scotland) Bill were reported with amendments. The Insane Prisoners Act Amendment Bill was read a third time and passed. On Tuesday Earl GRANVILLE moved that, in accordance with the Message of the QUEEN, a sum of 20,000*l.* be granted to Sir Rowland Hill. The motion was agreed to. The Mortgage Debentures Bill was reported with amendments. The Ecclesiastical Courts and Registries (Ireland) Bill passed through Committee, with the exception of three clauses, which were withdrawn. The report of the amendments on the Public Schools Bill was received and adopted. The Court of Justiciary (Scotland) Bill was read a third time and passed. On Thursday, in answer to the Earl of HARDWICKE, the Duke of SOMERSET stated that it was intended to convert a certain number of Armstrong guns from breech-loaders into muzzle-loaders, and to rifle them on the "shunt" principle. The Chain Cables and Anchors Bill, the Summary Procedure (Scotland) Bill, and the Improvement of Land Act Bill passed through committee. The Mortgage Debentures Bill, the Public Schools Bill, and the Scottish Clergy Disabilities Bill were read a third time and passed.

In the Commons on Friday Lord R. CECIL moved that the duty of ascertaining the facts upon which legislation in respect to private Bills is to proceed should be discharged by some tribunal external to the House. Mr. M. GIBSON opposed the motion, and after considerable discussion it was withdrawn. A resolution moved by Mr. J. B. SMITH in favour of a gold currency for India was also withdrawn. The House went into a Committee of Supply, when, on the motion of Lord PALMERSTON, the sum of 20,000*l.* was voted to Sir ROWLAND HILL, in pursuance of HER MAJESTY'S Message. The report of the Countess of ELGIN'S pension of 1000*l.* a year, and that of the Greek Loan, were brought up and agreed to. On the motion for the second reading of the Weighing of Grain (Port of London) Bill the House was counted out. On Monday Mr. SMOLLETT moved for the appointment of a Select Committee to inquire into the claims of AZEEM JAH to the title and dignity of the Nawab of the Carnatic, and further to report upon the circumstances under which the treaty entered into between his father and the East India Company, in 1801, had been declared void. After some discussion the motion was negatived on a division by 62 to 45. The House then into a Committee of Supply on the Miscellaneous Estimates, and agreed to several votes. Mr. CARDWELL moved a resolution authorising the Government to guarantee a loan of 1,000,000*l.* to the colony of New Zealand. After a short discussion the resolution was agreed to. On the order for the third reading of the Collection of Taxes Bill, Sir W. JOLLIFFE moved the adjournment of the debate. The motion was seconded by Mr. NEWDEGATE, but was negatived on a division by 58 to 30. The debate was, however, ultimately adjourned. The Report of the Committee of Supply was brought up and agreed to. The Public and Refreshment Houses (Metropolis) Bill was recommitted. On Tuesday Mr. BRUCE moved the second reading of the Factory Acts Extension Bill, and said that it was founded upon the report of the Royal Commissioners appointed by the late Sir G. LEWIS to inquire into the condition of young children employed in certain manufactories. Lord INGESTRE moved that the Bill be referred to a select committee. After some discussion the amendment was withdrawn and the Bill was read a second time. Mr. HUBBARD moved a resolution that the inequalities and injustice attending the operation of the Property and Income-tax disqualify it for being reimposed in its present form as one of the means of levying the national revenue. The CHANCELLOR of the EXCHEQUER opposed the motion, which was negatived on a division by 67 to 28. Sir H. CAIRNS moved that the rules sanctioned by the Commissioners of National Education in Ireland, in November last, so far as regarded their operation on convent and monastic schools, were at variance with the principles of the system of national education. The ATTORNEY-GENERAL FOR IRELAND opposed the motion, and the debate was ultimately adjourned. On Wednesday Mr. C. FORSTER moved the second reading of the Forfeiture of Lands and Goods Bill, and said that its object was to protect the goods of persons convicted of crime from being seized and forfeited by the Crown. Mr. HUNT moved as an amendment, that the Bill be read a second time that day three months. After some discussion, the amendment was negatived without a division, and the Bill was read a second time. Mr. BUTT moved the second reading of the Security for Costs Bill. Mr. WHITESIDE moved that the Bill be read a second time that day three months. On a division the second reading was carried by 99 to 64. The County Voters Registration Bil was read a second time. The Servants Hiring (Scotland) Bill passed through committee with amendments. The adjourned debate on the motion for going into committee on the Elections Petitions Bill was then resumed, and was not concluded on the arrival of the hour for adjournment. The County Constabulary Superannuation (Ireland) Bill passed through committee. On Thursday Mr. FERRAND moved for a Select Committee to inquire into the construction, expense, and working of the Board of Charity Commissioners. The motion was opposed by Government, and after a long discussion was negatived on a division by 116 to 40. The House then went into a Committee of Supply upon the remaining Miscellaneous Estimates, and agreed to several votes. The Public and Refreshment Houses (Metropolis) Bill was read a third time and passed.

Accounts from Copenhagen state that the Rigsraad has been convoked for the 25th inst., and that many of the notables of that capital have proposed an address to the KING recommending an intimate constitutional union of Schleswig with the kingdom as essential for the independence of Denmark, and denouncing a personal union of Schleswig-Holstein as destructive of the kingdom.

We have news from New York to the 4th inst. General GRANT has altered the whole plan of his operations. Finding General LEE'S position between the North and South Anna Rivers to be too formidable for assault, he re-crossed the North Anna River, and marched to Hanover Town, where he crossed the Pamunkey and took up a position three miles to the south of that river. General LEE, on discovering this movement, rapidly swung round his left, and took up a position north of the Chickahominy, fronting the Federal forces, and completely covering Richmond. During these manœuvres some fighting took place, in which the Federals claim to have had the advantage. The latest despatch from General GRANT, dated June 3, states that on the previous day he made an attack on General LEE'S line, and drove the Confederates within their entrenchments, capturing 300 prisoners. The Federal loss is admitted to have reached 3000 in killed and wounded. There is also a report from Confederate sources of the defeat of a portion of General SHERMAN'S forces in Georgia, with a loss of from 5000 to 7000.

Foreign.

FRANCE.—The Emperor returned to Paris on Monday evening, and on the following morning his Majesty received Baron von Budberg, the Russian Minister in Paris. The latter left on Thursday for Kissingen to meet the Emperor of Russia. On Tuesday the Emperor presided at a Cabinet Council. The Moniteur of Friday evening says:—

"The Plenipotentiaries of the belligerent Powers at the London Conference have agreed to meet in order to amicably settle, under the auspices of one of the representatives of the neutral Powers, the disputed points relative to the carrying out of the armistice. The French Plenipotentiary has been chosen for this work of conciliation."

The Pays of Friday contained an article in which it believed itself enabled to state that the English Conservative party has decided upon bringing the present Cabinet to account relative to the whole of its acts since the commencement of the Dano-German conflict. It will also, it continues, openly, solemnly, and unanimously declare that the only guarantee and the only safeguard of peace remains in the general Congress proposed by the Emperor Napoleon. The same paper of Tuesday asserts that at the next meeting of the Conference England will propose a new line of demarcation, which is to traverse the mixed districts of Schleswig, from the Bay of Gametling to the south of the town of Brested. It considers, however, that it is doubtful whether the proposal will be accepted by Denmark. The same paper of Thursday says of the news of the fresh adjournment of the Conference:—

"These delays show, it is true, that the work of the Conference is very difficult, but they also leave us at liberty to suppose that the plenipotentiaries are determined not to meet without a previous agreement upon divers essential points, and when they do assemble, their meeting is likely to have a more satisfactory result than heretofore."

La France contains a statement respecting the new line of demarcation, similar to that referred to by the Pays, and adds:—

"Denmark, having been semi-officially consulted, has declared that the line of the Dannewerke is the only one she will accept."

The Constitutionnel of Saturday, in an article signed by M. Limayrac, observes that Denmark consents to a sacrifice, since with Germany the question is more or less one of increasing her territorial acquisition. The writer continues:—

"The situation of the two parties is entirely different—the one making a sacrifice should clearly inspire more interest than the one making an acquisition."

The same paper of Thursday, in an article signed by M. Limayrac, states that in case hostilities be recommenced England will be compelled to participate in the Dano-German conflict by her maritime interests in the Baltic, as well as by the fact that a family question is involved, and also by a state of things which the English Cabinet has created for itself, and which, already belonging to history, it is useless to dissemble. It adds:—

"None of these necessities exist for France; and we may therefore congratulate ourselves, because, if even with the intervention of England the war should remain limited, it would become general should France take part in it. If Europe has not to fear the scourge of a general war, it is to the far-seeing wisdom and moderation of the Imperial Government that it will be due."

The Mémorial Diplomatique of Saturday states that Earl Russell confidentially communicated to Count Apponyi the Danish note remitted to the former on the 2d of June, announcing the resumption of hostilities by Denmark on the 12th of June should the belligerent Powers not previously come to an agreement. Earl Russell at the same time intimated that should the Austrian fleet proceed to the Baltic, in the event of hostilities being resumed, the English Government would be compelled to send their fleet to those waters also. It continues as follows:—

"Count Apponyi is thereupon stated to have declared to Earl Russell that in the interest of the negotiations, and in order not to obstruct the combined efforts of the neutral Powers towards peace, Austria undertook, if the truce were not prolonged, not to send her fleet to the Baltic, wishing, at any price, to avoid a collision which would extend the Dano-German conflict, and might set the four corners of Europe on fire."

The Gazette de France of Saturday evening publishes, under reserve, a rumour asserting that the Emperor of Russia will come to Paris in a few days under the strictest incognito. The funeral of Marshal Pelissier, Duke of Malakoff, took place on the 9th inst., in the Chapel of the Invalides, with the usual military honours. Nearly 20,000 men of all arms took part in the solemnity. The arrangements rendered necessary by the death of Marshal Pelissier are said to be decided. Marshal M'Mahon, Duke of Magenta, will become Governor-General of Algeria; General Desvaux, at present Commanding-in-Chief the province of Constantine, will be Deputy-Governor; General Nesmes-Demauts, Commandant of Constantine; and General Martimprey will be recalled and named Senator. The Imperial decree nominating M. Renan Assistant-Curator of the Imperial Library has been cancelled, and M. Renan has been deprived of his functions as Professor in the College of France. Domiciliary visits have been made to the houses of about 20 advocates, amongst whom are MM. Carnot, Garnier-Pages, Dréo, Floquet, and others. They were suspected of having been members of an illegal association at the late elections. General Dembinski, Commander-in-Chief of the Polish insurrection of 1831, has just died in one of the Paris hospitals. The Alabama has arrived at Cherbourg, and been admitted to free pratique. She landed the crews of two captured Federal merchantmen, and is to be permitted to repair in dock. The Federal corvette Kearsage has since appeared off Cherbourg, looking out, as it is supposed, for the Alabama whenever she shall leave the port. Orders have been sent down to Cherbourg to change the armament of the iron-clads Magenta, Solferino, and Couronne. They are henceforth to carry rifled 30-pounders, 50-pounders, and four rifled 8 inch howitzers.

ALGERIA.—The latest despatches from Algeria are favourable. General Rose obtained a brilliant victory on the 6th in the province of Oran, repulsing an attack of the enemy, who had 200 killed and many wounded. The Marabout Si-El-Azerey, the instigator of the revolt, was among the killed. His death has been followed by dissension among the insurgents, for on the following day the Ouled Chaib and the Harrars are said to have asked pardon of General Deligny. Several labourers from Kabylia and from the Djurjura had, moreover, arrived at the plains in the neighbourhood of Algiers to seek employment in getting in the harvest. This incident is regarded as a proof that the inhabitants of those provinces are disposed to remain quiet. The troops at present Algeria amount to 54,000 men fit for action. Of these there are nearly 25,000 in the province of Oran.

SPAIN.—In the sitting of the Cortes on Senor Nocedal said—"The diffusion of dangerous ideas must be prevented by all means. The abolition of the word 'democracy' in the newspapers, to make them liable to punishment." The first article of the new press law was passed by the Cortes on Monday by a vote of 147 to 9. On Tuesday the Council of Ministers was occupied with the Peruvian question. It is asserted that the Cortes will be closed on the 20th. The Epoca says that the differences existing between Peru and Spain will be settled by direct negotiations between the two Powers. Another journal says that the representatives of England and France have taken joint steps in a non-official character to effect a reconciliation.

PORTUGAL.—The Cortes will be closed on the 15th inst. At Coimbra fires have occurred in the houses of several of the professors. Suspicions have fallen on the students, in consequence of which the Council of the University have suspended the lectures. No provision has been made for the security of the professors. The latest news says that tranquillity is completely restored. Very stormy weather has been experienced along the Portuguese coast.

DENMARK.—The Rigsraad (Common Assembly of the Kingdom and Schleswig) has been convoked for the 25th of June. A number of Notables of Copenhagen have proposed the following address to the King:—

"An intimate constitutional union of Schleswig with the kingdom is the essential condition for the independence of Denmark and the development of her nationality. A real union of Schleswig Holstein with the kingdom would mean the loss of Schleswig and the fall of Denmark. It would be impossible that the Government should consent to such a solution. A continued prolongation of the armistice would be possible unless the basis of a satisfactory peace be proposed."

The Morning Post states that the following declaration was made by the Plenipotentiaries of Denmark at the sitting of the Conference on the 2d inst.:—

"When at the period of the conclusion of the Treaty of London the present King of Denmark accepted the offer made of him to succeed to the then reigning Line, His Majesty's resolution was dictated principally and decisively by the firm hope that Europe would know how to maintain the rights which she had recognised and agreed to by this same Treaty. His Majesty did not wish by his refusal to raise any obstacle to the integrity of the Danish monarchy, or any ulterior guarantee of stability, and he knew by these conditions and sacrifices made by those having the right of accepting the offer made to him he compromised the rights of no one. Since then things have changed, and his Majesty has been obliged to submit to almost cruel disappointments in spite of his own efforts and those of his devoted people, the sole support for the realisation of a work in which the whole of Europe had concurred—his Majesty was obliged to take into consideration the possibility that it would not be realised. If it must be so, if the Powers of Europe really wish to abandon the Treaty of London, His Majesty, to avoid the resumption of hostilities, will oppose a territorial cession, provided always that he can obtain thereby not only peace, but also the perfectly autonomous, existence for that which belongs to him of his States, and on condition that the integrity of the ceded territories should not be fixed without consent. The Danish Government accepts, therefore, the proposition made at the last sitting by Earl Russell for re-establishment of peace between Denmark and the German Powers. But in order that peace, which we wish for, may be real, it must be under all conditions which will be necessary to assure to Denmark the integrity which comes to her by right, the political independence which the Treaty of London should guarantee to her, and for the preservation of which the Danish people hesitated to engage single handed in a sanguinary war with forces greatly superior to their own. The Danish plenipotentiaries feel bound to observe from the present that in the sacrifices wished to be imposed on Denmark there are limits which the Danish Government cannot exceed. The frontier of Denmark is a vital question for this country; it is necessary that she should possess a frontier having relation to her military and commercial interests, and that it ought to be fixed by sufficient guarantees. There is a point on which the Danish Government reserves itself to consult the kingdom. It is only on quite special conditions that His Majesty the King of Denmark will consent to the cession of the Duchy of Lauenburg. This duchy was acquired in his time by the King of Denmark in exchange for a part of Pomerania, to serve as an equivalent for the kingdom of Norway, sacrificed for the re-establishment of the peace of Europe, and it is essentially foreign to the question which has caused the present war. Finally, the Danish plenipotentiaries ought to claim for their Government the right to re-assume the position which it has incontestably maintained up to the present time, on the basis of the Treaty of London, as soon as it sees that the provisions and conditional abandonment of this position will not establish an equitable and just arrangement fitting to replace the stipulations of this treaty."

Baron von Scheel-Plessen, the Danish Ambassador to the Court of St. Petersburg, arrived at Copenhagen on Thursday. It is said that he is the bearer of a proposal on the part of Russia to establish Schleswig and Holstein within the Danish monarchy, while preserving the integrity of the kingdom. The Dagbladet of the 15th calls upon the Government, at the resumption of hostilities, should assistance from England and Sweden then be withheld, to seek support from the revolutionary elements of Europe, instead of from legally constituted Governments, which have forsaken the cause of Denmark. It also urges the formation of a foreign legion and the acceptance of Garibaldi's offer. The new railway line which has just been completed between Copenhagen and Elsinore was opened by the King last week.

THE DANISH DUCHIES.—A meeting of delegates from 107 political associations took place at Neumünster on Friday, at which it was resolved to address an appeal to the inhabitants of North Schleswig, expressing the views of Holstein on the questions — those views being, in the words of the resolution, — no separation of the Duchies; no division of Schleswig; and a free and independent Schleswig-Holstein as far as the Königsau. Seven of the most respectable inhabitants of the Island of Sylt (on the western coast of Schleswig), some of whom were members of the deputation who recently went to Berlin, have been conveyed to Copenhagen by Captain Hemmer, of the Danish Navy. The Germans have abandoned Aalborg and withdrawn south. The Dannebrog is displayed upon all the houses in the town. The Dagbladet of Saturday says:—

"Schleswig-Holstein as a separate State within the Monarchy is incompatible with Denmark's rights and honour. No Danish King can listen to such a plan. A Government inclined to such a proposal would soon learn that the people will not sacrifice their national independence at any price."

FRANKFORT.—In the sitting of the Conference on Thursday week the Plenipotentiary of the Germanic Confederation made a declaration, in which he laid down the principle that no part of Schleswig can be ceded to Denmark without the consent of the population. The Frankfort Post Zeitung of Thursday, in a telegram from Vienna, states that the sitting of the Conference had again been adjourned, the Danish plenipotentiaries having declared that they were without instructions as to any further proposals in reference either to the armistice or to the division of Schleswig.

AUSTRIA.—The Emperor of Austria, accompanied by the Empress, arrived at Munich on Wednesday morning, and were received at the railway terminus by the King and the Royal Princes. In the evening their Imperial Majesties continued their journey to Kissingen, where they will meet the Emperor of Russia. From Kissingen the Emperor will proceed to Carlsbad, on a visit to the King of Prussia. The three Monarchs will be accompanied by their Ministers of Foreign Affairs. The Oesterreichische Zeitung of Saturday says:—

"The British Cabinet vehemently opposes the line of demarcation proposed by the German Powers, and even goes so far as to threaten warlike demonstrations."

It is said that Austria has put forward a candidate of her own for the throne of the Duchies, in the person of a Prince of Wasa, "descendant of the kings of Sweden," and "head of the intermediate Gottorpian branch of the House of Oldenburg." Several of the Austrian men-of-war at Trieste have received orders to be in readiness for war, in order to join the squadron of the North if necessary. It is reported that the third division of the fleet will be sent immediately to the North Sea. It is asserted that Baron von Poche, Governor of Mähren, will be appointed Minister of Commerce.

PRUSSIA.—Herr von Bismarck received a deputation from Schleswig on Sunday. He subsequently had a conference, lasting several hours, with Prince Gortschakoff, at which Councillor Von Oubril, the Russian ambassador in Berlin, was present. A protracted sitting of the Council of Ministers took place in the afternoon, and in the evening the King received the Minister President and Prince Gortschakoff. The interview lasted some time. Another Ministerial Council was held in the Royal Palace on Monday. Prince Gortschakoff proceeded on his journey to Kissingen on Tuesday morning. The King will leave for Carlsbad to-day. Herr von Bismarck will follow later. The semi-official Nord Deutsche Allgemeine Zeitung of Monday says:—

"Prussia has, up to the present time, insisted most decisively on the line of demarcation in Schleswig being drawn at Apenrade and Tondern. She also maintains that, in the event of any division of the duchy, the wishes of the population should be consulted."

The same paper of Tuesday says that the Prussian Government has not purchased vessels in France, as stated in some of the Berlin papers, but in America, and that largely. The Provincial Correspondenz publishes an article headed "The Government and the Diet," which concludes thus:—

"We hope that the glorious impressions made by recent events will have contributed to allay the unhappy dissension which has of late years prevailed, and that the same Chamber of Deputies which formerly opposed its veto to the Ministerial proposals will now support the Government in fulfilling the important tasks relating to Schleswig-Holstein, Prussia, and Germany. Should events of a more critical nature than the present arise, the Government will certainly not await the exhaustion of the present financial resources, but will summon the representatives of the country in the hope that an active and patriotic support will be obtained from them."

ITALY.—In the Chamber of Deputies on Monday, a question was put by Signor Mordini respecting the Danubian Principalities and Tunis. The Minister for Foreign Affairs, in reply, declared that in the diplomatic negotiations about to take place, the Italian Government, as a guaranteeing Power, was ready to take into consideration the present position of affairs, and to endeavour to find elements of agreement between the Powers. With regard to Tunis, the Minister declared that the necessary steps had been taken to protect the numerous Italian colony there. Italian policy requires the independence of Tunis. The Government will follow the course of events in order to preserve the influence due to Italy. The subject then dropped. The Stampa of Saturday evening says:—"The statement made by the Gazette de Cologne, that negotiations had recently taken place between France and Italy, is partly inaccurate and partly false."

RUSSIA.—Prince Gortschakoff left St. Petersburg on Friday for Berlin and Kissengen. The Deutsche Petersburger Zeitung of Saturday, in announcing the transfer of the Emperor's rights over a part of Schleswig Holstein, says:—"By this step of Russia the succession question between the houses of Oldenburg and Augustenburg is made an essentially internal question of Federal right, to be settled by the Diet." The same paper of Thursday publishes a semi-official article pointing out the absurdity of the assertions of the Augsburg Gazette that a personal union of the Duchies with Denmark, under the rule of a Prince of the Oldenburg branch, was aimed at by Russia; and that this would be rendered possible by the abdication of King Christian IX., and by the payment of an indemnity to the Duke of Augustenburg.

POLAND.—It is asserted that Russia is endeavouring to conclude with Austria and Prussia a treaty by which the three Powers would mutually guarantee their possession of the Polish provinces. The Oyczyzna of Monday says that the Russians have razed the village of Pruszanka, the inhabitants of which had bastinadoed a spy. Men, women, and children have been sent half-naked to Siberia. A decree of the National Government prohibits the purchase of national landed property sold by the Russians, declaring the sale to be null and void, even at third hand.

TURKEY.—On Friday Prince Couza, who has been received with great distinction at Constantinople, dined with the French Ambassador. In consequence of this visit the concentration of Turkish troops on the Danube has been countermanded. It is asserted that the arrangements suggested by Sir H. Bulwer have been agreed upon between the Porte and the Prince. These relate to a new Constitution, with a Senate and other important changes. The Conference regards the late proceedings in the Principalities as null. The Prince is daily expected to return to Bucharest. The Circassian emigration still continues. The emigrants are dying by hundreds.

TUNIS.—Advices from Tunis state that the Vice-Consuls, with the exception of that of England, had gone on board the ships of their respective nations. The Bedouins were disposed to recognise the sovereignty of the Porte, and to request the abolition of the Regency. Some of the ships in port had been assailed by Tunis pirates. Much agitation and alarm prevail in the town. The Arab Bey, Ali Ben Rdam, is said to have appointed a Bey of the Camp (this being the official title of the heir presumptive to the Regency of Tunis), and to have despatched him with a force of 5000 horse to the neighbourhood of Testour, 24 hours' march from Tunis.

PERSIA.—The Shah of Persia has resolved to send 20,000 men against the Turkomans of Astrabad, who are continually ravaging the province of Mauderazan.

CHINA.—By the Overland Mail we have intelligence from Shanghai to April 29. The Imperial troops continue to obtain successes over the rebels, and it was thought that the great Taeping movement or rebellion would soon be extinguished, although fears were entertained that the rebels may for a length of time continue to carry on marauding operations in the southern provinces of the empire.

JAPAN.—It was asserted in Japan that the Council of Daimios had agreed upon a peaceful policy with foreigners, and had themselves left the seaports and returned to their provinces. The Mikado himself is in favour of a more extended intercourse.

UNITED STATES.—On the 26th ult., General Grant, discovering General Lee's position between the North and South Anna Rivers to be too formidable for assault, recrossed the North Anna, and during the night moved by the left to the Pamunkey, which he crossed on the 27th and 28th at Hanover Town, 12 miles from Richmond. General Lee is reported, upon the discovery of this movement, to have swung round his left into a position confronting the Federals, and completely covering Richmond. His left (formerly his right) still holds Hanover Court House, and is under the command of General Breckinridge, by whom he has been reinforced. Despatches from General Grant, to the 31st ult., report that General Lee made a reconnaissance of the Federal left on the previous afternoon, resulting in a sharp conflict, in which General Crawford, who had advanced nearly to Shadygrove Church, at Mechanicsville, was driven back. The Confederates then retired. At the same time General Grant ordered an attack by his centre and left, which was not executed, owing to the order failing to reach General Wright. General Hancock, on the right, alone advanced, and took possession of the Confederate skirmishing line. On the 1st inst. General Grant ordered Wright's corps, supported by Smith, to attack the Confederate position at Cold Harbour; Hancock, Burnside, and Warren, being in readiness to advance their front. After a three hours' engagement Wright captured and held the Confederate works in his front. An unsuccessful endeavour was made by the Confederates to recapture them. On the 2nd, Sheridan defeated the Confederate cavalry and Gingman's infantry, at Cold Harbour. Burnside's corps advanced on the 1st, and was within a mile of Mechanicsville. Early on the 4th General Grant assaulted the Confederates, driving them into his intrenchments, but gaining no decisive advantage. The Federal troops occupy a position within 50 yards of the Confederates, and there remain. General Grant says that he captured over 3000 prisoners, and that his loss is not severe. Other official despatches state that the Federal loss was 3000 in killed and wounded. Three colonels were killed and two wounded. General Tyler was severely wounded. Lee occupies a good position north of the Chickahominy. He has been joined by a large portion of Beauregard's troops. Fitzhugh Lee, with 500 cavalry, is reported to have been captured whilst attempting a raid on White House. The Confederates attacked Butler's left on the 1st, but were repulsed. A Confederate iron-clad attacked the Federal monitors in James River, but was driven up after two hours' engagement. The Confederates have erected formidable batteries on the Mississippi, and burned several steamers. The Federals are being driven out of Arkansas by the Confederates. General Sherman reports an engagement between Macpherson and the Confederates, near Dallas, on the 28th ult., in which the Confederates lost 250 men in killed and wounded and 300 prisoners. The Federal loss is stated at 300. It is believed that General Johnston will continue to retire, and defer a general engagement until he reaches Atlanta, where he expects to be reinforced by General Polk's army. The Confederate General Forrest's cavalry are said to be at Corinth, preparing for a raid in General Sherman's rear. Fears are entertained of another attack upon Paducah. The Federal gunboats Granite City and Nyanza were captured in the Calcasieu River by the Confederates on the 6th inst. Secretary Stanton announces that Butler is now acting only on the defensive, and that General Baldy Smith, with the 18th Army Corps, has been transferred, viâ Fortress Monroe, to the Potomac Army. He also states that Generals Banks, Steele, and Rosecrans will remain in command of their respective departments, subject to the orders of General Canby, who has been placed in command of all the territory west of the Mississippi. The Federal Government have announced that they are prepared to pay in advance the interest on the public debt due on July 1. They have also raised the interest on temporary deposits to 6 per cent. Gold had risen another 4 per cent, having reached the unprecedented rate of 92 per cent. premium, notwithstanding the most extraordinary efforts on the part of Mr. Chase to prevent the rise. At the Cleveland Convention, on the 30th, General Fremont was unanimously nominated for President, and General Cochrane for Vice-President. The platform declared for the suppression of the rebellion, the constitutional abolition of slavery, the political equality of the negro, and the maintenance of the Monroe doctrine.

MEXICO.—The Emperor and Empress of Mexico and their suite arrived at Jamaica on the 20th ult. in the Austrian war steamer Novara, escorted by the French steamer Themis. Her Majesty's steamer Barracouta conveyed the illustrious personages up the harbour. After paying a visit to General Ashmore and the Lieut.-Governor, the imperial party returned to the wharf, where they took boat for the Barracouta, and were conveyed by that vessel back to Port Royal. Their Imperial Majesties left Port Royal for Vera Cruz on the 22d.

BRAZILS.—Accounts from Rio state that the Archduke Louis-Victor of Austria is the destined consort of the Princess, eldest daughter of the Emperor Dom Pedro, and heiress to the throne.

CHILI.—The news of the Spanish hostilities against Peru has created great excitement in Chili. Meetings have been held, at which resolutions demanding that the Government should energetically support Peru were passed. It is believed that the moderation of the Chilian Government will prevent the excitement from leading to lamentable complications.

NEW ZEALAND.—The following narrative of the recent military operations is given by the Otago Times:—

"From the seat of war the news is of a mixed nature. General Cameron has gained another bloodless victory in Maungatauteri, and the Waikato district may now be said to be in his hands. But the Maoris are not subdued, and it is difficult to fix any time when peace is likely to be made, or the rebellion to be finally suppressed. The Maoris are making a resistance that commands even the admiration of the troops opposed to them, and which keeps alive amongst those not actually engaged a spirit of passive resistance to constituted authority. Their tactics are to avoid coming to close quarters, and one after another they have withdrawn from their strongholds, after putting the General to vast expense and trouble in making approaches to them. They retire farther back into the country, and as the Auckland province is relieved of them their presence is dreaded in Hawke's Bay and Wellington. The mode of fighting they adopt is not to be set down to fear; the incident that has just occurred at Orakau, a pah near Kihi Kihi, demonstrates this. General Cameron was sent to take possession of it. He tried to storm it, but unsuccessfully, and determined to take it by sap. He sat down with 1300 men, consisting of regulars, militia, and the Horse Defence Corps; 400 Maories were inside; their doom seemed certain. He summoned them to surrender; they contemptuously refused—we will fight for ever and ever, they replied. They were 72 hours without water; twice they had sallied out and were driven in again; the approach to the devoted pah was fast being made; the General telegraphed to Auckland "their escape is impossible." Suddenly, in broad daylight, the 400 natives rushed out, and this time they chose wisely the direction they took. Right through the line of the 43d Regiment they tore their way and left the Queen's troops in a state behind them. Across the swamp they went, and would have escaped altogether scathless, but the cavalry corps rode round the swamp and turned a part of the main body back. Some 101 were then shot down, and 43 taken prisoners, besides which 18 or 20 were reported to be buried in the pah. The loss on our side was severe."

The following is another account from Taranaki:—

"It appears that in compliance with his directions, Captain Lloyd, of the 57th, left the Kaitaki camp in order to effect a reconnaissance of the southern spur of the range. At 6 o'clock in the morning Lieut. Cox, with some of the 57th, and Capt. Page, with Melbourne Volunteers, crossed the Oakura River from the camp on its banks, striking inland by the newly-constructed road up the river towards the foot of the ranges. Here they halted until joined by Captain Lloyd and his party, the force now consisting of one captain, one subaltern, two sergeants, one drummer, and 53 rank and file of the 57th, with Dr. Jones and one captain, one subaltern, two sergeants, and 41 rank and file of the Melbourne Volunteers, the united numbers making a force, including officers, of 101. The march was continued as near the foot of the ranges towards the south as the broken state of the country would admit of, the men having to toil through high Fern, tutu and manuka scrub, up one wooded hillock and down another. On a portion of table land upon a rise to the left a small plantation was met with. This Captain Lloyd gave orders to destroy, at the same time handing his sword to Sergeant Anderson for the purpose of cutting it down, taking in exchange the sergeant's rifle and ammunition. Whilst this work was proceeding, Lieut. Cox, with the right sub-division of the 57th, advanced up another rise on to a flat piece of land, posting sentinels near the ruins of a quantity of wares destroyed by the soldiers on a former occasion. Afterwards six men, under Sergeant Anderson, fell back as a picket on the outer spur, carefully searching all around. Capt. Lloyd now passed to the front, descending the hill on to the flat where Capt. Mace's house was lying dead near a series of rifle pits, the men, after an interval, following down the hill, leaving a rearguard of 10 men on the look-out. The word was now passed to light pipes, and for the men to make themselves at ease; the soldiers and volunteers were consequently clustered round the cart road that leads to the beach. Ten minutes had scarcely elapsed when from the thick fern on the spur the natives poured in a volley, wounding one man. Upon this occurring, Capt. Lloyd leaped into the rifle pits, and ordered his men to seek cover as rapidly as possible, and open fire towards their front, the captain himself replying as quickly as he could load with the sergeant's rifle, which he had retained in his possession. After firing for some quarter of an hour, the word was passed to retire, which the men did as well as they could through the thick growth of vegetation, Capt. Lloyd and others falling, besides many receiving wounds, some of which, I am afraid, will prove mortal. Capt. Page with his men also retired, the country precluding the possibility of a rally being effected, three of the volunteers falling, and five receiving wounds. A hurried retreat was made on to Wherruiriki, a hill above Big Jack's pah (Hourarigi) near the beach, where they awaited assistance from town. During this manœuvre the small band was exposed to a galling cross-fire from the natives, who had rushed down between the force so as to divide it in two, whilst others, by passing southwards, had flanked the line of retreat. So soon as tidings reached town reinforcements were immediately despatched, a party of the 57th hurrying out and passing up the cart road to the rifle pits at Ahua Ahua, where they found five headless bodies, and a sixth that had been deprived of its clothing, but for some reason or other not decapitated. The bodies were brought into town by an escort of the 57th. Captain Lloyd leaves a widow and family, who have just arrived in Taranaki."

HOUSE OF LORDS.

FRIDAY.—Greenwich Hospital.—The Earl of HARDWICKE called attention to the state of Greenwich Hospital. He said that the income of the hospital amounted to 4,560,000*l.*, but the charity was sick, and the character of its sickness was that of a house divided against itself. He asked what had been done to improve the management of the institution, and to settle the differences which had occurred among the members of the board.—The Duke of SOMERSET said he shared in the desire that the funds of the hospital should be properly distributed. It was the intention of the Government to introduce various reforms in the administration of the hospital, among which would be the reservation of the hospital as an infirmary for the reception of infirm and disabled seamen, and the application of the remainder of its revenue to augment the allowances of out-pensioners, and make provision for retired officers of the royal navy.—A short conversation followed, in which Lord COLCHESTER and the Earls of SHREWSBURY and DERBY took part, and the subject dropped.

MONDAY.—Pension to Lady Elgin.—The Queen's Message, recommending the grant of a pension to the Countess of Elgin and Kincardine, was taken into consideration, when Earl GRANVILLE moved that the pension be granted. The Earl of ELLENBOROUGH seconded the motion, which was supported by the Earl of DERBY, and agreed to.—Lord WHARNCLIFFE moved an address to her Majesty, praying that the late decision of the Privy Council ordering the removal of the West Riding Assizes from York to Leeds, instead of to Wakefield, be reconsidered. The motion was seconded by Lord HOUGHTON, and opposed by Earl GRANVILLE, who stated that Leeds had been selected simply on the ground of public convenience. — The discussion was continued by Lord BROUGHAM, Lord FEVERSHAM, and Earl DE GREY and RIPON.—The Earl of DERBY thought the great balance of opinion was in favour of Wakefield as against Leeds. He advised Lord Wharncliffe to withdraw the motion, but intimated that, if pressed, he should support it with his vote.—Lord WHARNCLIFFE declining to accede to the suggestion, a division took place, when the motion was carried by 80 to 54. The Public Schools Bill, and the Scottish Episcopal Clergy Disabilities Bill, passed through committee. The Insane Prisoners Act Amendment Bill was read a third time and passed.

TUESDAY.—Pension to Sir R. Hill.—Earl GRANVILLE moved the consideration of the Queen's Message relating to a grant of 20,000*l.* to Sir Rowland Hill, and eulogised the character and services of that gentleman in connection with postal reforms.—Similar testimony was paid to his merits by Lord BROUGHAM and the Marquis of CLANRICARDE, after which the motion was agreed to. On the motion for receiving the report of amendments on the Mortgage Debentures Bill, the Earl of MALMESBURY moved a clause authorising trustees to invest trust money in debentures.—The clause was opposed by Lord REDESDALE, Lord ST. LEONARDS, and Lord GRANWORTH, and was negatived. The Ecclesiastical Courts and Registrars (Ireland) Bill passed through Committee. The Court of Justiciary (Scotland) Bill was read a third time and passed.

THURSDAY.—The Channel Fleet.—The Earl of ELLENBOROUGH gave notice that he would at the next sitting ask the Foreign Secretary whether measures have been taken to reinforce the Channel fleet so that it may be equal to the blockade of the German ports as well as sufficient for the defence of the Danish islands. Armstrong Guns.—In reply to a question from the Earl of HARDWICKE, the Duke of SOMERSET said that it was the intention of the Admiralty to convert a certain number of Armstrong 70lb. breech-loaders into muzzle-loaders on the shunt principle. They were intended for naval guns, and would have the advantage of firing either a rifled projectile or the ordinary cast-iron shot. The Ashantee War.—In reply to the Earl of DERBY, Earl GRANVILLE promised to produce the papers relating to the war with the King of Ashantee. The Chain Cables and Anchors Bill and the Improvement of Land Act (1864) Bill passed through committee. The Mortgage Debenture Bill, the Public Schools Bill, and the Scottish Episcopal Disabilities Removal Bill were read a third time and passed. Needlewomen of London.—The Earl of CARNARVON asked when the report of the Commissioners would be produced respecting the death of a needlewoman in a millinery establishment at the West End, partly by overwork and partly by the abominable and discreditable condition of the room in which she was employed. Earl GRANVILLE promised that the report should forthwith be presented.—The Earl of SHAFTESBURY said that the proposed remedy was to be found in good sanitary laws. He felt certain that if the Legislature had wisdom enough to pass good sanitary laws and compel their adoption by a system of inspectorship, the burden upon the rates of this country would be reduced by at least one-third in the course of the next five years.

FRIDAY.—The Lord CHANCELLOR withdrew the County Courts Amendment Act for the present session. The Dano-German Question.—The Earl of ELLENBOROUGH called attention to the fact that in nine days' time the armistice would be at an end, and asked whether measures had been taken for putting the fleet in such a state as to make it equal at once to blockade the German ports, and defend Denmark.—Earl RUSSELL in reply said that as the Conference was still sitting, he could only state that her Majesty's fleet was fully prepared for any service it might be called upon to perform.—The Earl of DERBY thought that it would be best to see what would come of the pending negotiations.—The Marquis of CLANRICARDE protested against Parliament interfering with pending negotiations.—Earl RUSSELL replied that in the course of a few days negociations would come to an end, and it would then be known whether there would be peace or war.

HOUSE OF COMMONS.

FRIDAY.—Private Bills.—On the order for going into Committee of Supply, Lord R. CECIL moved that the duty of ascertaining the facts upon which legislation in respect to Private Bills was to proceed should be discharged by some tribunal external to the House. There was the strongest necessity for such an alteration. Much unnecessary labour was thrown upon private members by the existing system of referring matters of fact to committees which might be better ascertained by some competent and impartial arbitrator. It imposed upon members the task of deciding on subjects of which they had no practical knowledge; and the effect was that much dissatisfaction was felt out of doors at many of their decisions.—Mr. M. GIBSON admitted that the duties imposed upon members of committees were of an arduous character, but contended for the necessity of an ultimate appeal to Parliament. He denied that great dissatisfaction existed out of doors at the decisions of committees, and feared that the adoption of any new system would create fresh impediments, and add to the expense of conducting the private bill legislation of Parliament.—The discussion was continued by Colonel W. PATTEN, Lord STANLEY, Mr. LOWE, Mr. R. HODGSON, Mr. R. DUTTON, Mr PUGH, and other members, the general opinion being that the existing system required amendment, while with regard to the best method of improving it, some members contended that the committees on private bills should act as a jury, with the Chairman as judge, whilst others advocated the plan of Lord R. Cecil. All, however, urged that it was desirable that when great public works were concerned, the members of the committee should possess some knowledge of the localities. Ultimately the motion was withdrawn; a division being impossible without counting out the House, as 19 members only were present. Gold Currency for India.—Mr. J. B. SMITH moved that the increasing trade and commerce of India, and the consequent demand for a portable circulating medium, required that a gold currency should be established in that empire. He said that constant complaints were received from India with regard to the difficulty experienced in introducing commodities for want of a convenient circulating medium.—Colonel SYKES, speaking from personal experience, said that the people of India were quite prepared for a gold coinage, either native or European, provided it was pure.—Sir C. WOOD admitted that the subject was important, but the paper circulation had been very successful in India, and was accepted by those who were engaged in commerce there. For gold there was little demand, whilst silver and copper circulated extensively. Even if a gold coinage were established, he doubted if it would be of any great assistance in conducting mercantile operations.—After some remarks from Mr. WATKIN and Mr. GOSCHEN, the motion was withdrawn. In Committee of Supply, Lord PALMERSTON moved a vote of 20,000*l.* to Sir Rowland Hill, in pursuance of her Majesty's message, in consideration of his great services in carrying out the postal system, and expressed his hope that the House would feel a pleasure in recognising the claims of so distinguished a public servant.—Mr. WILLIAMS was quite willing to admit that Sir Rowland Hill deserved well of the State; at the same time, considering that he had been in receipt of a very large salary, and that he now retired upon 2000*l.* a year, he considered the proposed grant excessive.—Mr. J. EWART, Mr A. TURNER, and Mr. CRAWFORD, as representing large constituencies, expressed their cordial approval of the grant.—Mr. MALINS, as the representative of a small constituency, also intimated his acquiescence in the proposition of the Government. After a short discussion the vote was agreed to nem. con. The remaining Civil Service Estimates were then proceeded with, and several votes were agreed to, when the Chairman was ordered to report progress. The Report of the Countess of Elgin's Pension, and that of the Greek Loan (Consolidated Fund), were brought up and agreed to.—Mr. CRAWFORD, in moving the second reading of the Weighing of Grain (Port of London) Bill, defended himself from a charge of breaking a pledge upon the subject of the Bill, brought against him, he said, by Mr. Ayrton.—Colonel DICKSON moved that the debate be adjourned. After a short discussion the House was counted out.

MONDAY.—The Conference.—Mr. OSBORNE inquired whether Lord Palmerston had seen the statement (said to have been communicated on authority) in the Morning Post, as having been submitted by the Danish Plenipotentiaries to the Conference at its last sitting. If the paper was authentic, he wished to know whether the noble lord would produce it.—Lord PALMERSTON replied that he had not read the statement referred to.—Mr. KINGLAKE asked if the noble lord could confirm the statement that the belligerents had entrusted the duty of determining the line of boundary in the Duchy of Schleswig to the French Ambassador in London.—Lord PALMERSTON had not heard of the matter, and was not inclined to believe it.—On the order for going into committee of supply, Mr SMOLLETT moved that a select committee be appointed to inquire into the Claims of his Highness Azeem Jah to the title and dignity of the Nawab of the Carnatic; and further, to report upon the circumstances under which the treaty entered into between his highness's father, Azeem del Dowlah, and the India Company, dated the 31st July, 1801, had been declared void. He contended that a great political misdemeanour had been committed by those who had repudiated the claims of Azeem Jah, and that every consideration of public justice and national honour required that the House should not refuse inquiry. The motion was seconded by Mr. BAILLIE.—Mr. H. GRENFELL said that no wrong had been done to the Azeem Jah, who during his whole life had enjoyed the protection of the English Government. If the committee were granted it would be necessary to provide a remedy: and the remedy must be either to confer upon him the mock throne of the Carnatic, or give him a large pecuniary compensation. Before doing that it was necessary to show that wrong had been committed; and next, that it could be remedied without inflicting wrong upon others. He held that both these elements were wanting in the case.—SIR J. FERGUSSON said that if the committee were appointed their inquiry would be useless, because no fresh evidence could be collected on the subject. He called upon the House not to reopen a question which had been settled upwards of 60 years ago.—Mr. BAILLIE said that there were two important admissions in the Treaty of 1801—first, that the Nawab was the legitimate sovereign of the Carnatic, and next, that the East India Company had acquired the right to govern the Carnatic not by conquest, but by treaty. If, then, the treaty had ceased to exist, by what title did we now enjoy the territory.—Mr. LOWE was not prepared to say that the transaction was one in which we could take much pleasure, but he argued that the treaty was entered into without any intention of conveying rights to descendants. The Anglo-Indian Government retained to themselves the right of considering whether they would allow a new nomination to the Nawabship of the Carnatic, and all that could be said was that in two cases they elected to do so, and in the third that they would not. On a division the motion was negatived by 62 to 45.—Mr. HENNESSY expressed his surprise that the House had been permitted to go to a division without the Secretary for India offering any explanation on the subject.—Mr. MALINS rebuked Sir C. Wood for the indifference with which he had treated the matter, and the exultation with which he had hailed the result of the division.—Lord PALMERSTON said if his right hon. friend had manifested any exultation it was owing to the fact that the hon. and learned gentleman, Mr. Fitzroy Kelly, who was known to be full of the subject, was prepared to support the motion for inquiry, was so entirely dumbfounded by the arguments opposed to it that he was unable to reply.—Sir F. KELLY avowed that he had been outwitted by the strategy of the Government; but he now gave notice that, in justice to the honour of the House, he should take the earliest opportunity of reviving the discussion.—Mr. W. E. FORSTER stated that he had given his vote with the minority on the single ground that the Secretary for India had not risen to defend the conduct of his own administration.—Sir C. WOOD contended that as his department had been assailed he had a right, as the defendant, to hear all the case against it before he delivered a reply. Moreover, he considered that Sir J. Fergusson and Mr. Lowe had already made an ample defence.—Lord STANLEY regretted that Lord Palmerston should have regarded the motion in the light of a party attack, seeing that in the division one-half of the votes received by the Government had come from the Opposition side of the House. The House then went into Committee of Supply on the Civil Service Estimates. A great number of votes were agreed to, and at midnight the House resumed.—New Zealand Loan.—In Committee of the whole House Mr. CARDWELL explained the circumstances under which the Government had promised to guarantee to New Zealand a loan of one million sterling at 4 per cent., with a sinking fund of 2 per cent. The security offered to the Government was, he said, ample, as the surplus revenue of the colony was upwards of 250,000*l.* per annum, while the charge on the loan and the sinking fund (the first charge on the revenue) would not exceed 60,000*l.* a year. In committee he proposed a resolution authorising the guarantee of the loan.—Sir H. WILLOUGHBY doubted very much whether the colony had the margin of income over expenditure to which Mr. Cardwell had referred.—Mr. ADDERLEY thought the House ought to be careful how it entertained applications for colonial guarantees; at the same time he considered that the present case was an exceptional one, and that, on the whole, very little risk would be run by guaranteeing the loan, especially as it was to be understood that New Zealand should for the future pay the whole expense of imperial troops, with the exception of a single regiment. The resolution was then agreed to. On the motion for the third reading of the Collection of Taxes Bill, Sir W. JOLLIFFE complained that the measure was hurried forward with undue precipitation, and moved the adjournment of the debate. After some discussion, the House divided, when the motion was negatived by 90 to 51. Some further opposition being offered, the order of the day was postponed to Friday.

TUESDAY.—At a morning sitting, Mr. BRUCE moved the second reading of the Factory Acts Extension Bill, the object of which is to apply the provisions of the existing Factory Acts to other manufactories than those to which that Act refers. The Bill he stated was the result of a commission which had inquired into the subject of the employment of young children in the manufacture of lucifer matches, percussion caps, staining, pottery, fustian cutting, &c., in which between 17,000 and 18,000 children were employed.—A debate on the principle of the Bill followed, in the course of which Mr. INGESTRE moved that the Bill be referred to a select committee, but an objection being made to it he withdrew his motion, and the Bill was read a second time. Vote by Ballot.—At morning sitting, Mr. BERKELEY stated that he should on a future day move a resolution to the effect that as a general election was pending, and there was no law to prevent bribery and corruption, it was desirable that a fair trial should be given to vote by ballot. The Conference.—Mr. OSBORNE gave notice that on going into committee of supply he should call attention to the publication of the proceedings of the Conference in the public newspapers.—Mr. D. GRIFFITH asked whether, since secrecy is not observed by the parties to the Conference, it would not be a mere empty form to maintain it towards the House of Commons, and inquired, therefore, whether, when the extension of the armistice was consented to, it was understood and agreed that extension was not to be final.—Lord PALMERSTON replied that he had no reason to believe that it was intended that the prolongation of the armistice lately agreed upon should be final. The Income Tax.—Mr. HUBBARD called attention to the operation and extent of direct and indirect taxation now levied, with especial reference to the income tax and to the prospect of its continuance, and moved that the inequalities and injustice attending the operation of the existing property and income tax, disqualify it from being continuously reimposed in its present form as one of the means of levying the necessary revenue. He repeated the arguments he had used on a previous occasion on which he brought forward a similar motion, and urged the necessity of removing the anomalies which now surrounded the tax.—Mr. WHALLEY supported the motion, but argued in favour of the complete abolition of the tax.—The CHANCELLOR of the EXCHEQUER, in a short speech, replied to Mr. Hubbard, who had signified his dissent from a proposition which implied that a set of anomalies and solecisms in connection with the income tax should be substituted for those which exist in the present system, and urged that so long as the tax remained as it was the national revenue it was not practicable to levy it in any other form than that which was now in use.—After some observations from Mr. BOVILL, in support of the motion, and Mr. S. NORTHCOTE, in opposition to it, the motion was negatived on a division by 67 to 28.—Sir H. CAIRNS moved that in the opinion of the House, the rules sanctioned by the Commissioners of National Education in Ireland, on November 30, are, so far as regards the aid afforded to convent and monastic schools, at variance with the principles of the system of national education. He pointed out that, whereas the Roman Catholics declined to send their children to the mixed national schools, the commissioners had practically allowed the establishment of distinct training schools for Roman Catholics, and had therefore violated the principles of mixed and unseparatist education, which it was intended the national system to set up and preserve. He supported numerous facts and documents in support of his motion.—

hon. gentleman concluded by an assertion that the time had come when it was necessary to remodel the Board of Commissioners if it was intended to retain the system of national education in Ireland.—Mr DAWSON seconded the motion.—The ATTORNEY-GENERAL for IRELAND said that the Board of Commissioners had made no fundamental change in the practice of the system of national education, had introduced no innovation, and had in no wise trenched on the principles of National Education. He alleged that the convent schools from the very conception of the national system, had been in connection with the board, and it was well known that such a connection existed.—Mr. WHITESIDE urged that the Board of Commissioners had been guilty of a breach of faith in the conduct of the administration of the system of National Education, the object they had in view being to make the whole machinery of the board subservient to the promotion of a principle distinctly opposed to that on which the system was established. The debate was then adjourned.

WEDNESDAY.—Mr. C. FORSTER moved the second reading of the Forfeiture of Lands and Goods Bill, the object of which is to protect the goods of persons convicted of crime from being seized and forfeited by the Crown. He argued that the present law with regard to the property of felons was a remnant of a barbarous criminal code which the growing humanity and good sense of the public had long since condemned.—The motion was seconded by Mr. EWART.—Mr. HUNT opposed the Bill as a crude piece of legislation which did not provide any substitute for the law which it intended to repeal. He moved, as an amendment, that the Bill be read a second time that day three months.—The ATTORNEY-GENERAL expressed his intention to support the second reading of the Bill, although he declined to commit himself to details without inquiry. That inquiry he would, however, cause to be made in the course of the recess.—Mr. WHITESIDE spoke in favour of the measure, believing that it would be impossible to maintain the principle of the existing law.—Mr. HADFIELD, Mr. ROEBUCK, and Mr. MALINS supported the Bill.—Sir G. GREY thought we might well take an example from France in this matter.—Mr. PACKE thought the Government should take up the subject.—Sir F. KELLY urged Mr. Forster to proceed with the measure, and, after a short discussion, the amendment of Mr. Hunt was negatived without a division, and the Bill was read a second time.—Mr. BUTT moved the second reading of the Security for Costs Bill, the object of which he explained to be to remove the impediments which now exist to recovering debts by persons residing in England against debtors in Ireland, and vice versâ.—Mr. WHITESIDE opposed the Bill as unnecessary and mischievous, and moved that it be read a second time that day three months. The principle of the measure was, however, supported by the SOLICITOR-GENERAL and Sir COLMAN O LOGHLEN, and opposed by Mr. VANCE. On a division the second reading was carried by 99 to 64.—The County Voters Registration Bill was read a second time.—Mr. DUNLOP moved that the House should go into Committee on the Servants Hiring (Scotland) Bill, the object of which is to allow the dismissal of servants at the end of a month's notice, or on payment of a month's wages in advance, instead of at the end of six months, according to the present state of the law.—Mr. BLACK opposed the motion, on the ground that, if the change contemplated became law, servants would be constantly leaving their places for the most frivolous causes and at the most inconvenient time of the year. After some discussion the House went into Committee and agreed to the several clauses.—The adjourned debate on the motion for going into Committee on the Elections Petition Bill was resumed by Mr COLLINS, who contended that the measure would establish a new principle that would have the effect of deterring persons from petitioning against illegal returns, and thus secure guilty parties in their seats.—Mr. HUNT defended the Bill, and observed that, after the full discussion it had undergone last session, there was no ground whatever for now burking it by sending it to a Select Committee, as had been proposed on a former occasion by Mr. Ayrton.—Sir F. GOLDSMID then addressed the House in opposition to the measure, and spoke until the hour for adjournment arrived. The County Constabulary Superannuation (Ireland) Bill passed through Committee.—Mr. BARNES obtained leave to bring in a Bill to empower the occupiers of small tenements in certain cases to vote in the Election of Guardians for the Poor.

THURSDAY.—Cork Harbour.—In reply to Mr. HORSFALL, Mr. M. GIBSON said that a large bell-buoy was about to be erected on Daunt's Rock, in Cork harbour, and that steps would be taken to light and improve Roche's Point the nearest Atlantic telegraph station between Great Britain and America. The Ashantee War.—Lord C. PAGET, in answer to an inquiry of Sir J. HAY, said that a transport was taken up at the end of May, and would be ready in a few days to proceed to the Cape de Verd Islands, there to meet the Gladiator, paddle steamer, which had been ordered to Cape Coast Castle for the purpose of bringing away a portion of the troops there, which the transport would then convey to the West Indies. The number of troops to be removed was slightly above 500.—Sir J. PAKINGTON inquired when the Gladiator received orders to go to the coast on this service.—Lord C. PAGET answered that the orders were given that day. The Conference.—Mr. OSBORNE asked whether it was true that the meeting of the Conference on Danish affairs had been again postponed until Saturday.—Lord PALMERSTON believed it was.—Lord R. CECIL inquired whether the Conference had been postponed by consent of all the Powers belonging to it, by a majority of the Powers, or by the plenipotentiaries of England.—Lord PALMERSTON replied that he was not a member of the Conference, and that all he knew was that it was adjourned till Saturday. Charity Commission.—On the order for going into committee of supply, Mr FERRAND moved for a select committee to inquire into the construction, expense, and working of the Charity Commission. He traced at considerable length, and with much vehemence of manner, the proceedings of the commissioners since their appointment under the Act of 1853. He complained that they were to all intents and purposes a secret tribunal, with whose proceedings Government was utterly unacquainted, except through the very meagre reports that were periodically presented to Parliament. The commissioners themselves composed a snug nest o Whigs, and of the 40 persons connected with them as inspectors and clerks, every one, without exception, belonged to the Whig party. Their appointments to inspectorships had been characterised by political partisanship, bribery and corruption; and in the case of a Mr. John Simon, jun., he had been a coal and potato dealer in the Hampstead Road, and subsequently a daily labourer in Australia. The reports prepared by the commissioners were false. The funds under their control were mismanaged and misappropriated, and instead of the expense of working being 6000*l.* a year, as promised in 1853, it had grown up to 18,000*l.* This state of things, he alleged, was a disgrace to the Government, and he called upon the financial reformers to join him in pressing, by means of a select committee, a full and searching inquiry.—Mr. MONSELL said that Mr. Ferrand's observations were of such a personal character as to disentitle him to the support of the House.—Mr. F. POWELL also protested against Mr. Ferrand's accusations, which, he said, were devoid of foundation. He hoped, however, that the House would grant inquiry.—Mr. BRUCE opposed the motion, on the ground that Mr. Ferrand had indulged in a grossly personal attack, not only upon the commissioners, but also upon several members of the Government. He knew nothing of the antecedents of the inspector whom Mr. Ferrand had named, but he had been informed that, since his appointment, he had performed his duties in a satisfactory manner. Neither the commissioners nor the Government had the slightest objection to an inquiry, had it been moved for in a decent and respectful manner, but the violent and reckless accusations of Mr. Ferrand were so grossly hostile to men of high character and standing that the Government could not give their assent to it.—Mr. M. SMITH declared that the charges brought against the commissioners were utterly unfounded.—Mr. OSBORNE recommended the Government to grant the committee, for if the allegations were not founded in fact they would rebound upon Mr. Ferrand, and he would never be able to bring forward another charge in the House.—Mr. ADDERLEY thought that although the Charity Commissioners were men of the highest character, and their department a most useful branch of the public service, still, that charges were made of such gravity that the Government ought not to shirk inquiry.—Mr. LOWE defended the commissioners and their officers, as did Mr. J. A SMITH, who severely censured Mr. Ferrand for his reckless and calumnious language and his indifference to the feelings of absent parties.—Mr. MALINS felt bound by every consideration of good feeling and propriety to vote against the motion.—Lord GALWAY supported the motion, and said that the solicitor's bills ought to be submitted to investigation before a committee.—On a division the motion was negatived by 116 to 40. The House then went into committee of supply on the Miscellaneous Estimates, and agreed to a number of votes for the civil service. A motion to report progress at half an hour after midnight was rejected by 111 to 40. On the Report of the Committee of Supply, Mr. BUTT called attention to the inadequate remuneration of the special Commissioners of Irish Fisheries, especially the legal Commissioner, and moved that the vote be reduced by 1445*l.*, the salaries and expenses of the Commissioners for Ireland.—After an explanation by Sir R. PEEL, and some observations by other members, the amendment was withdrawn, and the resolutions in the report were agreed to. The Public and Refreshment Houses (Metropolis, &c.), Bill was read a third time and passed. The Local Government Supplemental (No. 2) Bill, the Lunacy (Scotland) Bill, and the Accidents Compensation Act Amendment Bill were read a second time. The order for the second reading of the Church of England Estates Bill was postponed. The adjourned debate on the Election Petitions Bill was further adjourned to Tuesday week. The adjourned debate on National Education (Ireland) was postponed to Thursday.

FRIDAY.—Factories Acts Extension Bill.—On the motion for going into Committee on this Bill, Mr. BAGWELL moved that it be an instruction to the Committee to take the case of the needlewomen and tailors of London into consideration.—Sir G. GREY thought it would be inexpedient to legislate without the report of the commission now sitting. The motion was withdrawn. The House then went into Committee. Clauses 1 to 6 were agreed to. On the next clause Mr. BRUCE moved an alteration.—Mr. ROEBUCK contended that the effect of the alteration would be to exclude the "packers" from the provisions of the Bill, and thereby to legislate in favour of the manufacturers.—After a long discussion Mr. BRUCE agreed to postpone the committee for 10 days.—The CHAIRMAN then reported progress, and obtained leave to sit on Monday week. [Left sitting.]

THE PRINCE CONSORT MEMORIAL.—The group of five figures to represent "Europe" in the monument about to be erected to the memory of the late Prince Consort was, by command of the Queen, offered to Mr. Gibson, the sculptor; but as he expressed his reluctance, from advancing years, to undertake a work of such magnitude, her Majesty has signified her wish that it should be executed by Mr. M'Dowall, the Royal Academician, who has accepted the commission. Mr. Foley, R.A., has been entrusted with the group "Asia." The groups "Africa" and "America" have been given to Messrs. Theed & Bell.

ST. PAUL'S SCHOOL.—The annual "Apposition," which took place on Wednesday for the 355th time, was rendered more than ordinarily brilliant by the presence of the Prince of Wales. The schoolroom in which the speeches were delivered was decorated with unusual magnificence, a colossal plume of the Prince of Wales's feathers being placed in front of the gallery facing the platform; and a costly chair adorned with the initials "A. E.," and the City arms, having been provided for the Royal visitor. Long before the commencement of the day's business all the seats were occupied by a distinguished assemblage, among whom were the Archbishops of York and Armagh, the Bishops of London, Oxford, Lichfield, Llandaff, and Down; Lords Ellenborough, Lyttelton, and Truro, and Chief Baron Pollock. The Prince, who had partaken of luncheon in the house of the High Master, Dr. Kynaston, entered the schoolroom about half-past 2, when the distribution of prizes was gone through in due order, and was followed by the performance of a series of dramatic scenes, Greek, English, and French. The scholars were then informed that at the request of the Prince of Wales their holydays would be elongated to the extent of a week, which was increased to a fortnight by the seven Bishops, who each solicited a day. As the guests retired "Three cheers for the Prince" and "Three cheers for the Bishops" caused the venerable building to resound. It is understood that the old Pauline dinner will be revived this year on the 2d of July.

INSPECTION OF THE CIVIL SERVICE VOLUNTEERS.—On Wednesday afternoon the Civil Service Volunteers, numbering 400 strong, were inspected by the Prince of Wales in the open square of Somerset House. Lord Bury was in command of the corps, which consisted of eight companies, under Captain Hawke, of the Audit Office; Captain Harrington and Captain Du Plat Taylor, of the Post Office; Captain Tom Taylor and Captain Mills, of Whitehall; Captain Willis, of the Admiralty; Captain Dalbiac and Captain Ennis, of the Inland Revenue. Seats were provided round each side of the square for the accommodation of spectators, and a canopy was fitted up in the Admiralty side of the square for the reception of the Prince and Princess of Wales, who honoured the ceremony by her presence, and the quadrangle was decorated with many flags. Their Royal Highnesses arrived at Somerset House shortly before 6 o'clock. The Prince wore the undress uniform of a general; the Princess was still in mourning. The corps was drawn up in line, and saluted the Prince and Princess on their arrival on the ground, the band of the regiment playing the National Anthem. The Prince, in company with Lord Bury, first walked along the front and rear ranks, and his Royal Highness then returned to the Princess, and remained on the dais while the corps went through the usual battalion drill. They marched past at quick time and at the double, wheeling round the angles of the courtyard with remarkable precision. When formed in line the front ranks knelt to receive cavalry, and subsequently, by order of the Prince, they formed square to receive cavalry. After a series of marchings and countermarchings, changes of front, and other portions of the drill, the Prince desired that the men might form hollow square, in order that he might address them. The Prince then advanced, and addressing them, said:—

Gentlemen, I have asked your colonel, Lord Bury, to form you in square, in order that I might tell you how very much pleased I am at having been present at this inspection. I am quite sure that, under your able colonel, you have had every opportunity of learning and becoming proficient in your drill. You have learned your drill under a colonel who was himself instructed by General Knollys, in the regiment with which I am connected. I am pleased to see the proficiency to which you have attained. The manner in which you have gone through the movements affords proof that you have paid great attention to your drill. You have shown throughout a considerable amount of steadiness, and I observed on the part of all an evident anxiety to do their best. I am perfectly satisfied with all that I have seen to-day, and feel it an honour to be connected with your corps.

The Prince then handed to Lord Bury the Challenge Cup of 100 guineas, which his Royal Highness had given to be shot for at Wimbledon, and on Mr. Burroughes, the winner of the Cup, being presented, the Prince handed to him the smaller cup, presented by the regiment to the winner, congratulating him at the same time upon his success, and expressing a hope that he might be again the winner of the Challenge Cup. The corps then gave three hearty cheers for the Prince of Wales, followed immediately afterwards by three most hearty cheers by the spectators for Denmark. Their Royal Highnesses then left the ground amid the hearty cheering of all present.

NEW STREET IN SOUTHWARK.—A new and commodious thoroughfare, intended as a continuation eastward into the populous districts of Bermondsey and Rotherhithe of the main street recently opened between the borough of Southwark and the western parts of the metropolis by way of Stamford Street, was opened to the public use on Tuesday in presence of the Chairman of the Metropolitan Board of Works, the members of the Local Board for the district of St. Olave, and many other of the principal inhabitants. The new street, which connects Bermondsey and old St. Thomas's Street, is about 1050 feet long and 40 feet wide, and has been made by the London and Brighton Railway Company, at a cost of about 7000*l.* exclusive of allowances for compensation, at the instance and under the supervision of the Local Board of Works. This great local improvement is said to be mainly due to the Board of Works for St. Olave. A year or two ago, when the London and Brighton Railway Company were applying to Parliament for powers to enlarge their station at London Bridge and to improve its approaches by buying up much of the surrounding property, the Local Board succeeded in procuring the introduction of clauses into the Company's Bill which they have since made subservient to the public convenience by inducing the railway authorities to construct the new thoroughfare, in consideration of their having for their own purposes greatly altered the configuration of the district. This the company have done, too, wholly at their own expense, but they hope to be more than recouped in time by rents to be derived from letting the arches of their viaduct which skirts one side of the street. The street runs through a populous district, intersected until now by a number of little narrow and tortuous alleys, for which it is substituted, but it is said to have displaced the dwellings of about 200 of the labouring classes, who have in consequence gone no one appears to know whither, but probably, as they are bound to the locality by ties of interest, to herd in neighbourhoods already densely crowded. At the opening ceremony of Tuesday, Mr. Thwaites, the chairman of the Metropolitan Board, took occasion to dilate on the great public works in connection with the Thames Embankment on which the Board are now engaged, and which, he said, when completed, in conjunction with the new street from the Mansion House to Blackfriars Bridge, would afford a commodious thoroughfare, 100 feet in width for the greater part, from the heart of the city to the Houses of Parliament, in place of Cheapside, Ludgate Hill, Fleet Street, and the Strand. He mentioned, too, as a gratifying circumstance to the tax-paying community throughout the metropolis, that by an arrangement which the Metropolitan Board is now making with the Chancellor of the Exchequer, instead of the Board raising money to carry out its gigantic enterprises at the rate of 4½ per cent., it will obtain it from the Government at 3¾ per cent.—an operation, he said, which alone will effect a saving to the ratepayers of 18,600*l.* a year, over a period of 18½ years.

BUNHILL FIELDS BURIAL GROUND.—At the last meeting of the Common Council a memorial, signed by Mr. Remington Mills, M.P., Mr. Samuel Morley, and many other dissenters, was presented, praying the Court to take steps to secure the preservation in its present condition of Bunhill Fields burial ground. The memorialists stated that they had a deep personal interest in preventing the disturbance and desecration of the cemetery. They were informed that the leases under which the corporation of London had held the Finsbury prebendal estate for more than 300 years will finally run out at Christmas, 1867. and that the estate will then pass into the hands of the Ecclesiastical Commissioners. Of that estate the burial ground formed part, and they prayed the Court to make such arrangements before the expiration of the lease as might prevent the perversion of the ground to common uses. The ground, they said, was set apart as a place of interment by the corporation 200 years ago, and down to 1852, when it was closed as a place of sepulture, more than 120,000 corpses had been interred in it. "In this burying-ground," they observe, "are interred men whose memory and writings are among the most precious of our national heirlooms; some of the most fearless asserters of civil and religious liberty at critical periods of our history; notable men of all professions, and of all religious communities, divines, artists, reformers; a crowd of worthies and confessors whose learning, piety, and public services not only adorned the age in which they lived, but have proved a permanent blessing to the land, and whose names the world will not willingly let die. The Nonconformist bodies especially look upon this as the holy field of their illustrious dead, because here lie buried those whose remains were refused interment in the graveyards of the churches in which they had long faithfully ministered, and whose memory is reverently cherished in the hearts and homes of their religious descendants." The Court passed an unanimous resolution referring the memorial to the City Lands' Committee, for them to consider what steps should be taken for preserving the burial-ground in its present state.

THE METROPOLITAN BRIDGES.—At the last meeting of the Common Council, the chairman of the Bridge House Estates' Committee, presented a report on the Bill introduced into the House of Commons by Alderman Salomons to facilitate the traffic of the metropolis by improving the communications across the Thames. The Bill authorises the Metropolitan Board of Works to purchase by agreement Southwark Bridge and certain other bridges mentioned in a schedule annexed, and it enacts that any bridge so purchased shall be open for public use free from toll. It also provides that it shall be the duty of the Board to endeavour to purchase Southwark and Waterloo bridges before purchasing the other bridges. The Bill contains a clause directing that the corporation of London shall contribute out of the Bridge House Estates Fund a sum of not less than 50,000*l.* towards the purchase-money of Southwark Bridge, and that when purchased the bridge shall be maintained by the corporation of London out of the Bridge House Estates Fund. The committee stated that the introduction into Parliament, without the authority of the Court of Common Council, of a Bill dealing with the Bridge House funds, which are under the control and management of the corporation, was a proceeding of so unprecedented and dangerous a character as to render it, in their opinion, highly important that the measure should be opposed. The report gave rise to a discussion, in which the course taken by Alderman Salomons, without consulting the Court of Aldermen, was severely censured, but eventually the report was agreed to, and the Committee were authorised to prepare a petition to Parliament against the Bill.

THE CITY TRAFFIC.—A statement has just been published, under the authority of a Committee of the Court of Aldermen, respecting the proceedings taken on the part of the Corporation for carrying out the provisions of the City of London Traffic Regulation Act of last year. This document embodies a correspondence which has passed between Sir George Grey and the Corporation on the subject, and from which it appears that the Home Secretary, with the Attorney and Solicitor-General on the one hand, and the Court of Aldermen with the law officers of the Corporation on the other, are directly at variance in many respects as to the powers conferred by the new Act upon the Court of Aldermen to regulate the traffic. For the present the result of this difference seems to be that the Court of Aldermen have no course open to them but to confine the bye-laws which they had submitted for the sanction of the Home Secretary to those approved by the law officers of the Crown. These are only three in number out of 17. The first prescribes that every omnibus, metropolitan stage carriage, van, or other carriage, passing eastwards through St. Paul's Churchyard, the destination being London Bridge, or any place over the bridge, shall, on reaching the south-east corner of St. Paul's Churchyard, pass down Cannon Street, and thence over London Bridge; and that all carriages making the reverse journey shall traverse the same route. The second regulation is to the effect that no person shall drive any of the vehicles enumerated for the conveyance of goods and merchandise through any of the City streets between 9 a.m. and 6 p.m., if laden to a greater height than 16 feet from the ground, or a greater width than 7 feet. The third prohibits the driving of any cart, waggon, or other vehicle wholly or partially laden with timber, logs of wood, scaffolding poles, or any other freight exceeding 25 feet in length or 8 feet 6 inches in breadth, through any street in the City between 9 in the morning and 6 in the evening. These regulations are to be carried into effect at once; but the remaining bye-laws which closed the streets during certain hours to vehicles drawn by more than four horses, and prohibited the delivery of coals, [illegible] and beer in casks, in 24 of the principal streets, between 9 a.m. and 5 p.m., as well as the sale of vegetables, fruit, fish, and other articles carried on trucks or other vehicles, are for the present abandoned.

ABOLITION OF METROPOLITAN TURNPIKES.—On the 1st of July "The Metropolis Turnpike Road [illegible] Amendment" will take effect, when 25 toll gates and 56 side bars will disappear from the metropolis, as far as the tolls are concerned. The statute will set free from toll-gate obstruction about 51 miles of road on the north side of the Thames. At Fulham, including Walham Green and Earl's Court, all the gates and side bars are to be removed; also at Kensington, Hammersmith, and Notting Hill; Harrow Road, Kilburn, Camden Town, comprising the King's Road and High Street, Chalk Farm, Haverstock Hill, and the Brecknock Gate, as well as the gate in the road at Kentish Town. Further removals will take place at Holloway, Islington, Ball's Pond, Kingsland, the Cambridge Heath, Hackney, Twickenham, and Paddington. All the gates and side bars of the City Road are included.

THE PUBLIC HEALTH.—The Registrar-General's Weekly Return states that the deaths in London in the week that ended Saturday, June 11, were 1285. The average number in the corresponding week of the 10 years, 1854-63, corrected for increase of population, was 1155. The present return is therefore 130 above the average. During the week the births of 955 boys and 938 girls, in all 1932 children, were registered in London. In the 10 corresponding weeks of the years 1854-63 the average number was 1867.

BIRMINGHAM.—Between 30 and 40 boys narrowly escaped being poisoned in this town on Thursday week. It appears that the London and North-Western Company were having a sale of unclaimed goods, and among the articles were several sacks of Jatropha nuts, which are used in some branch of industry, and are pleasant to the palate, but poisonous. These nuts were scattered about the floor in a warehouse, and were picked up by the boys, who distributed them among their companions. All who ate them were speedily seized with vomiting pains in the stomach, and were sick. The sufferers were sent to the General Hospital, and by the employment of prompt means they were restored, but in several instances death had well-nigh been the consequences.

BURNLEY.—An order has been issued for the exhumation of the body of an old man named Butterworth, who recently died in this town under suspicious circumstances. In his last illness a person named Ingham, Dyson and his wife, and a man named Thomas Greenwood, waited upon him, and after his death the latter was locked up by Dyson and Greenwood, who took possession of all deceased's effects. Inquiry was made as to the existence of a will, in virtue of which it was alleged that they were empowered to act as they had done, but their attorney declined to produce it. Strong rumours speedily circulated in Burnley to the effect that the death of Butterworth was brought about by foul means.

CHATHAM.—A series of siege operations took place in this garrison on Saturday in the presence of the Prince of Wales, Prince Alfred, Prince Arthur, Prince Louis of Hesse, and the Duke of Cambridge. The operations consisted as usual of the explosion of mines, boat attack, and the explosion of torpedoes. About 4000 troops were engaged, and the operations were witnessed by many thousand spectators.

ETON.—The vacancy in the staff of the Upper School masters caused by the promotion of the Rev. F. Hoare-ford to the Lower School mastership has been filled by the advancement of the Rev. G. R. Dupuis from the Lower School.

LIVERPOOL.—The Mackay gun, and the Armstrong target, which showed five cleanly cut shot-holes, are exhibited in front of the Liverpool Exchange. On Monday, prior to the gun being sent to Shoeburyness for Government experiments.

MANCHESTER.—At the New Bailey, a few days since Silas Travis was brought up on remand charged with having attempted to murder his wife, at the time an inmate of Prestwich Lunatic Asylum. At the inquiry it was shown that the prisoner, during a visit to his wife at the asylum, where she had so far recovered that it was expected she would be able to leave in a few days, gave her two cakes, on breaking of which it was found to contain a number of pins in the form of fish-hooks. On tasting the cake they said that it had a bitter taste; and, on the prisoner being apprehended, a packet containing a white powder was found in his pocket. One of these packets had been analysed, and found to be antimony, which was found in the cake. The prisoner, on returning from the asylum, had told a lodger in his house, that, although the medical men said his wife was better, in her state she would never come out alive, and that he was "stiff" already, as he had two others waiting to marry him in Whit-week. The prisoner called a witness in his favour, but his evidence had a different effect. He stated that the prisoner and his wife when together lived very unhappily, principally in consequence of his unkind treatment, as he never allowed her any money. He also had heard that the prisoner intended taking another wife. The magistrate committed the prisoner for trial at the assizes, stating that it was one of the most cruel and diabolical attempts to kill a person that he had ever known in the course of his experience, and he had been assured by medical men that the poison which the prisoner had attempted to administer would have caused a death of lingering and excruciating agony.

Newcastle-on-Tyne.—A murder was perpetrated at St. Mary's Island, near Old Hartley, on Saturday evening. A picnic party had been spending the day on the island, and were about to return home to Seaton Delaval. At that juncture a pitman, named Bell, who had been drinking in a public-house, went up to the group and demanded some money from a young man. An altercation ensued, in the course of which Bell, raising a loaded gun, shot one of the party in the thigh. Medical assistance was immediately obtained, but the wounded man gradually sank, and expired in a few hours.

Sheffield.—Great excitement was caused in one of the populous districts of this town on Monday morning, in consequence of a saw grinder, named Myers, having first murdered his wife, and then cut his own throat. The woman died immediately; and the man, who was removed to the infirmary, lies without any hope of recovery. At the inquest on Thursday the evidence showed that the murder was a most cruel and deliberate one, and the jury immediately returned a verdict of Wilful Murder against the husband.

The Emigration Movement.—Emigration to America proceeds with as much vigour at Queenstown as if it had only just begun. The ships are said to be invariably filled, and leave behind numbers of eager applicants for passages. One vessel last week took out 300 persons. The men were all young, with two exceptions. There were many women on board, and among them were seven nuns of the order of the Good Shepherd.

The Removal of Glasgow University.—The lands of Gilmorehill and West Bank were purchased on Wednesday by the authorities of the University of Glasgow, for the sum of 65,000*l.*, with the view of transferring the college buildings to that site at an early date. It is understood that the University will get immediate possession of the lands. These extend to nearly 50 acres, and after amply accommodating the college buildings, a large surplus of ground will remain, which, it is hoped, will be acquired by the corporation, and thrown into the West End Park, which would thus be made one of the finest in the kingdom.

Madeleine Smith.—An Inverness paper states that after the trial of Madeleine Smith for the alleged poisoning of her lover at Glasgow, her father and mother and the other members of the family left Blythswood Square and took a house in a rural district near Linlithgow, where she got married to a teacher, who felt pity for her condition. He got an appointment in an institution in one of the leading seaport towns in the south of England, and for a time seemed to be in the enjoyment of connubial felicity. But it was discovered that she was no less a personage than Madeleine Smith, and the scandal became so strong that the husband was compelled to leave his situation. They then proceeded to a smaller town in England, where, at a much reduced salary, the husband got another situation; but here, too, she was found out, and her husband fell into a melancholy mood and died. The wife was not long in following him, and died recently, it is said, of a broken heart.

The Tullibody Bridge Murder.—The trial of Thomas Arnot, for the murder of a lad named David Paton, on the Alloa Road, near Tullibody Bridge, on the 15th of March, took place on the 6th inst. before the High Court of Justiciary in Edinburgh. It was stated by the prisoner's counsel that he was insane, and unable to give instructions for his defence, and that therefore he was not a fit subject for trial. Evidence having been adduced as to the state of mind of the accused, the Court found that the case was beyond doubt one of present insanity, exempting the party from trial. Order was then made for the strict custody of the accused in Alloa prison until her Majesty's pleasure should be known.

The Murder near Edinburgh.—The trial of George Bryce on the charge of murdering a young woman named Jane Seaton, at Ratho, on the 16th of April last, commenced a few days since before the High Court of Justiciary, and occupied two days. A special defence of insanity was pleaded. The jury unanimously found the prisoner Guilty, but strongly recommended him to mercy on account of the low organisation of his mental faculties. He was sentenced to be executed on the 21st inst.

Railways.

Opening of the Hammersmith and City.—This important addition to the metropolitan system of railways was opened for public traffic on Monday. The line is worked by the Great Western, on the broad gauge, and the accommodation afforded is of the most liberal character, there being no fewer than 29 trains between Farringdon Street and Hammersmith, and 30 return trains daily. The first train leaves Hammersmith at 7.30 A.M., and the last at 10 P.M.; while the earliest train from Farringdon Street is 8.15 A.M., and the latest 10.15 P.M. The traffic, after leaving the Bishop's Road station at Paddington, runs over about a mile of the Great Western main line to the Hammersmith Junction at Green Lane, and thence to Hammersmith. The traffic now opened has the advantage of communication by every train with all the stations upon the Metropolitan Railway, as well as communication with stations at Notting Hill and Shepherd's Bush. Within a short period the Great Western Company will open a junction line which runs out of the Hammersmith Railway near Notting Hill, and joins the West London Extension near Kensington, by which the Great Western system will be placed in direct communication with the Crystal Palace and south of England. The time occupied in running between Farringdon Street and Hammersmith is 38 minutes, and the single fares 3*d.*, 6*d.*, and 1*s.*, with the return tickets at 1*s.*, 9*d.*, and 6*d.*

The Egham Accident.—Mr. E. Trigg, publican, of Market Street, Brighton, who had his leg and ribs broken, and sustained other severe injuries in the recent accident, died on Friday morning in Charing Cross Hospital from the shock to the system. The inquest was opened on Monday, and adjourned after the body had been identified. The inquest on the other persons killed in the accident was resumed at Egham on Tuesday. The officials of the company proved that the signals were all in order, and that, in addition, men were stationed along the line with hand signals. The general order was to show the "danger" signal for five minutes after a train passed, and the "caution" signal for five minutes more. The first train was started to stop at Egham, the second, which was started exactly six minutes after it, was to run through Egham and stop at the station beyond. The witnesses stated that the danger signals were exhibited at the station when the second train came in at the rate of about 10 or 15 miles an hour. The inquiry was again adjourned.

Collision on the Midland.—An alarming accident occurred on this line near Birmingham on Friday morning. As the 7 A.M. passenger train from Derby was approaching the ticket-platform, a goods train ran into it, owing, as it is said, to the negligence of the pointsman. About 15 passengers were more or less seriously injured. Among them was Mr. Stanbridge, the town-clerk of Birmingham, who received a severe shock, and several contusions about the head and face. Alderman Turner was also amongst the passengers, but escaped unhurt. Mr. Sutton, solicitor, of Temple Row, was bruised and cut, and Mr. Collinson, a Yorkshire gentleman, was severely cut in the face, and his shoulder contused. Other gentlemen, about 30 in number, sustained similar injuries, but it is hoped there will be no fatal results.

Cricket.—The annual match between 11 from the firm of Mr. Turner, Slough, and 11 from the firms of Messrs. Beck, Henderson, and Child, and Messrs. J. Carter & Co., of London, was played in the Home Park, Windsor, on the 15th inst.; when the former, after some excellent play on both sides, defeated their opponents by nine wickets. The score was as follows:—Slough Eleven, first innings, 74; 2d innings, 16, with nine wickets to fall. London Eleven, 1st innings, 48; 2d innings, 40; total, 88.

Obituary.

The Earl of Gosford, K.P., died on the 15th inst., after a short illness. His lordship, Archibald Acheson, Earl of Gosford, Viscount and Baron Gosford, of Market Hill, county Armagh, in the Peerage of Ireland; and Baron Worlingham, of Beccles, county Suffolk; and Baron Acheson, of Gloucairney, of the county Armagh, in that of the United Kingdom, and a baronet of Nova Scotia, was the only son of the second earl, who was for some years Governor-General of Canada, and was born in 1806. He married, in 1832, Lady Theodosia Brabazon, only daughter of the 10th Earl of Meath. He was an excellent landlord, and expended a large amount of money and time in the improvement of his landed property in Ireland. He was educated at Christ Church, Oxford, where he graduated B.A. in 1828, was elected M.P. for the county Armagh in 1830, which county he continuously represented up to 1847, when he was summoned to the House of Lords, during the lifetime of his father, as Baron Acheson. He was made a Knight of St. Patrick in 1855. His lordship is succeeded in the family honours and estates by his eldest son, Archibald Brabazon, Viscount Acheson, born in 1841.

Lord Archibald Vane Tempest, M.P. for North Durham, died on the 11th inst. He was the second son of the late Marquis of Londonderry, by his second wife, the daughter and heiress of Sir Harry Vane Tempest. He was born in 1825, and married in 1850 Lady Susan Pelham Conten, only daughter of the Duke of Newcastle, by whom he leaves an infant daughter. The deceased lord was educated at Eton, and, having adopted the army as his future profession, entered the Scots Fusilier Guards as ensign in 1843, became lieutenant and captain in 1849, and captain and lieutenant-colonel in 1854. He served with his regiment during the Eastern campaign, and received the medal and clasp for the siege and fall of Sebastopol. Soon after his return home from the East, in 1859, he retired from the service, his Parliamentary avocations interfering with his military duties. In 1862 he became a candidate for the city of Durham, but was unsuccessful. In the December following, however, he was placed at the head of the poll, but in June was unseated on petition. A vacancy having occurred in 1854 in the representation of North Durham by his brother, Lord Seaham, becoming a peer under the title of Earl Vane on the death of the Marquis of Londonderry, Lord Adolphus was returned, and held the seat uninterruptedly, on Conservative principles, until his death. He voted in favour of Lord Derby's Reform Bill, but occasionally supported Lord Palmerston's Government, and on the division on the Chinese war recorded his vote in favour of the Government.

Admiral Sir Arthur Fanshawe, K.C.B., died on Tuesday last, at his residence in the Regent's Park, after a long illness. He was the third son of the late Captain Robert Fanshawe, R.N., and was born in 1794. He entered the navy at an early age, and served in the flag-ship of Lord Gambier, in the expedition to Copenhagen in 1807, and was at the capture of the Russian 74 gunship Sewolod, in 1808. In 1809 and 1810 he was engaged in co-operating with the patriots on the coast of Spain: also, in 1811, assisted at the reduction of Java. He saw considerable service during the American war, and assisted at the capture of several privateers, and of the American frigate President, in 1815. He was flag captain in the Princess Charlotte in all the operations on the coast of Syria, and particularly distinguished himself at the bombardment of St. Jean d'Acre in 1840. After his return from the coast of Africa, in 1852, he was appointed superintendent of Portsmouth dockyard; in 1856 he was appointed Commander-in-Chief of the North American station; in 1857, he became Commander-in-Chief of the Mediterranean station; and, in 1860, was appointed Commander-in-Chief at Devonport; but was obliged to resign the last command from ill-health. In recognition of his services he was nominated a Knight Commander of the Bath, and a Knight of the Austrian Order of Leopold. He also enjoyed a flag-officer's good service pension of 300*l.* a year.

Professor Ferrier, A.B. Oxon, Professor of Metaphysics and Political Economy in the University of St. Andrews, died on the 11th inst. at West Port, in that city. His health had for some months been seriously impaired by organic disease of the heart; and latterly, he felt himself so completely incapacitated for conducting the business of his class that he had to delegate it to other hands. Repeated accessions of angina pectoris confirmed his friends in the fear that recovery was hopeless; and he died on Saturday.

METROPOLITAN CATTLE MARKET.

MONDAY, June 13.

We have a large reduction in the supply of Beasts; consequently, although trade is dull, prices have advanced a little. Sheep are not quite so plentiful as on Monday last, yet the supply is good Trade is rather more cheerful, but it is very difficult to obtain higher rates. Lambs and Calves are selling about the same as on Thursday. From Germany and Holland there are 1360 Beasts, 4510 Sheep, 259 Calves, and 60 Pigs; from France, 13 Calves; from Scotland, 695 Beasts; from Ireland, 20; and 2560 from Norfolk and Suffolk.

The number of Beasts is large, but it includes a considerable number in store condition. The choicest qualities are not lower. Our quotations generally are the same as on Monday; it is, however, difficult to effect a clearance. Sheep are also more plentiful; we have a demand at Monday's quotations. Lambs and Calves are not selling quite so well Our foreign supply consists of 510 Beasts, 3020 Sheep, and 600 Calves Milch Cows, 60.

HOPS.—BOROUGH MARKET, FRIDAY, June 17.

Messrs. Pattenden & Smith report the stock of last years' growth nearly exhausted. Consumers buy only to supply immediate wants, which causes the trade to rule dull; prices barely so good as on Monday. The plant is progressing very favourably.

MARK LANE.—MONDAY, June 13.

The supply of Wheat from Essex and Kent to this morning's market was very small, and met a quick sale at the prices of this day sen'night. There was a moderate attendance, and only a limited business was transacted in foreign Wheat, for which we do not alter our quotations. Barley, Beans, and Peas sold at last week's rates. The supply of Oats fresh up being small, there was a good demand for the few parcels on board ship at an advance of 6d. per qr. For Flour there was a moderate inquiry, and prices were unaltered.

FRIDAY, June 17.

The weather became unsettled and showery on the 13th, and continued so until yesterday; it has since been fine. The Wheat trade throughout the kingdom this week has been inanimate, and in some markets rather lower rates have been accepted. A few purchases of English Wheat have been made for export to the continent. We do not observe any alteration in the value of Barley or Peas, but the prices of Oats and Beans have slightly improved. Flour has been in moderate demand at late rates. Since Friday last 8 vessels have been reported off the coast. The trade was moderately active, Odessa Wheat realising a small advance early in the week, as also Maize, but the demand has abated for the latter article. In Barley more business has been done, but prices remain the same. Paris, June 16.—Wheat: The tendency of markets in the interior is still for higher prices, and we closed here about 50c per sack dearer yesterday, which advance is maintained to-day. Flour was quiet, and more freely offered; the six marks are worth 37s. to 37s 3d. per 280 lbs., and the present stock of Flour reported as 13,400 cwts. The arrivals of English Oats and American Flour this week have been to a fair extent, of all other grain very small. The attendance at to-day's market was unusually limited. English Wheat was inquired after at the extreme rates of Monday last, holders of foreign rather raise their pretensions, but the business transacted was restricted. Barley, Beans, and Peas were steady at Monday's quotations. Oats continue scarce, and bring an advance of 6d. per qr.

LIVERPOOL, June 14.—We have had a good attendance of millers and dealers at this day's market, and Wheat has commanded a good consumptive inquiry at the prices current on Friday last. Flour also is more saleable, and may be quoted the turn dearer. Indian Corn steady in value, but not much dealt in. Oats and Oatmeal neglected. Beans, Peas, and Barley show no alteration. The market closes better than it opened.

FRIDAY, June 17.—The market was moderately attended. Good demand for Wheat, both for consumption and export; prices 1d. per cental dearer. Flour steady at late rates. Moderate demand for Indian Corn. Egyptian Beans steady. Oats and Oatmeal dull.

The Furnishing of Bed Rooms.
HEAL AND SON have observed for some time that it would be advantageous to their customers to see a much larger selection of BED-ROOM FURNITURE than is usually displayed, and that to judge properly of the style and effect of the different descriptions of Furniture, it is necessary that each description should be placed in separate rooms. They have, therefore, erected large and specious Show Rooms, by which they are enabled not only to extend their show of Iron, Brass, and Wood Bedsteads and Bed Room Furniture, beyond what they believe has ever been attempted, but also to provide several small rooms for the purpose of keeping complete sets of Bed Room Furniture in the different styles.
Japanned Deal Goods may be seen in complete suites of five or six different colours, some of them light and ornamental, and others of a plainer description. Suites of stained Deal Gothic Furniture, Polished Deal, Oak, and Walnut, are also set apart in separate rooms, so that customers are able to see the effect as it would appear in their own rooms. A Suite of very superior Gothic Oak Furniture will generally be kept in stock, and from time to time new and select Furniture in various woods will be added.
Bed Furnishings are fitted to the Bedsteads in large numbers, so that a complete assortment may be seen, and the effect of any particular pattern ascertained as it would appear on the Bedstead.
A very large stock of Bedding (Heal & Son's original trade) is kept on the Bedsteads.
The stock of Mahogany goods for the better Bed Rooms, and Japanned Goods for plain and Servant's use, is very greatly increased. The entire Stock is arranged in eight rooms, six galleries (each 120 feet long), and two large ground floors, the whole forming as complete an assortment of Bed Room Furniture as they think can possibly be required.
Every attention is paid to the manufacture of the Cabinet work, and they have now erected large Workshops on the premises for this purpose, that the manufacture may be under their own immediate care.
Their Bedding trade receives their constant and personal attention, every article being made on the Premises.
They particularly call attention to their Patent Spring Mattress, the Sommier Elastique Portatif. It is portable, durable, and elastic, and lower in price than the old Spring Mattress.
HEAL & SON'S ILLUSTRATED CATALOGUE of Bedsteads, Bedding, and Bed Room Furniture sent free by Post.

News of the Week.

THE House of Lords on Monday, being the anniversary of the QUEEN'S accession, did not sit. On Tuesday the Attorneys and Solicitors Remuneration Bill was read a second time, and referred to a Select Committee. On Thursday Earl RUSSELL gave notice that on Monday he would lay on the table the protocols of the Conference, and make a statement on the subject. Lord BROUGHAM introduced a Bill for the prevention of bribery at elections, which was read a first time. The Bishop of OXFORD moved the second reading of a Bill giving facilities for the performance of Divine Worship in Collegiate Schools. The Earl of SHAFTESBURY moved as an amendment that the Bill be read a second time that day three months. After some discussion the Bill was read a second time, and ordered to be committed on Tuesday week.

In the Commons on Friday Sir J. HAY moved a resolution that the Government, in landing forces on the Gold Coast for the purpose of waging war against the KING of ASHANTEE, without making sufficient provision for preserving the health of the troops, had incurred grave responsibility, and that the House lamented the want of foresight which had caused so large a loss of life. The motion was opposed by Government, and negatived on a division by a majority of 7, the numbers being 233 to 226. On Monday Mr. DISRAELI asked if there was any truth in the statement that the Prussian Minister, at the meeting of the Conference on Saturday, declared that in case the German ports were blockaded, the German Powers would not consider themselves bound by the convention of Paris with regard to privateering. He wished also to know whether, in the event of the Conference breaking up without a settlement of the question, hostilities would commence on the 26th, and when the protocols would be laid on the table of the House. The CHANCELLOR of the EXCHEQUER said that in the absence of Lord PALMERSTON he was not prepared to answer the questions, and requested Mr. DISRAELI to put them on the paper for the next day. Mr. OSBORNE asked what significance was to be given to the statement of Earl RUSSELL, on Friday, that her Majesty's fleet were "fully prepared for any service it might be called upon to render." Mr. S. FITZGERALD thought that the House should insist on a reply, and Lord J. MANNERS said that on an occasion of such importance it was the duty of the Prime Minister to have been in his place. Lord PALMERSTON at this juncture entered the House, and said in reply to Mr. OSBORNE that Earl RUSSELL's words meant that the fleet was ready to go anywhere, and was capable of performing any service. In answer to Mr. DISRAELI, he said he must decline to state what had occurred at the Conference. The suspension of hostilities would expire on Saturday, and if in the interim no agreement were come to between the belligerents, hostilities would recommence. When the Conference was concluded it would be the duty of the Government to lay the papers immediately before Parliament. In answer to further questions by Mr. BRIGHT, his lordship expressed his regret that his tongue was tied as to details, and could only repeat the assurance that the Government had been labouring incessantly to bring the belligerents to an agreement; and if they failed in doing so, he trusted that they would be able to show that it had not been their fault. The Government Annuities Bill was then read a third time and passed. Sir G. GREY moved the second reading of the Gaol Bill. Mr. NEWDEGATE moved as an amendment that the Bill be read a second time that day three months. After a long debate the amendment was negatived by 116 to 49, and the Bill was read a second time. On the order for resuming the adjourned debate on the third reading of the Collection of Taxes Bill, Sir J. TROLLOPE moved as an amendment that the Bill be read a third time that day three months. The amendment was opposed by Government, but was carried on a division by 132 to 128. The Bill was therefore lost. The Railways Construction Facilities Bill passed through committee. Sir C. O'LOGHLEN moved the second reading of the Railway Travelling (Ireland) Bill, the object of which was to compel the Irish railway companies to run one train each way on Sundays at certain hours. Mr. BLAKE moved as an amendment that the Bill be read a second time that day three months. On a division the amendment was carried by 40 to 21, so the Bill was lost. On Tuesday, at a morning sitting, the House went into Committee on the Court of Chancery (Ireland) Bill, and agreed to several of the clauses. Mr. WHITESIDE, who had entered the House before the 12th clause had been disposed of, charged the Government with taking advantage of the absence of the Irish members to push the measure forward at a morning sitting, and moved that the Chairman leave the chair. After some discussion the motion was carried against the Government by a majority of 1, the numbers being 42 to 41. At the evening sitting Mr. BERKELEY moved a resolution to the effect that at the next general election a fair trial should be given to the vote by ballot. Lord PALMERSTON opposed the motion, which was negatived on a division by 212 to 123. Mr. HENNESSY moved a resolution that some means should be devised by Government to check the emigration of the agricultural population of Ireland. The motion was opposed by Government, and negatived on a division by 80 to 52. On Wednesday the ATTORNEY GENERAL for IRELAND moved that on a future day the House should go into Committee for the purpose of considering the course to be taken with reference to the Court of Chancery (Ireland) Bill, in consequence of the division of the previous day. After some opposition the motion was agreed to. The House went into Committee on the Joint Stock Companies (Voting Papers) Bill, when Mr. PEACOCKE moved that the Chairman leave the chair. The motion was carried on a division by 76 to 19. The Weights and Measures (Metric System) Bill passed through Committee. Sir J. HAY moved the second reading of the Bank of England Notes (Scotland) Bill, the object of which was to legalise the tender of Bank of England Notes in Scotland. After a long debate the motion was withdrawn. Mr. LOCKE moved that the House go into Committee on the Jersey Court Bill, the object of which was to reform the constitution and practice of the Royal Court in that island. Mr. PAULL moved as an amendment that the States of Jersey be heard by counsel in opposition to the Bill. On the motion of Mr. AYRTON the debate was adjourned. On Thursday Lord PALMERSTON announced that the Conference met on Wednesday and adjourned to Saturday, when it would probably meet for the last time. It would be his duty on Monday to lay on the table of the House all the papers, including the proceedings on Saturday, and to accompany them by a statement in reference to the transactions to which the papers related. The Weighing of Grain (Port of London) Bill was read a second time, and referred to a select committee. The adjourned debate on Sir H. CAIRNS's resolution on the subject of National Education in Ireland, was resumed, when Mr. HENNESSY moved, as an amendment, the omission of the words "so far as regards their operation on the aid afforded to convent and monastic schools." After a long discussion the amendment was negatived by 112 to 8. The original resolution was then negatived by 91 to 59.

Wellesley arrived on a visit. In the evening her Majesty had a dinner party. After dinner a musical performance took place before the Royal party in the Drawing-room. On Thursday the Queen received addresses of congratulation on the birth of the infant Prince Albert Victor of Wales, from the Upper and Lower Houses of the Convocation of the Province of Canterbury; from the Bishop and Clergy of the Cities of London and Westminster; and from the three denominations of Protestant Dissenters. The Queen returned a gracious answer to each of the addresses. The principal members of the deputations were then presented by Sir George Grey, and had the honour of kissing her Majesty's hand. Luncheon was served for the deputations in the dining room.

The Prince and Princess of Wales.—On Friday the Prince rode on horseback, accompanied by Prince Alfred and Prince Louis of Hesse. The Princess took a carriage drive, accompanied by Princess Louis of Hesse. In the evening the Prince and Princess, the Prince and Princess Louis of Hesse, and Prince Alfred honoured the Marchioness of Westminster with their company at a ball at Grosvenor House. On Saturday morning the Prince rode on horseback. In the afternoon the Prince and Princess, accompanied by Prince and Princess Louis of Hesse, took a carriage drive. In the evening the Prince and Princess Louis of Hesse went to a conversazione at the Royal College of Physicians. The Princess and Princess Louis of Hesse went to the Italian Opera, Covent Garden. On Sunday morning the Prince and Princess attended Divine service at the Chapel Royal, St. James's. The Rev. H. M. Birch preached the sermon. In the afternoon the Prince and Princess Louis of Hesse left Marlborough House for Windsor Castle. On Monday the Prince, accompanied by Prince Alfred, rode on horseback to Lord's Cricket Ground. The Princess took a carriage drive. In the evening the Prince and Princess of Wales and Prince Alfred honoured the Marquis and Marchioness of Abercorn with their company at a dinner and ball. On Tuesday the Prince, accompanied by Prince Alfred, rode out on horseback. The Prince and Princess afterwards took a carriage drive. In the evening the Prince went to the Adelphi Theatre. On Wednesday the Prince, accompanied by Prince Alfred, rode on horseback. In the afternoon his Royal Highness held a Levée at St. James's Palace on behalf of the Queen. The Princess took a carriage drive. In the evening the Prince and Princess honoured Lord and Lady Palmerston with their company at a dinner and ball. On Thursday the Prince and Princess went to the Bazaar in aid of the Female School of Art, at the Horticultural Gardens, Kensington. The Prince rode on horseback. The Princess took a carriage drive. In the evening their Royal Highnesses had a dinner party.

The Cabinet.—A Cabinet Council was held on Saturday at the official residence of the First Lord of the Treasury, in Downing Street. Another Council was held yesterday.

The Conference.—All the Plenipotentiaries accredited to the Conference met on Saturday at the official residence of the First Lord of the Treasury, in Downing Street, and sat nearly four hours. The Conference met again on Wednesday, and sat three hours. Another meeting will be held to-day.

The Case of Bishop Colenso.—The Bishop of Natal presented an appeal to the Judicial Committee of Privy Council on Thursday against the judgment of the Bishop of Cape Town, depriving him of his see. The petition, which raises the question of the Bishop of Cape Town's jurisdiction, was ordered to stand over till the sitting after Michaelmas Term.

The Iron Clad Fleet.—The Royal Sovereign, cupola ship, steamed out of Portsmouth Harbour on Thursday morning to make a trial of her machinery and speed at Stokes Bay. There were on board Admiral Sir Michael Seymour, G.C.B., Rear-Admiral Elliot, Rear-Admiral Dacres, Rear-Admiral Robinson, comptroller of the navy; Captain Cowper Coles, the designer of the cupola; and several other officers. Captain Sherard Osborn, who has been appointed captain of the ship, took the command on the occasion. The trial terminated very satisfactorily, the vessel making 11 knots at full speed, and 8 knots at half boiler power.

Accident to the Bishop of Oxford.—On Thursday evening the Bishop of Oxford had a rather severe fall from his horse in Rotten Row. He was a good deal shaken, but was sufficiently recovered yesterday to attend Convocation.

Convocation.—Both Houses of the Convocation of Canterbury assembled at Westminster on Wednesday for the despatch of business. In the Upper House the Bishop of Oxford presented the report of the committee appointed to examine into the merits of "Essays and Reviews," stating that "the book contains false and dangerous statements and reasonings, at variance with the teaching of the Church of England, and deserving the condemnation of the Synod." His lordship moved that the report be received and adopted. The Bishop of London opposed the motion, on the ground that it was unwise at that late period to revive an interest in a book that had all but passed into oblivion. The motion was supported by the Archbishop of Canterbury and the Bishop of Llandaff, and was carried. The Bishop of Oxford then moved a resolution formally condemning the volume, as containing teaching contrary to the doctrine received by the United Church of England and Ireland, in common with the whole Catholic Church of Christ. The Bishop of Gloucester and Bristol seconded the motion, which was carried; the Bishops of London, Lincoln, and Bangor voting against it. In the Lower House, on the receipt of the resolution of the Upper House condemning "Essays and Reviews," Archdeacon Denison moved an address of thanks to their lordships for their report, and expressing concurrence in their resolution. The Rev. Dr. Jebb seconded the motion. The Rev. Canon Blakesley moved as an amendment that no further proceedings could be satisfactorily or safely taken in the matter. The Dean of Westminster seconded the amendment. After a long discussion the amendment was rejected by 30 to 18. Canon Selwyn then moved as an amendment that full time should be allowed for the due consideration of the subject. After some further discussion the Archdeacon of Ely moved that the debate be adjourned, which was agreed to. On Wednesday, in the Upper House, petitions on various subjects were presented. In the Lower House, the adjourned debate on Essays and Reviews was resumed, when Canon Selwyn's amendment, after some discussion, was lost. The Rev. Sir Henry Thompson, Bart., then moved an amendment against proceeding with the matter until a petition from Dr. Rowland Williams, praying to be heard before the House on his Essay, had been disposed of. This amendment was supported by the Hon. and Rev. S. Best, the Dean of Ely, and the Dean of Westminster, but was negatived on a division, by 31 to 22. The Rev. J. Bramston then moved an amendment that the House could not concur in the judgment of the Upper House, because it was of opinion that it was unadvisable to revive the judicial functions of convocation, and was incompetent satisfactorily to perform those functions. Archdeacon Hony seconded the motion. After a long discussion the amendment was negatived by 33 to 22. The original motion was then put, and after some further discussion, the debate, on the motion of Archdeacon Thorpe, was adjourned to Friday.

Foreign.

France.—The Moniteur of Wednesday evening says that the proposal to submit the Schleswig question to arbitration has been the object of preliminary negotiations between the Austrian and Prussian Governments. The two German Powers are said to have resolved upon accepting the good offices of a friendly Power; but the conditions of this acceptance are such that Denmark could not consent to the arrangement without abandoning the attitude she has hitherto observed and the claims contained in her ultimatum. The Pays of Monday publishes a telegram from Copenhagen, stating that England had asked the Danish Government whether the port of Korsoer, on the Great Belt, could, in case of necessity, supply provisions for 12 British vessels of war. The Patrie of Saturday asserts that Earl Cowley has asked whether the Emperor would be disposed at once to participate with England in a naval demonstration in the Baltic, and that the Imperial Government replied in the negative. The same paper publishes advices from Germany announcing that great endeavours are there making to supersede the Duke of Augustenburg as a candidate for the Duchies by Prince Peter of Oldenburg, who is allied to the family of the Czar. The Constitutionnel, alluding to the report that England would propose to intrust the disputed territorial question in the Duchies to arbitration, says:—

"We are convinced that the French Government would not entertain any objection, and that it can only wish success to this proposal."

La France of Sunday evening says that at the sitting of the Conference on Saturday the members were occupied with contradictory discussions and the irreconcilable pretensions of the different Powers. It adds that no important progress has been made, and that Sweden intends withdrawing its representative from the Conference should the line of the Dannewerke and the Schlei, as proposed by England, and to which Denmark acceded in making her ultimatum, be abandoned. The Paris papers publish detailed accounts of the fight between the Alabama and the Kearsarge, and with the exception of the Opinion Nationale are unanimous in extolling the gallantry of Captain Semmes and the crew of the Alabama in accepting the challenge of a vessel so much superior to her in men and guns. The Constitutionnel, in an article signed by M. Paulin Limayrac, states that the loss of the Alabama has caused great agitation, and that all the letters from Cherbourg testify to the profound regret prevailing in that town at the event. It also adds that from one end of France to the other the same feeling obtains, and that it is the generous nature of the French character which always urges the nation to display their sympathy for the weak and their admiration for unfortunate bravery. The France says that the crew of the Alabama were trained seamen, and experienced boarders, and would undoubtedly have captured the Kearsarge if they could have succeeded in boarding. It also states that the Kearsarge, on returning to Cherbourg during the afternoon of Sunday, landed 63 of the crew of the Alabama. Of this number 15 were wounded. The French authorities have charge of all the prisoners; the wounded men were sent to the Naval Hospital, where they receive every attention. It describes the joy of the Confederate prisoners on hearing of the safety of their commander, and says that the animosity between the prisoners and their captors is so strong that it is difficult to prevent fighting and bloodshed between them in the streets. The Pays states that the majority of the Alabama's crew were English, and that Captain Semmes was confident that if he could only board the Kearsarge his men would make short work of the Yankees. The Temps also pays a tribute of respect to the Alabama and her gallant captain and crew, and says that the friends of the North cannot regret the loss of this Red Rover, but they could not but follow with interest its audacious and brilliant career. The Japanese Ambassadors had their final interview with M. Drouyn de Lhuys on Monday, and left Paris on the following day on their return direct to Japan. Before leaving they signed a convention confirming former treaties, offered apologies for the assassination of Lieutenant Camus in Japan, and guaranteed the payment of the indemnity. The commercial negotiations between France and Switzerland are terminated, and the treaty was signed by the representatives of th two countries on Tuesday. The Washington, the first vessel of the new French Transatlantic Company, left Havre last week, and thus inaugurated a new direct line between France and America.

SPAIN.—In the sitting of the Senate on Saturday several members spoke against the ancient constitutional privileges still enjoyed by the Basque provinces over the other provinces of the country. In the sitting of the Cortes on Wednesday, Senor Pacheco, in reply to a question from Senor Molino, said:—

"The squadron in the Pacific will be reinforced. The Chincha Islands will be occupied until the assassins of Talambo are punished, and it is proved that the Peruvian Government was foreign to the attempt on the life of Senor Mazarredo, recently Spanish Minister in Peru."

The Spanish Minister for Foreign Affairs has forwarded to the French Government his thanks for the services rendered by France to Spanish subjects in Peru. At the same time the Minister again declared that the policy of Spain is not one either of aggression or conquest.

PORTUGAL.—The Cortes was closed on the 18th inst. by the King in person. His Majesty in a brief speech congratulated the House on the abolition of the tobacco monopoly, the establishment of new banks, the improvement of the navy, and the general commercial progress.

DENMARK.—The arrival of Baron von Scheel-Plessen from St. Petersburgh on the 17th, created an important Ministerial crisis, caused by a difference in the principles held by the King, the Government, and the Privy Council. The difference was settled on Monday. The Berlingske Tidende of that day expresses doubts as regards the authenticity of the current statement relative to the Russian proposal for the settlement of the Dano-German question. The Dagbladet of Monday says:—

"The proposed Schleswig-Holstein solution is the very last the nation will accept. The people will never suffer the sacrifice of Schleswig and the Danish right. The King exists for the sake of the people. not the people for that of the King. No Ministry recommending the formation of a State of Schleswig-Holstein can stand."

THE DANISH DUCHIES.—A public meeting took place at Tondern on Tuesday, at which 5000 inhabitants of Western Schleswig were present. Resolutions in favour of the union of Schleswig and Holstein were passed amid great enthusiasm. The report in the German papers that the Schleswig islands have sent a deputation to the King of Prussia, to protest against the division of Schleswig, is contradicted. On the contrary, a deputation from those islands has had an audience of King Christian IX., and solicited his Majesty to maintain the connection of the islands with Denmark. The Duke of Augustenburg, on his journey through the districts of the Dittmarshes and the Marshes on the 21st, was everywhere received with the greatest enthusiasm. The town of Heide was illuminated, and a torchlight procession took place in the evening. He was received at Lunden with great ceremony by a large number of the inhabitants of Schleswig. A flotilla of gunboats arrived off Keitum last week, when the officer commanding the Danish troops landed a detachment and surrounded the town. Seven gentlemen known for their German sympathies were arrested and sent off in a steamer to Copenhagen. The Mayor was suspended for not having displayed sufficient energy. Keitum has been declared in a state of siege. The Nord-Deutsche Flensburger Zeitung of Friday publishes a decree of the chief civil authorities, ordering that German shall in future be the principal medium of education at the High School of Hadersleben. Instruction in Danish is only to be given six hours weekly.

SAXONY.—The First Chamber in the sitting of Tuesday unanimously adopted the declaration of the Chamber of Deputies opposing the division of Schleswig without the consent of the people.

FRANKFORT.—In the sitting of the Federal Diet on Thursday, the representative of the Grand Duchy of Oldenburg, stated the claims of Oldenburg to the Duchies of Schleswig-Holstein. He decidedly protested against the claims of the Duke of Augustenburg, and communicated to the Diet the renunciation of the Emperor of Russia of his rights in favour of Oldenburg. The subject was finally referred to a committee to be reported upon.

PRUSSIA.—It was announced on Wednesday that Prussia has rejected the English proposals relative to the line of demarcation in Schleswig, and has rejected the arbitration of any Power represented at the Conference. She will not recognise the decision of any arbitrator as binding, but will take it into consideration. She will accept a prolongation of the armistice, but not for a period of less than two months. It is believed in Berlin that hostilities will be resumed on Monday. The semi-official Nord Deutsche Zeitung of Thursday says:—

"Advices received here from Schleswig state that the troops are again moving northwards to take up their position. Thus we are again on the eve of war. A two months' prolongation of the armistice has been rejected, and the line of the Schlei is maintained as the utmost concession."

The semi-official Provinzial Correspondenz of Wednesday publishes an article headed "War or Peace," which concludes thus:—

"If the proposals of England in reference to the line of demarcation were at all acceptable, the Emperor of the French would be the only arbitrator possible, he having acquired the right to so distinguished an honour by the attitude he has hitherto held. But Prussia maintains her view that a safe basis on which to establish a line of demarcation can only be determined by consulting the inhabitants. The proposal of England seems to find some support from Austria, who wishes to prevent her from taking part in the war. England has declared that on the renewal of hostilities she will place herself with her fleet at the side of Denmark. Hence a prolongation of the armistice has this time a special importance, since possibly it may prove a question of the commencement of a general European war. While England insists upon a prolongation of the suspension of hostilities, Prussia wishes to bring about a real armistice for a long period, settled on precise conditions, and with a mutual engagement to give four weeks' notice of cessation. It is hoped that the meeting of Count Rechberg and Herr von Bismark, as also the personal interview of the two Sovereigns, may lead to a closer union on the question of the armistice."

AUSTRIA.—The semi-official Vienna papers of Wednesday are in favour of the arbitration in the Dano-Germanic question being submitted to the Emperor Napoleon. The Emperor of Austria arrived at Carlsbad on Wednesday morning. The King of Prussia, accompanied by Count von Bismark and his military suite, immediately paid a visit to the Emperor, which the latter returned. In the afternoon the King of Prussia entertained his Imperial Majesty at dinner. A circular Note was addressed by the Austrian Cabinet on the 14th inst. to its diplomatic agents abroad, in order to refute the exaggerated and erroneous allegations to which the meeting of the Emperors of Austria and Russia and the King of Prussia might give rise. The following is an abstract of this Note:—

"The Austrian representives are enjoined formally to deny that their Majesties have any definite object in view, or intend reciprocally to adopt any preconcerted programme. The two Emperors will only exchange their views and ideas upon the questions which at present occupy the Cabinets. Count Rechberg recommends the diplomatic agents energetically to deny every rumour of the existence of any reservation in reference to a Holy Alliance, or of the slightest hostile feeling towards any Power whatever. With regard to the visit of the Emperor Francis Joseph to the King of Prussia at Carlsbad, the note observes that although, under other circumstances, it would be explained as a simple act of politeness, yet now, while the arms of Austria and Prussia are united in the interests of Germany, nothing is more natural than the wish of the Emperor to discuss with his august ally what measures might accelerate a pacific solution of the Dano-Germanic conflict."

BAVARIA.—The Emperor and Empress of Russia and the young Grand Duchess arrived at Kissingen on Tuesday evening. The Emperor and Empress of Austria and the King of Bavaria subsequently arrived, and the King of Prussia is expected to follow with the Grand Duke of Mecklenburg, the Duke of Oldenburg, the hereditary Prince of Wurtemburg, Prince William of Baden, the Duke of Coburg-Gotha, the Duke of Saxe-Altenburg, and Prince Leopold of Coburg-Kohary.

ITALY.—The Italian Senate on Tuesday adopted the Bill for the equalisation of the land-tax by 95 to 55 votes. General Garibaldi has arrived at the Baths of Ischia from Caprera in the Duke of Sutherland's yacht Undine, accompanied by his son and 10 other persons. He is suffering much from his wound and from rheumatic affections.

RUSSIA.—It is reported that the Russian fleet has been ordered to the Baltic. The Journal de St. Pétersbourg states that the harbour of Sebastopol is being cleared of the hulls of the ships sunk at the entrance of the port at the beginning of the Crimean war. The same journal adds that in three years the railroad from Moscow to Koursk will be extended to Sebastopol.

CHINA.—A despatch from Shanghai of May 7 states that Major Gordon and the Futai have thrice assaulted Chang-Chow-Foo, and have been each time repulsed with great loss. The city still holds out.

UNITED STATES.—On the morning of the 3d General Grant made a general attack on Lee's defences north of the Chickahominy, with the intention of forcing the passage of the river. He was temporarily successful at some points, but was compelled to abandon his attempt to capture the main works, with a loss of 5000 to 6000 killed and wounded, and several hundred prisoners. At the termination of the battle General Grant held a line in advance of the position he occupied at the commencement. In the evening of the same day the Confederates attacked Smith's brigade on Grant's left, but after half an hour's furious fighting returned to their entrenchments. On the 4th the Confederates attacked Generals Hancock, Wright, and Smith, but were everywhere repulsed. General Hancock holds a line within forty yards of the Confederates. On the 5th and 6th the Confederates renewed their attacks on Grant's lines, but were each time repulsed. On the 7th the Confederates still held the battery at Columbia on the Mississippi. The Federal loss during the week was estimated at 10,000 men. No important movement occurred for the next two days, but the wounded of the two armies were collected, and the dead buried under a flag of truce. The latest news states that General Grant has abandoned the attempt to force Lee's Chickahominy line, and is making a fresh combination for the capture of Richmond. It is said that he has moved his left from General Lee's front, and that a portion of his troops have crossed to the south bank of the Chickahominy at Despatch Station. Rumours were current of a movement by Grant to the south bank of the James River, and that he intends to besiege General Lee's works on the Chickahominy. The 100-day men from the Western States have been sent to the front. There are again rumours through Confederate channels that Gen. Lee will shortly detach a portion of his army for a demonstration against Washington. The Federal General Hunter has defeated a small Confederate force under General Jones, near Staunton, Virginia. General Jones being killed, the command retired to Waynesboro', leaving in the hands of General Hunter six cannon and a large quantity of stores. Confederate official despatches contradict this statement, and assert that only a portion of General Jones's forces were in the battle, and that the retirement to Waynesborough was conducted in good order. General Sherman is on the railroad at Ackworth Station, having full possession forward to within six miles of Marietta. Despatches of the 6th report General Johnston's head-quarters at Marietta; his left was under General Polk; General Hood commanded the centre and General Hardee the right. Confederate batteries on both sides of the Mississippi at Greensville completely blockade the river; and have destroyed or captured four gunboats and seven transports. A fleet of gunboats has been sent to dislodge them, but accounts, up to the 5th, the Confederates still held their ground. The Confederate forces under General John Morgan, in Kentucky, occupied Mount Stirling, Paris, Georgetown, Cythiana, Falmouth, and Williamstown on the 9th. The two last are within 30 miles of Cincinnati. On the 10th they burnt the railway depot and plundered the stores at Lexington. Several small towns have also been plundered, and the Union citizens and farmers deprived of their houses and cattle; no damage has been done to the railways. An attack upon Cincinnati is apprehended, and troops are concentrating for the defence of Atlanta, Georgia. The Navy Department has authorised the contradiction of the reported fight between the Monitors and Confederate ironclads in James River on the 1st. The Confederates, in launches, from Fort M'Allister, have captured the Federal steamer Water Witch, in Ossabaw Sound, Georgia. The Baltimore Convention has unanimously nominated Mr. Lincoln for President, and Mr. Andrew Johnson for Vice President. Mr. Lincoln has accepted the nomination, and has approved the amendment to the Constitution prohibiting slavery. General Fremont has resigned his commission in the army, and accepted the nomination for the Presidency, on the ground that he believes the re-election of Mr. Lincoln would be fatal to the country. General Cochrane has accepted the nomination for the Vice Presidency. Major-General Buell has resigned his commission in the Volunteer service, but retains the rank of Colonel in the regular army. A meeting in honour of General Grant was held at Union Square on the 4th, and was attended by from 5000 to 10,000 persons. The resolutions expressed gratitude to General Grant for his achievements, thanks to General Sherman and the navy for their co-operation, and the determination to keep the army efficiently and promptly reinforced. Secretary Chase has arrived in New York to negotiate a temporary loan. On the 7th Mr. Hooker, of the Committee of Ways and Means, introduced a Bill authorising a new loan of 400,000,000 dols., 6 per cent. bonds, redeemable within 40 years, for support of the Government during the next fiscal year. Congress has struck out the money commutation clause from the Enrolment Act. The steamer Georgina Maccew has been driven ashore at Wilmington. A steamer (name unknown) has been destroyed while entering Charleston. The New York steamer Berkshire has been destroyed by fire at Esops Island, eight miles below Rondout. The fire was caused by the explosion of a lamp. The steamer had about 150 passengers, 40 or 50 of whom are supposed to be lost. The boat was built two weeks ago, and was burnt to the water's edge.

MEXICO.—The Emperor and Empress Maximilian have arrived at Vera Cruz. The pacification of the country is almost completed. A series of encounters has taken place, which resulted in favour of the French. A brilliant advantage has been obtained by Colonel Dupin at San Antonio. The Mexicans amounted to 200, that of the French to 12. Juarez is wandering about the country, but is unable to raise any town into a centre of resistance.

Parliament.

HOUSE OF LORDS.

FRIDAY.—Burial Service.—In reply to a question from EBURY, the Archbishop of CANTERBURY said that a great many of the clergy were averse to any change in the burial service; he therefore did not feel authorised to propose any legislation the subject. The Church Services (Apocrypha) Bill, the object of which was to allow clergymen of the Church of England to substitute other portions of the Scriptures for the lessons out of the Apocrypha, was withdrawn after a short discussion. On the report of the Penal Servitude Acts Amendment Bill, Earl of AIRLIE complained that it would prevent many men from emigrating. Some debate ensued, and ultimately the report was received. The Universities Committee Act Amendment Bill, the Ecclesiastical Courts Registers (Ireland) Bill, and the Improvement of Land Act Bill were reported, with amendments. The Chancellor of Anchors Bill was read a third time and passed.

MONDAY.—The House did not sit, the day being the anniversary of the Queen's accession.

TUESDAY.—British Subjects in America.—The Earl of ELLESMERE called attention to the case of a Montreal merchant named Levy, who, having arrived at Boston in a British vessel, in March last, was seized by the Federal States authorities before he left the ship, and subsequently tampered with and imprisoned. No cause was assigned for his arrest, and it was not until he had been confined ten days that he was liberated. He asked whether any information on the subject had reached the Government, and whether reparation had been demanded of, or voluntarily offered by, the Federal Government.—Earl RUSSELL replied that the latest despatch from Lord Lyons contained no reference to the case, but he would make inquiry into the matter.—The Admiralty Loans Works Bill was read a third time and passed.

Summary Procedure (Scotland) Bill passed through committee.—The Lord CHANCELLOR moved the second reading of the Attorneys and Solicitors Remuneration Bill. The effect of the present mode of paying for legal services had, he said, a direct tendency to encourage the unnecessary length and verbosity of legal documents, the cost of preparing a deed being calculated by the number of folios. As an attorney is not allowed to make a contract with a client as to payment for direct services, the remuneration was obtained in an indirect manner, by long bills, long pleadings, and a repetition of unnecessary writing. The Bill proposed to enable attorneys to make a specific contract with the client, and to take security for costs to be incurred. It also proposed to amend the present law as to the purchase of reversions, and the practice of the Court of Chancery with regard to property acquired by a woman after her marriage. Another provision of the Bill abolished the difference in the mode of distributing real and personal property among creditors after the death of the debtor. Power was also given by the Act, to any person wishing to dispose of his property by will, to make the Court of Chancery his trustee for receiving and distributing it.—Lord BROUGHAM, though he saw some objections to portions of the Bill, believed it contained some valuable provisions.—Lord ST. LEONARDS opposed the measure, and contended that it would destroy all confidence between attorney and client and strike the relations that ought to subsist between husband and wife.—Lord CRANWORTH thought the measure ought not to have included so many subjects having no connection with each other, and suggested that the Bill should be referred to a Select Committee.—Lord CRANWORTH concurred in this suggestion, though he gave the measure a qualified approval. The Bill was then read a second time and referred to a Select Committee.—The Expenses of Seats (House of Commons) Bill was read a second time.—The Privy Council Appeals Act Amendment Bill, the Lunacy Acts Amendment Act Amendment Bill, the Ecclesiastical Courts and Registries (Ireland) Bill, the Chain Cables and Anchors Bill, the Improvement of Land Act (1864) Bill, and the Naval Prize Acts Repeal Bill were read a third time and passed. The Banking Copartnership Bill was read a second time.

TUESDAY.—The Conference.—Earl RUSSELL said that last week, in reply to the Earl of Derby, he stated that in a few days the Conference would either come to an agreement or negotiations be broken off and hostilities recommenced. He regretted that the latter alternative appeared to be most probable; but on Monday next he would lay upon the table all the papers and protocols connected with the Conference and its proceedings, and at the same time make a statement to the House on the subject.—Lord BROUGHAM laid upon the table a Bill for the better prevention of Bribery at Elections. The Bill provided that the act of bribery should be punishable with imprisonment and not fine.—The Bishop of OXFORD moved the second reading of the Facilities for Divine Service in Collegiate Schools Bill, the object of which is to authorise the bishops to license the master, or one of the masters of incorporated schools, to perform Divine Service in the schools or in the parish church, with the consent of the incumbent, until chapels to be attached to the schools could be built.—The Earl of SHAFTESBURY regarded the Bill as affording facilities for practices which might become objectionable and lead to commotion and disturbance. He moved, as an amendment, that the Bill be read a second time on that day three months.—The Bill was also opposed by the Lord CHANCELLOR and Earl GREY. Ultimately, the amendment was withdrawn, and the second reading of the Bill was agreed to.—The Beerhouses (Ireland) Bill was read a second time.—The Banking Copartnership Bill and the Vacating of Seats (House of Commons) Bill passed through committee.

FRIDAY.—Convocation.—Lord HOUGHTON gave notice that on Tuesday he would ask a question regarding the powers of the Convocation of the province of Canterbury.—Brazilian Slave Trade.—Lord BROUGHAM gave notice that on Tuesday he would call attention to and express his high approbation of the course pursued by the Government of Brazil in totally abolishing the slave trade.—Royal Academy.—Earl of STANHOPE called attention to the present position of the Royal Academy, and asked what further steps the Government intended taking in reference to it. [Left sitting.]

HOUSE OF COMMONS.

FRIDAY.—The Ashantee War.—On the order for going into committee of supply, Mr. J. HAY moved a resolution "that her Majesty's Government, in landing forces on the Gold Coast for the purpose of waging war against the King of Ashantee, without making any sufficient provision for preserving the health of the troops to be employed there, have incurred a grave responsibility, and that this House laments the want of foresight which has caused so large a loss of life." He contended that no proper arrangements had been made for the proper accommodation of British troops in such a climate; that the Gladiator, which was to be sent to bring them home, was altogether unsuitable for such a service, and that the great mortality that had occurred was to be traced to the lamentable want of foresight on the part of the War-office in equipping the expedition.—The Marquis of HARTINGTON described the steps that had been taken to provide for the comfort and safety of the men, and contended that the staff of medical officers, and the supply of medical and hospital stores, were amply sufficient for a force of 1400 men. He had read a great many despatches from the Governor at the station, and from the officer commanding the troops, and he could not find that any complaint had been made to bear out the charges embodied in the resolution.—Mr H. SEYMER, Mr. B. COCHRANE, and Mr. LIDDELL supported the motion, Lord A. CHURCHILL and Mr. C. FORTESCUE opposed it.—Sir J. PAKINGTON said that the question before the House was not the policy of the Ashantee war, but whether the Government had adopted those precautions and taken care for the security of the troops which it was their bounden duty to have. He considered it proved by the papers that they had not done so, and should therefore vote for the motion.—Lord C. PAGET described the measures taken by the Admiralty for the removal of the troops, showing that there had been no delay on their part.—General PEEL said he was unable to understand from the papers or from the debate whether the responsibility rested on the Colonial Office or the War Office. Were these things to happen and nobody to be responsible?—Mr. CARDWELL vindicated the part which the Colonial Office had taken in the matter, and contended that the expedition had been provided with [illegible] stores and comforts.—Mr. COLLIER and Sir G. BOWYER supported the motion.—Mr. PEACOCKE opposed it.—Lord PALMERSTON said that although the Opposition had succeeded in their object to express censure, there could be no doubt that the motion was a party one and that the object was to censure the Government. He maintained that the conduct pursued in the recent war had been completely justified, and that no case had been made out to establish a charge of culpable negligence against any department of the Government. He trusted, therefore, that the House would not give its assent to a resolution founded on untruth and supported by accusations which were unfounded. He reminded the House that it was a Government of which the Earl of Derby was a leading member which had undertaken the protection of the native tribes on the Gold Coast.—Mr. DISRAELI said that Lord Palmerston was not correct when he said the protectorate of the native tribes had been undertaken by a Government of which Lord Derby was a member, as the obligation had arisen so long ago as 1826. Nor was he correct when he declared that the statements made by Sir John Hay were unfounded. The disasters which had occurred were patent to the world, and it was the constitutional duty of the Opposition to challenge the conduct of the Government for having caused it.—Lord PALMERSTON explained that the protectorate had been resumed under the Government of Sir R. Peel, of which the Earl of Derby was a member.—Mr DISRAELI said that a resolution of the House of Commons had sanctioned it. The House then divided, when the numbers were—For the resolution, 326; Against it, 233; Majority for the Government, 7. The result was loudly cheered by the Ministerialists, and counter-cheered by the Opposition. The House then went into committee of supply pro forma, but immediately afterwards resumed. The Report on Supply was brought up and agreed to.

MONDAY.—Law of Partnership.—In reply to Mr. BRIGHT, Mr M. GIBSON said it was the intention of the Government to introduce a measure for the amendment of the law of partnership. The Conference.—Mr. DISRAELI asked whether the statement which had appeared in the papers of that day, that the German Plenipotentiaries had declared at the Conference on Saturday that if hostilities were renewed between Germany and Denmark, Germany would resort to privateering, was correct. He also asked whether, if the Conference should be broken up on Wednesday, it was to be inferred that hostilities would be renewed on the 27th, and whether, in the event of the Conference concluding its business on Wednesday or any other day, the protocols would be laid upon the table of the House.—The CHANCELLOR of the EXCHEQUER, in the absence of the Premier, said that it would be more satisfactory to have the questions put on the paper in the usual way.—Mr. DISRAELI was unable to agree with this opinion. In the present critical circumstances he considered that he was justified in putting the questions without formal notice.—Mr. OSBORNE said that, remembering how we had drifted into war with Russia, and looking at the perilous position in which the country was placed at the present moment, he hoped some member of the Government would explain what degree of significance attached to the words uttered by Earl Russell in another place, that the Channel fleet was fully prepared for any service it might be called upon to undertake. He wished to know whether this was merely an idle threat, or an intimation on the part of her Majesty's Government of their intention to commit the suicidal act of plunging the country into war with Germany.—The CHANCELLOR of the EXCHEQUER said he was sorry that any inconvenience should arise from the position in which the House was placed, but, as no notice of the questions had been given to any member of the Government, he thought it would be to the interest of the public service that notice should be given.—Mr. S. FITZGERALD hoped the House would insist upon receiving an answer to the questions of Mr. Disraeli and Mr. Osborne.—Mr. D. GRIFFITH deprecated the continued reticence of Ministers, but attributed much of their unwillingness to be communicative to the fact that there were divisions in the Cabinet.—Lord J. MANNERS was of opinion that the country would be dissatisfied if the Government were to persist in withholding information from the House. If, as appeared to be the case, no one could answer questions with reference to the Conference but the chief of the Government, he thought that noble lord ought to be in his place. [Lord Palmerston here entered the House from behind the Speaker's chair, and was received with cheers from the Ministerial benches.] Lord J. Manners then repeated, for the information of Lord Palmerston, the substance of the questions put by Mr. Disraeli and Mr. Osborne.—Lord PALMERSTON replied, first to the question of Mr. Osborne, and said that Earl Russell had used the words in reference to the fleet in a general sense; in the same sense as the Duke of Wellington had declared that the British fleet was ready to go anywhere or meet any contingency that might arise. As to the revival of hostilities, the armistice expired on Saturday next, and if the belligerent parties did not in the interim agree to some arrangement for the restoration of peace, or for a boundary, or for a prolongation of the armistice, hostilities would no doubt be renewed. Whenever the negotiations were brought to a close it would be the duty of her Majesty's Government to lay the proceedings of the Conference before Parliament without delay.—Mr. BRIGHT reminded the noble lord that great anxiety was felt throughout the country on this subject, and that it would afford much gratification to the public if he could announce that the armistice was to be again prolonged.—Lord PALMERSTON was aware that much interest was naturally felt on the grave questions at issue before the Conference. Still, he was bound to repeat that his tongue was tied as to details, but he assured the House that her Majesty's Ministers were labouring incessantly to bring the belligerents to an agreement, and if they failed he believed they would be able to show that it was not their fault. The Government Annuities, &c., Bill was read a third time and passed.—The CHANCELLOR of the EXCHEQUER acknowledging the obligation he owed to the select committee to whom the measure had been referred, and Mr. S. FITZGERALD and other members expressing their entire approval of the Bill in its present shape.—On the motion for the second reading of the Gaols Bill, Sir G. GREY said that as some misapprehension existed with reference to the 4th clause, the object of which was not to force Roman Catholic chaplains into gaols against the desire of the magistrates, but merely to give the Secretary of State for the Home Department the power to amend prison rules, he was prepared to withdraw it.—Mr. ALDERSLEY was of opinion that no legislation to amend the present law relating to gaols could be satisfactory which did not include some definition of hard labour and a schedule of rules for gaols, and which did not provide for all gaols being gradually adapted to the separate system, and for a uniform and classified treatment of all prisoners. As, however, Sir G. Grey had expressed his intention to eliminate the 4th clause, he did not intend to oppose the measure at its present stage.—Mr. NEWDEGATE moved, as an amendment, that the Bill be read a second time that day three months. He said that it violated the principle of local self-government and failed to provide any adequate security or to locate responsibility to guard its application and render it an instrument effective for good. The definition of the rules should not be left with the Home Office, but should be laid down and enacted by Parliament itself, or the Home Secretary might on his own responsibility appoint Roman Catholic chaplains in prisons without consulting the justices, who would then be left to incur the odium of levying a tax to defray the cost.—Mr. BARROW seconded the amendment, resting his opposition to the measure mainly upon its [illegible].—Sir J. PAKINGTON approved of the Bill as a necessary measure, and thought the Secretary of State for the Home Department had acted wisely in withdrawing the 4th clause.—Mr. MAGUIRE contended that Roman Catholic prisoners had as much right to the administrations of a clergyman of their own religion as the Protestant prisoners had to theirs.—Mr. WHALLEY opposed the Bill.—Mr. WALPOLE, Mr. MAITLAND, Mr. HARDY, and Mr. SERJEANT ESTHWAITE supported the motion of Sir G. Grey, on which, while willing to carry out the Bill, he was not willing to admit that there was the slightest foundation for the apprehensions entertained by Mr. Newdegate. On a division, the amendment was negatived by 110 to 47, and the Bill was read a second time.—The adjourned debate on the third reading of the Colleges of Peace Bill was resumed by Sir J. TROLLOPE, who moved as an amendment that the Bill be read a third time that day three months. He contended that the Bill was an unnecessary interference on the part of the Government with the existing system.—The CHANCELLOR of the EXCHEQUER defended the Bill, and justified the omission of the metropolis from its operation. After some discussion the House divided, when the amendment was carried against the Government by 127 to 125. The Bill was therefore lost. The Railway Construction Facilities Bill passed through committee.—Sir C. O'LOGHLEN moved the second reading of the Railway Travelling (Ireland) Bill, the object of which was to compel railway companies in Ireland to run one train a day each way on Sundays.—Mr. BLAKE moved as an amendment that the Bill be read a second time that day three months.—The Bill was opposed by Lord NAAS, Mr. WHITESIDE, and others, and supported by Major GAVIN, Mr. O'REILLY, and Sir P. O'BRIEN. On a division the amendment was carried by 47 to 41. The Bill was therefore lost. The Railway Order Confirmation Bill and the Pier and Harbour Orders Confirmation Bill passed through Committee. The Lunacy (Scotland) Bill was read a second time.

TUESDAY.—Court of Chancery (Ireland) Bill.—At the morning sitting the House went into committee on this Bill, and agreed to several clauses. On clause 12, which provided for the appointment of one chief clerk, Mr. WHITESIDE moved that the Chairman leave the chair. He criticised the Bill at great length, and charged the Government with taking advantage of the absence of Irish members to press the measure forward at a morning sitting, and carry it through the committee by a coup de main.—The ATTORNEY GENERAL for IRELAND defended the course which he had adopted, and said that of late years no measure of law reform had passed through Parliament which had not been discussed at a morning sitting. The debate was protracted until four o'clock, when the committee divided, and the motion of Mr. Whiteside was carried against the Government by 42 to 41.—On the resumption of business at 6 o'clock, Sir C. O'LOGHLEN said that he had by mistake voted in the wrong lobby on the Court of Chancery (Ireland) Bill. His vote was needed to the majority, and he asked that the division list might be amended, by placing his name with the "Noes" instead of with the "Ayes."—The SPEAKER said that he could not give the honourable and learned gentleman any relief, as the chairman of committees had already, and properly, declared the result of the division. The Ballot.—Mr BERKELEY moved the following resolution:—"That, as a general election is impending, and it is notorious that our electoral system is defective and corrupt in practice, and as we have no law which can put down the intimidation of voters, nor prevent bribery, it is therefore expedient that a fair trial should be given to the vote by ballot." He urged that the present law was wholly unequal to deal with the patent evils and abuses of our electoral system, and that, as a general election could not be far distant, it would be wise and expedient to try the experiment of the ballot.—Mr LOCKE seconded the motion.—Lord PALMERSTON opposed it, and commented upon the circumstance that the feeling out of doors in favour of the ballot was on the decline. He objected to it because it was founded on an erroneous assertion, as it dealt with the right of voting as if it were a private right divested of responsibility, instead of a public trust. He was opposed to the ballot also because he did not believe it would remedy the evils against which it would be directed, and because secret voting was essentially un-English. On a division the motion was negatived by 212 to 123.—Mr. HENNESSY moved the two following resolutions:—"That this House observes with regret that the agricultural population of Ireland are rapidly leaving the country; 2, That this House trusts that her Majesty's Government will direct their attention to the subject, with a view of devising some means by which the Irish agricultural population may be induced to devote their capital and labour to reproductive employment at home."—Mr MAGUIRE seconded the motion.—Sir R. PEEL admitted that the drain of emigration from Ireland during the last few years was considerable. At the same time it should be remembered, that when the population of the country was little more than four millions, the Parliament of Ireland had expressed its regret that greater facilities were not afforded for the emigration of the people. Since the year 1845 the condition of the country had undoubtedly been much depressed, but signs of revival were at length apparent, and a greater breadth of land was now under cultivation than in the year 1845. The present rate of progress would, he hoped, be maintained, and he saw no reason for indulging in gloomy prognostications of the future.—Mr. MAGUIRE said that a law to protect the tenant and give him compensation for his improvements would be hailed as a great boon by the Irish people.—After some remarks by Sir P. O'BRIEN, Mr. MONSELL, Mr. M'MAHON, and Mr. BLAKE, Lord ATHLUMNEY said there was no doubt that the small farmer was beginning to discover that he could not keep his place in the country. He did not believe it was not in the power of Parliament to arrest the tide of emigration.—Mr. WHITESIDE said that Parliament might adopt measures to check, if not to avert emigration; and some measures would no doubt ere this have been matured had a Government been in office that would have been awake to its duties and to a sense of its responsibility.—Lord PALMERSTON said that so long as labour was better remunerated in England and in America, so long would the people of Ireland seek employment in those places. What he lamented was not that the Irish people were emigrating; but that in consequence of a combination of circumstances, and a state of things which had now in great part passed away, the country was not in a position to offer inducements to its own children to remain at home. Now, however, the condition of the country was improving, and he hoped that with the introduction of manufactures, and the improved system of cultivating the land, the material prosperity of the people would continue to increase. He suggested that Mr. Hennessy should rest satisfied with the debate that had taken place, and not press the motion to a division.—Mr. HENNESSY thought that at all events the latter paragraph of the resolution ought to be accepted by the House.—Sir G. GREY then moved the previous question, which was supported by Mr. WALPOLE and Mr. MONSELL, and opposed by Mr. LEFROY and Sir P. O'BRIEN.—On a division, the previous question was carried by 80 to 52.—Sir F. SMITH moved an address to the Crown, to appoint a commission to inquire into the condition as to pay and allowances of the Remounts Quartermasters of her Majesty's service, with the view to place these officers, should it seem expedient, on a better footing.—The Marquis of HARTINGTON assented to the motion, on condition that the words "with the view to place these officers on a better footing," be omitted.—Sir F. SMITH consenting, the motion as amended was agreed to.—The Accidents Compensation Act Amendment Bill passed through committee.
